MAKING VOTERS.

In states and cities where it is necessary to register before each election there are always frantic efforts being made to obtain a large registration. Upon the registration depends the number who can vote, so there is reason for the urging. It is always desirable to have as large a participation as possible in every election.

Interest isn't concerned with participation. There are requirements, however, which must be complied with before persons can be made voters, and there are restrictions concerning the right to vote following removal from one town or city to another. But once a voter, except such rights are forfeited or there is a change of residence, a person is always a voter in this state.

While registration is being urged in other states similar emphasis can be brought to bear in Connecticut upon the importance of being made voters. There are always those who are becoming of age and those who through length of residence are entitled to be placed on the voting list. The right of suffrage is unfortunately exercised by too great a number. The delay about being made voters and many neglect to vote after they have the franchise.

Opportunity to be made voters is made available at certain times. It is necessary to take advantage of those named days for the non voter, who is eligible to become a voter, to participate in the coming town election in October and the national and state elections in November. Procrastination has caused many a person to be sorry for not getting what he wanted and preventing him from registering a vote on election day. The best way to overcome this is to get your application to become a voter into the hands of the registrars of voters and then follow it up by being sure a vote on the days fixed for that purpose. It is necessary to act early. Those who wait one day beyond the stipulated date are as bad off as if they had never thought of it.

It is always well to bear in mind that there is no greater mistake made than in assuming that one more vote doesn't make no difference.

ANOTHER BACKS COOLIDGE.

While the democratic Springfield Republican was undergoing a change of name and reaching the conclusion that the only one of the candidates for presidency entitled to its support for the good of the country is Coolidge, the same conclusion is being reached by the democratic Boston Post. These are both papers in the state where the president has held many offices and which have had the opportunity to know first hand of his worth at the nation's helm.

From their statements they are not supporting him because he is a republican or because he is a Massachusetts man. They have given careful consideration to the merits of the respective candidates and they find that his qualifications place him head and shoulders above the others and in acknowledgment thereof they are not afraid to give him their backing even though he is a republican.

The Boston Post in its announcement made a high tribute to the president and declared in supporting him, "It is more than our duty, it is our privilege. American needs these old New England virtues which were born and bred in our president. He is the best we have to give to the nation."

Democratic newspapers are not disposed to take this kind of an attitude. They may recognize the weaknesses of their own candidate and the strength of the opponent, and govern themselves accordingly without acknowledging it and changing allegiance. The Post frankly declares that its support is being given to the man and not to the party. It maintains that there are no handicaps attached to Calvin Coolidge, however, and he deserves to win and in reference to the talents and personal charms of Davis and sincerity of La Follette it declares that Calvin Coolidge is as good a democrat as the one and as honest a liberal as the other.

The departure from partisan ranks by these newspapers has its meaning. It discloses that they are concerned for the welfare of the nation and that they are impressed by the Coolidge policies and conduct and that they see the need of having such policies continued for the next four years. It is not a new attitude, but carries a deeper significance coming from such papers.

CRIME PREVENTION.

A decision has been reached by the parents of Richard Loeb which they regard as too long delayed. Possibly if they had put it in operation a long time ago they would be less in the public eye today. They have reached it now with a view to relieving the future of any such possibilities as far as their family is concerned. If we are to judge by their action once is too much.

It does not appear from the facts which have been brought out in this notorious case that the parents were cognizant of what was going on. Like many others they have awakened to their responsibilities too late. They have seen the error of pampering their elder son just because they were rich and had the money to lavish on him and have quickly come to the conclusion that no such mistake will be made with the others.

The result is that the convicted slayer will be the last of the Loebs to lead a life of idleness, if we can judge by the report which is attributed to that family. "Too much idle time" is what they consider put one son behind prison bars and to prevent any such undesirable result with the other they have mapped out a schedule of work that will eliminate any possibility of the taunt of "idle rich" being hurled at him.

It is an old maxim that something should be provided for idle hands to do. It is in keeping with such a policy that the playgrounds movement has obtained such a hold. When children are engaged in wholesome play, when they have something to do that is not burdensome, when their time is kept occupied they are prevented from getting into that mischief which means serious consequences.

Had Loeb been held to the programme which seems to be arranged for his brother his associations with Leopold would have been of a far different character if any at all. The Loeb family has taken a lesson from the murder which many another might follow in the important work of crime prevention. The best results are gained by not waiting until too late.

HIGHWAY TREES.

Recently the appointment has been made of Jens Jensen, of the Art Institute of Chicago, as landscape architect for the Lincoln highway, that great cross country thoroughfare which is so extensively traveled.

In connection with the extensive scheme of tree planting which he has laid out he directs attention to the fact that trees have character the same as individuals and accentuates the fact that consideration should be given to this when setting out trees along the highways.

Probably there is not much consideration given to this phase of the matter. There is a recognition of the difference between the stately elm and the shapely maple, between the popular and the sycamore and between the oak and the birch. There are those who like one and those who like another, and it is probable in the setting out of trees that likes and dislikes, rather than what actually suits the locality, are followed to a large extent.

The selection of a landscape architect for the Lincoln highway assures a most attractive roadway in the years to come. Modern, broad and well constructed it is now a great aid to motorists. With the beautification planned it will be more delightful than ever.

It isn't necessary for such work to be restricted to transcontinental highways, however, but it is desirable that it should feature more of the improved roads whether of national importance or not. The character of the trees means much in such a scheme but the value of tree-lined roads should not be overlooked just because there isn't the services of a landscape architect available.

PEACE AND WAR.

There are times when the efforts and the demands for peace seem to be having their effect. After a severe storm there is a lull. There have been long stretches when leading nations have not been involved in conflicts, but there have been few when all of the smaller ones have been quiet within and peacefully disposed with their neighbors. No sooner does the time seem to be reached when a new order of things appears to be in order than trouble clouds the horizon and the world seems aflame again.

Just at the present time there is plenty of conflict but for the most part it is internal. Probably the only one that gives any indications of involving others is that in China and there the influence of the leading nations should result in the prevention of any international conflict.

There are, however, the revolt in Brazil, the trouble in Chile, the insurrection in Honduras and some warlike demonstrations on the part of the Georgians to break up the monotony of the peaceful conditions. It is a bit unusual not to include Mexico in this list but it is gratifying to note that Bolivia and Paraguay have recently agreed to arbitrate their boundary differences.

Much, if not all, of the trouble that is resulting in bloodshed at the present time might be adjusted by admitting and dealing with the facts as they are. Perhaps it will be done in time. It is a goal worth working for, but it is quite evident that the right spirit does not prevail today.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This is New England week. Make the most of it.

The man on the corner says: The weather man seems disposed to have the strawhat shelved.

It is needless to ask what the Franks family think of the verdict in the case against their boy's murderers.

It all depends on September whether the straw hat law gets full respect today or two weeks from today.

It will soon be time for those who have won peace plan prizes to organize a secret society among themselves.

Those who have been hanged in Illinois without having gotten the benefit of a defense on their age have no chance of a protest.

It is quite evident that those who urge more walking and those who advocate buying a car are not employed by the same concern.

Defense day took well in most New England cities, as well as throughout the country. Perhaps Norwich will measure up better another year.

Now there is an effort underway to raise the five cent limit on a cup of coffee. That sounds as if the bootleggers had inherited the business.

Some railroad crossings are being eliminated and quite a number of those individuals who show no respect for the danger at those points.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Kerosene will remove rust from scissors.

Dry silver polish will brighten the brass bed.

Cold tea will act as a fertilizer for house plants.

Choose a cool day for airing the pillows and bolsters.

Use cheesecloth for dusting. It will absorb the dirt and is readily washed out.

Choose cabbage by weight rather than size.

A pinch of salt adds more flavor to the coffee.

Brush the upper crust of the pie with fresh milk to make it shiny and brown.

Stand the potatoes in hot water for a few minutes before baking if you wish them to cook quickly.

The coarse stalks of celery need not be thrown into the garbage, but added to soup will give a fine flavor.

Sew a strong loop on each corner of the mattress and see what a great help it will be in turning.

A teaspoonful of vinegar added to the lard used for frying will prevent the article from absorbing too much fat.

Wet the knife with cold water when cutting lemon meringue pie, and the meringue will not stick and pull from the slice.

Gold furniture should be dusted very lightly with a soft cotton flannel cloth —never rubbed.

The marble tops from the old-fashioned bureaus and washstands make excellent slabs on which to knead bread and roll out pastries.

Baskets of painted tin holding all the cleaning requisites, including heavy fabric gloves, are of special interest to the perfect housekeeper.

Always boil beets without cutting so they will not bleed and become tough. When tender put them under cold water until cool enough to handle and then rub the skins off with the hands.

FOR WASHING SILVER

The following mixture is excellent for washing silver: Take equal parts of common yellow soap and whiting. Melt the soap, then add the whiting and make it into cake. Apply it with a piece of flannel and plenty of warm water, then rinse well and dry and the silver will not only look beautifully bright; but will not require cleaning so often. Use this soap for removing egg stains from spoons.

LEMON LORE

When squeezing the juice from a lemon heat it slightly first and nearly double the quantity of juice is obtained.

To store lemons put a layer of dry, fine sand about an inch in depth at the bottom of an earthenware jar. Place the lemons stalk end down in this, at least an inch apart from each other. Cover with another layer of sand, then add more lemons, and continue the layers until the jar is full. The top layer must be sand covered. Store in a cool, dry place.

GET RID OF ANTS

Mix insect powder with sugar and place on small dishes wherever there are ants. If they get on table or in cupboards, put some on floor around the casing and you will soon be entirely free from them.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

You must breathe plenty of fresh air; if you cannot get outdoors much you can at least sleep with all your windows open top and bottom.

Never clean the finger nails with a sharp-pointed instrument, and never cut them without first soaking the hands in warm water at least five minutes. If the finger nails are stained, try dipping them in a cup of warm soft water, to which a teaspoon of lemon juice has been added.

When cutting nails begin by soaking the feet for 20 minutes to half an hour in a basin of warm, soapy water. Then take your nail file and clean under each toe-nail and, with the cuticle knife, scrape off all the dead skin you can remove from the nail. Clip the jagged ends with your manicure scissors and then trim the nails short.

As a general thing people do not like to be told to exercise. It is a nuisance and takes time that might be employed more pleasantly if not more profitably. The only women who really enjoy taking exercises are those who are already healthy. Those poorly, anemic and lacking in energy who are the very ones who need exercise most, hate its very idea.

WHEN FEET ARE TIRED

Vogue says that a tepid sea-bath is soothing to tired feet. For burning or perspiring feet add to the salt bath two handfuls of powdered alum or borax. Burning feet may be caused by poor circulation and a warm foot-bath followed by a cold one is often found stimulating. Such a bath frequently helps swollen ankles, which may be caused by sluggish circulation. Also, such ankles are helped by massage of the ankle-bone with a greaseless cream, first rubbing outward with a rotary motion, then inward. A high shoe, even if worn only a part of the day, is of great aid in reducing the size of the ankle and strengthening it.

NEW LINEN LINGERIE

Even if beauty goes no farther than the skin, the newest lingerie has at least brought it that far. This has been done largely through the medium of lace and linen. The newest imported underclothing is of the finest of hand woven linen, topped and bottomed with broad bands of the most delicate Irish lace. The necklines are absolutely straight and the shoulder straps unusually broad, almost epaulettes in fact. Additional adornment is confined to a single bow of ribbon, but the simplicity of the lines used and the good taste of the whole give an effect of unusual distinction.

Crepe de chine and triple voile combinations also use the lacy trimmings and have quite busted chemise, knickers and camisole. With the China crepe a fine ivory-colored lace frequently is used. One combination of crepe Osiris is topped by Irish lace almost the color of chamois and covered with a quite new embroidery giving a Scotch plaid effect. Printed mousseline de sole also is in vogue, this material being trimmed with fine plaiting which form flounces.

IN THE DINING ROOM

In hanging a dome over the dining table you have to use a great deal of care because if it is too high you can see the light source. But it is almost as bad if it is too low because then the person on the other side of the table is hidden. Hang the dome two feet or twenty-six inches above the table and you get a comfortable light.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Long ends of velvet white ribbon fall from a corsage of small white flowers that are the only trimming on a black chiffon gown.

Satin-backed crepe is now being made up with the satin rather than the crepe side to the fore, and is used for street or for more elaborate wear.

The circular, flaring peplum is being used effectively for street costumes. It is usually worn with a very narrow skirt, or an accordion pleated one.

Silk alpaca is among the new materials being used today for bathing suits. It is practical, shedding water as easily as it sheds dust. The new silk alpaca is printed in a variety of gay patterns.

A demure little bathing suit is of lavender pongee in a delicate tone. There is a small round collar and snug little knickers of the same material.

The girl who takes her golf seriously will delight in the new tee skirts made of fine alpaca yarn in white, with neckband and cuffs of different colors.

The chemise front now is seen on many of the new tailored street frocks. It adds a deft feminine touch, as do the rows of buttons placed where least expected.

Distinctive braiding today trims some of the long overblouses. It is placed at neck, sleeve ends and waist, so that the lines at these points are the first things to strike the eye.

Some of the young and slender are appearing today in the pagoda hat. It is a logical result of the high crowns so popular now, and—being made of inverted taffeta ruffles—look as much like a pagoda as necessary.

Four wide flounces, of Bertha proportions, make up an afternoon frock of lacquer red crepe georgette shown in Paris. Each flounce is finely plaited and there is a little belt of red embroidered velvet.

There seems to be no doubt that black is to be a favorite shade for evening wear later in the season. Already the lace frocks are growing more somber, and black with just a touch of color is rapidly taking first place.

The black hatter's plush chapeau with the high crown is assuming really opera-hat or coachman's hat proportions. The crown is remarkably high, the brim remarkably narrow and the one alleviation is the pleasant little roll to the brim.

CORRECT WALL COLORS

Avoid grays, greens and blues for north rooms, or dark rooms, as they are all cold colors and should be used only in bright, sunny rooms. In north rooms they are gloomy, whereas farm tans, soft yellows, and gay flower designs with rose, orange or even red in discreet pattern and amount, make even dark north rooms seem cheerful.

SHODED LIGHT BEST

The candelabra fixture over the dining room table will shed some light on the table if a small shade with pale colored lining is used to direct the light downward. All candlestick fixtures should be shaded, because even the small frosted lamps that are made for them are too bright for the eye.

IN WHITE AND BLACK

Though black lingerie has not absolutely returned, it is coming back little by little. For instance, some of the new underthings today are in white georgette with deep yokes of black Chantilly lace.

LAUNDRY HINTS

A too-hot iron will fade the material.

Equal parts of ammonia and turpentine will remove indelible ink stains.

Iron your linen table napkins on both sides if you wish them to be perfectly smooth and satiny.

Tar stains can be removed from cotton fabrics by covering the spots with butter and allowing it to remain on a few hours before washing.

Most stains can be removed from fabrics by stretching the material taut across the top of a saucepan, with the stain in the center. Then from a height of two or three feet slowly pour boiling hot water on the stain. In most cases the marks will immediately disappear.

MENDING CLOTHES

Tablecloths, as a rule, wear first at the corners and through the center. Needless to say, this is due to constant folding in one place and flapping in the wind. The corners should have been reinforced with tape, but no such protection could have been given the middle of the cloth. The better way in this case is to cut about a couple of inches or so off one side of the cloth and hem it again. The fold through the middle will not then come in the same place, of course. If the cloth is thin down the former fold it can be strengthened by running a thread through in a fine darning stitch, using strands of the ravelings of the cloth. Annice long threads will come from the cut off edge. Some persons gave new ravelings for mending, but old ones will be found far superior. New threads are apt to make a worn place worse.

CLEANING WICKER

Before applying paint, stain or varnish to restore color to wicker or reed furniture it should be cleaned with a solution made of the following directions: Into a gallon of warm water shave three ounces of castile soap, then add one ounce of any bland oil, such as corn, olive, or cottonseed. When the soap has entirely dissolved the solution may be poured into jars and labeled. In applying this to wicker or reed furniture use a stiff brush.

REMOVING CREASES

A good way of removing creases from clothes that have been packed is to give them a steam bath. Close the window of the bathroom, and then fill the bath with very hot water. Hang up the clothes, shut the door, leave for an hour or so and dry them in the open air. Serious creases may be dealt with by pressing on the wrong side of the material with a moderately hot iron.

CABBAGE SALAD

One small onion, one small cabbage, boiled dressing. Chop onion and cabbage very fine, season with salt and pepper and add salad dressing. A few stalks of celery or half a cup of raisins or chopped apple will give variety to this salad.

HARD LEMONS

When lemons become hard, put them in a pan of hot water and keep it at the same temperature for about two hours. This will soften the lemons and make them juicy once more.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Girl Guides outnumber the Boy Scouts by nearly 50,000.

Of the 12,00 chauffeurs in Philadelphia, 22 are women.

A woman judge sits on the Supreme bench of the Mexican State of San Luis.

Mrs. A. B. Macklin, of London, is England's only woman publisher.

Fifteen female lawyers in Philadelphia have formed the Women Lawyers' Club.

The French Academy of Arts has only one woman member—Queen Marie of Rumania.

For every woman dying from pneumonia three men are carried off with the same disease.

More females than males are employed in the printing and publishing industry in Philadelphia.

The personal jewels of Queen Mary of England are valued at more than a half million dollars.

Girls are rapidly replacing the male operators at the switchboard in China telephone exchanges.

MENDING RUBBERS

When children's overshoes have worn so that they are leaky, use adhesive tape to mend the holes.

WHEN MAKING ICE CREAM

After the ice cream has been frozen empty the ice and salt into a sack and when the ice has melted the salt will remain to be used again.

RECIPES

Celery Relish: Mix thoroughly one and one-half cups of celery chopped fine, one and one-fourth tablespoons of powdered sugar, one teaspoon of salt and one-half teaspoon of mustard; stir until well blended, then add onefourth cup of vinegar. Cover and let stand in the refrigerator 2 hours. Drain off the liquor before serving. Serve with roast chicken, turkey or veal. Scrape the outer stalks of celery and use some of the small, tender leaves for this relish.

Spiced Rhubarb: At this season of the year use only the small tender stalks of rhubarb for this mixture. Wipe two and one-half pounds of rhubarb and if small, tender stalks are used do not peel them, cut stalks in one inch pieces. Put in a preserving kettle, add two pounds of sugar, a scant cup of vinegar, one teaspoon of ground cinnamon and one-half teaspoon of ground cloves. Heat to the boiling point and let simmer until of the consistency of marmalade. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses, cool and cover with paraffin; set the tin covers in place and store. I have found the small stalks of rhubarb in the garden within the last week quite tender as that gathered in the early spring, mildly acid and of fine flavor.

Joffre's Success Was Belated

Although he early showed his ability, and studied, worked and kept fit for big achievements, Joseph Joffre was the victim of politics and circumstances and did not gain recognition until late in life.

Son of a cooper in Rivesaltes, in the Pyranees, he attended the nearby school, went to the College of Perpignan, and at 16 entered the Ecole Polytechnique to study military engineering, and was considered only a "fair" scholar.

While he was in his second year, the Franco-Prussian war broke out. He gave up his studies to enlist, commanded a battery of artillery during the seize of Paris and when peace was proclaimed returned to his schooling.

At 20 he was made a lieutenant, three years later a captain. He was a republican, the monarchists were in control of the army, and he waited for promotion 14 years until his valient leadership of the troops at Tonkin demanded that he be made a major.

After nine years of hard service in the French Sudan, he was the first to enter Timbuctoo, a fortnight after a French column had been massacred there. Then he was made lieutenant-colonel and awarded the Legion of Honor.

Burly, diligent and patient he continued to study and prepare. He constructed forts in Madagascar, taught in the Ecole de Guerre and at 49 became governor of Lille. Four years later he was commander of the Second Army at Amiens, but still ate soldiers' rations and slept on army beds, just to be prepared.

In 1911, in his sixtieth year, he was appointed chief of general staff with power over all French armies. Clemenceau criticized his methods but desisted when Joffre efficiently mobilized his troops at the outbreak of the world war and stood off the Germans at the Marne, driving Von Kluck back from Paris.

At 64 Joffre was made Marshall of France, the title being revived for him after being in abevance 45 years. He visited this country when the United States entered the war and again in 1922, and was given ovations each time.

Today, at 72, he is acclaimed one of the great military leaders of the world.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Admiral Thomas Washington, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic squadron, is responsible acting representative of the United States navy now dealing with the distinctly naval phases of the situation that has arisen at Shanghai in consequence of the civil war in China. A native of North Carolina, this veteran's experience dates back to 1887, when he left Annapolis and had his first taste on active naval service on board the old warship Enterprise. During the interval between that novitiate and his gaining his present rank he had the usual tour of the different fleets, and shore duty at Washington and elsewhere. For two years during the late war he served with the British Grand Fleet in the North Sea. In the latter part of 1919, following a brief period in command of one of the divisions of the Atlantic Fleet, he became chief of the Bureau of Navigation, which post he continued to fill until his assignment to command the Asiatic squadron.

CHILD TRAINING

How One Mother Interested Her Child in Personal Cleanliness

(Helen Gregg Green)

"Jessica, dear, Gloria's hair needs a shampoo. It's dead looking! She's not half so pretty when she isn't clean." And Jessica's mother suggested a good brushing to take the tangles from the doll's golden tresses, and some castile soap for the shampoo.

"I believe she needs a clean dress and stockings, too." Jessica called back over her plump little shoulder. "And perhaps a bath."

I guess I must have had a slightly quizzical look, for Mother explained. "You see, Jessica for some reason, always hated being cleaned up. I remember one day when I was bathing her, she exclaimed, "Mother, I wish water was only to drink!" Of course, the daily baths, and the shampoos were real trials. She didn't want to be clean. Finally, I decided to try out an idea I had hit upon, after a particularly hectic scene, when I had given her brown curls a much-needed shampoo."

There was a telephone call, and after we talked of other things until Jessica returned with a shining Gloria.

"See, Mother," she cried. "doesn't my dolly look fine! I gave her a bath, and shampooed her hair, and cleaned and polished her nails, and brushed her teeth, and changed her clothes. And now I'm going to polish her shoes and wash out her dress and underwear."

After Jessica scurried away, her mother smiled.

"She how interested she is in keeping Gloria clean and dainty-looking—" she said. "Well, because of this interest, she has become interested in herself. I wouldn't want Gloria to be ashamed of her father, she declares. I found a washable doll, and made he some sturdy washable dresses and underwear. I knitted little socks, and bought a tiny pair of tan shoes, and some shoe polish. I got a baby's tooth brush, some tooth paste, a shampoo that make an enticing lather, an orange stick and some nail polish. You can buy small samples case very cheap. My child was delighted, but not half so much as I, for the problem of keeping Jessica neat and clean was solved.

"Oh, of course," she continued, "I want her to have all the fun she can in the sand pile, and there are times when I don't care how dirty she gets, but now she's anxious to be clean again, while before—well, it really was a struggle."

Now wasn't the doll idea a clever one? If the wee ones happen to have an aversion to soap and water this way is certainly much easier and more pleasant than scolding and nagging.

The threatened invasion of Florida by the Mexican bean beetle is causing much concern among citrus fruit growers, for the insect attacks trees as well as weeds and crop plants.

Stories That Recall Others

Where's New York?

A lively bunch of little fellows were together in the evening and congregate on one porch or another in the neighborhood. Recently there appeared a new ace among them, and one daddy drew the new one into conversation.

"What's your name, sonny?" he asked.

"Frank," was the brief reply.

"Frank! And do you live here, Frank?"

"No, we came from New York," Frank replied.

Just to tease the daddy continued, "New York. Where is New York?"

And Frank, his mind quite apparently on other things not reasonably answered: "Well, it was in the place a few days ago. I don't know where it is now!"

She Has Company.

Four-year-old Jean went to Sunday school on her birthday. No sooner had she arrived than she cried and had to be taken home. Her mother's attempts to find out what was wrong amounted to nothing. She said: "Baby, I'll just put away your purse with your five pennies in it ready for Sunday school next Sunday."

Jean said nothing then, but the next Sunday she made the announcement that she was not going to church at all. The family coaxed and begged and finally she gave her reason: "I'm not going to give all my money to the church."

FAREWELL SERVICE GIVEN FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

An interesting farewell service for young people of the church who are about to start for school or college was held at the evening service Sunday at the Central Baptist church, when the pastor, Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt, spoke to the young people upon the theme, Preparation—For What? He called the attention of the young people to the fact that they hold in trust for investment something that is worth more than all the treasure of the world. This is a human life and the question is how are we going to invest it. Dr. Pitt declared that it was his belief that every calling is, or should be a sacred calling, that men are called by God to the farm, to law, to medicine, to business, to engineering, just as much as they are called to the ministry or to the mission field. He spoke at some length upon the ministry and concluded his brief sermon with the advice that it was most important for each one to follow the will of God the best he knows how. The one great mistake one can make will be not to follow His leading.

After the church service, the young people gathered in the prayer meeting room, where Walter N. Block was in charge of a short meeting during which the college and school young people were addressed by Judge Allyn L. Brown, who spoke of the great opportunity which was coming to all of them, warned them of some of the dangers there would be and some of the safeguards they could employ, and urged them to make the most of their opportunity and resolve always to do their best so that they would reward the confidence which their parents and all their friends feel in them.

A white silk bookmark, bearing the name and picture of the church, with the words "Character Is Greater Than Any Career," was presented to each of the young people by Emory H. Davis, on behalf of the church, and the evening concluded with an informal social during which light refreshments were served.

The young people are: Edwin Abel, Chapman Tech.; Howard Arnold and Kenneth Arnold, Rochester University; Marion Blackledge, Smith college; Adelaide Christman, Backus hospital; Benjamin Covey, Brown university; Floyd Hill, Hobart college; Polly Mitchell, Harriette Mills, training school for kindergarten teachers; Mildred Peckham, Posse-Nissen School of Physical Education; Sybil Palmer, Yale School of Nursing; Courtnay Pitt, Peddie school; Charles Sage and Robert Sage, Temple University, Arnold Smith, Williams College; Elizabeth Smith, Smith College; Russell Storms, Amherst College; William Storms, Brown university.

TRANKLA FAMILY IN ENJOYABLE REUNION

A family reunion Saturday evening marked the home coming of Mr. and Mrs. John Trankla after their tour of over two months in Europe. The reunion was held at their home, No. 169 Laurel Hill avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Trankla arrived in New York from Europe last Tuesday and were met at the pier by Mr. Trankla's brothers, Charles T. Trankla of Grand Rapids, Mich., and L. A. Trankla of New York, his two sisters, Miss Hattie Trankla and Mrs. J. A. Mohrardt, and brother-in-law, J. A. Mohradt, all of Grand Rapids.

After spending a day in New York they accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Trankla to Norwich and joined in the family reunion Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Trankla sailed from New York June 28th and visited England, Scotland, France, Switzerland and Germany. While in France they paid a visit to the world war battlefields which they found very interesting. In Germany they visited Berlin, Frankfort, Hamburg and other large German cities. They also paid a visit to the childhood homes of Mr. Trankla's parents.

Mr. Trankla, who is foreman of The Bulletin job room department, said that the general feeling of the German people towards America is one of friendliness. While they express disappointment over losing the world war they have a friendly feeling for the United States. The majority of the German people are not anxious for any return of the old government ruled by the former kaiser but are looking for a complete change in government.

Mr. Trankla remarked on the number of women that are engaged in work of all kinds in the countries of Europe. He said that on the farms they cut and mow hay, stack it up, and store it away in the barns. They do all kinds of farm work. Even in the cities they can be seen doing work that was formerly considered men's work.

UNITARIAN MINISTERS' INSTITUTE OPENS TODAY

Deerfield, Mass., Sept. 14. Unitarian ministers from 20 states began gathering here today for the opening tomorrow of the Unitarian ministers' institute, acceptances having been received from 125 pastors. The world is filled with would-be leaders who couldn't even follow successfully.

FOR CHURCH AT STORRS WITH COMMUNITY HOUSE

That the young people who attend Connecticut Agricultural college may have fuller religious and social opportunity, a movement has been launched to provide adequate facilities for religious and community life in the Storrs community. Plans for an enlarged church plant and for a community house have been laid following a careful consideration of the problem by the trustees of the existing Storrs church, and old Congregational edifice; the executive board of the Connecticut Federation of churches, and a special committee of the Congregational Conference of Connecticut. It is proposed to raise a sum of $250,000, to be expended as follows: Church building $100,000; community house, $75,000; endowment, $75,000.

The Storrs church has been serving the community since the foundation of the Connecticut Agricultural college in 1881; the enrollment has doubled every ten years, and now, with an enrollment of 500, it is at the height of its usefulness; but the church plant has not been enlarged to meet this growth.

An old wooden structure, built about 1846, on a church site in existence since pre-Revolutionary days; with a maximum capacity of 200, serves the community. Such provision as has been made for the religious life of the community has come largely from the community itself—composed almost entirely of faculty families, college employes and students. Under public statutes existing since 1818, the state can do nothing toward meeting the religious and spiritual needs of the church and its community.

The church will continue its connection with the Congregational church, but it will serve all denominations alike. The sum of $100,000 makes adequate provision not only for constructing and equipping the proposed religious plant, but for its maintenance as well. Provision for endowment is made because the local community, made up almost entirely of resident members, cannot be expected to carry the entire burden of maintaining religious opportunities for the several hundred students.

Second only to the need of a religious home during his four years residence at Storrs, the student finds the call for a social center, which would be answered by the proposed community house. It is to enable the church to take the leadership at Storrs in promoting a healthy social life that the community house is included as part of the church plan.

Among the purposes which such a structure would serve in the present church plan are: Adequate housing for the Sunday school; a home for the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and similar organizations; religious meetings, when desired, of non-Protestant groups meetings of student clubs and other organizations; social and educational gatherings under the management of the Faculty club, The Woman's club or other faculty or community groups; dinners and banquets, such as those of football teams, dramatic or debating clubs and students' publications.

The movement will be assisted by the Connecticut Federation of Churches.

Of Missionary Ancestry

Miss Avery is the daughter of Dwight W. and Alice Barrows Avery and was born in Norwich Town. She comes from missionary ancestry her grandparents, Rev. and Mrs. John O. Barrows having served under appointment of the American Board in Turkey from 1869 to 1881. Their daughter Mrs. Elizabeth Barrows Usher, aunt to Miss Avery was born in Caesarea and served with her husband, Dr. Usher in Van, Turkey from 1900 to 1915. Mrs. Usher died during the world war from illness contracted in caring for Turkish refugees.

At eleven years of age Miss Avery united with the First Congregational church of Norwich and early in life purposed to become a foreign missionary. At the end of her junior year in college she joined the student volunteer movement and has kept the foreign mission field constantly in view.

During the past summer Miss Avery received her appointment from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to the Marathi mission in western India and is to teach in a girl's school at Ahmednagar. For this position she is well fitted. After completing grade schools of Norwich and the regular course in the Norwich Free Academy she entered Connecticut college in 1918 and graduated four years later with honors. Her college training was supplemented by a summer course of study at Columbia university in 1923.

The practical side of her training has been developed by two years of teaching; one year in the Old Saybrook high school and one year in the Norwich Free Academy.

Miss Avery will be under special care of the Eastern Connecticut branch of the Woman's Board of Missions.

On October fourth Miss Avery in company with four or five other women will leave New York and will visit educational centers in England and points of interest in France en route to their respective stations in mission lands.

TWO WATERBURY WOMEN MORE THAN 100 YEARS OLD

Waterbury, Sept. 14.—Rarely does a community have an opportunity to record the anniversary of a centenarian and more rarely still the birthdays of two women who have already gone several years into a second century of life.

Mrs. Lucy Haskell Treat, 244 Cooke street, this city, celebrated her 104th birthday on Friday and Miss Fanny J. Green, of Woodbury, passed her 102nd anniversary on Saturday.

Miss Green attributes her longevity and youthful appearance to the fact that she has always led a sheltered existence. She is a genealogist in an amateur way and is blessed with a remarkable unimpaired memory which makes her accounts of personally witnessed events invaluable to historians and local seekers after family trees.

Mrs. Treat has lived the normal existence of an old time American wife and mother. She does not approve of the new freedom, allowing women equal competitive rights with men in the business field. She disapproves of suffrage and is proud of the fact that she has never cast a ballot and absolutely determined that she never will. She does admit, however, although dancing was against her earlier religious convictions that now she would like to learn to waltz.

Both women prefer the good old days and pity and condemn the modern flapper.

SUICIDED AT THE HOME OF HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The suicide yesterday afternoon of James Mott Almy, prominent Hillbrook resident at the home here of his brother-in-law, Fred H. Swift, was disclosed this afternoon to police and Coroner John A. Card through the finding of a blood-stained rug on a city ash heap. With the rug were several newspapers, one of which contained the address of Mr. Swift. Subsequent inquiry showed Mr. Almy's physician, Dr. C. Knight Beyo, had been unable to reach the coroner last night and notify him of the case

AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION OPENS TODAY

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 14.—Thousands of members of the American Legion poured into St. Paul today, ready for the opening here tomorrow of the five day national encampment of the legion.

"Searching examination" of the central office board of appeals and the clasping sections of the veterans bureau is recommended in a resolution prepared today by the national rehabilitation committee. While expressing gratification with the increased efficiency with which the veterans' bureau has functioned during the past year" the committee "believes there still is room for great improvement in certain departments"

The resolution declares General Frank T. Hines, director of the bureau, "inherited many faults and weaknesses in the bureau's personnel," and urges "inefficient employes" in the two departments named be "weeded out and replaced with ex-service men of known ability."

Several cities are seeking the 1925 convention, but the more evident campaigns are being waged by Fort Worth, Texas, Louisville, Ky., and Omaha.

Boston, Philadelphia and Seattle are declared desirous of landing the 1926 convention and today the executive committee received an invitation from Premier Herriot of France, inviting the legion convention to Paris in 1923, the decennial anniversary of the signature of the armistice.

MEETING OF ANTI-FASCISTA LEAGUE IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Sept. 14.—Disturbing hecklers kept the police busy at a meeting of the local anti-fascista league in Music hall today and many were ushered to the door by the officers. The meeting was brought to a close, however, with nothing more damaging than an intense verbal bombardment to mar the proceedings. There were about 300 persons present and the anti-fascist element was in the majority. The trouble began when the fascista sympathizers became incensed at what they declared were alleged insults hurled by the speakers at the king and premier of Italy. The hecklers, however, were rushed to the door by the guard of 25 policemen and eight detectives. Upward of 50 persons were more or less forcibly ejected, some of them three or four times, but no arrests were made.

John Genovesi, of New York, a veteran follower of Garibaldi, was the first speaker. He wore a bright scarlet tunic of the Garibaldi uniform.

Other speakers were William Simone, of New Haven, representing the workers' party; Pasquale Cobianchi, editor of Italian Weekly in New Haven; Maria Baldini, New York; Italo Pedrinelli, Derby; Pietro Allegra, of New York, and Carlo Tresca, of New York.

Miss Walter is suffering from a badly bruised left knee and lacerations about the face and left hand.

Both were riding in an automobile driven by Joseph Eisler, of 281 Grove street, Waterbury. The other machine in the accident was operated by Frank Walsh, of 67 Maltby street, Shelton.

GRIEVANCE OF SUPT OF THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

New York, Sept. 14—Arthur J. Davis, superintendent of the anti-saloon league of New York, in a statement issued today charged foreign liquor interests with having formed a conspiracy to influence the coming American presidential elections. The plot, Mr. Davis asserted, is centered in the United States at present but the conspirators are active also in England, Sweden and Canada.

A special agent of the interests, according to the dry leader, is in this country for the purpose of influencing Americans to make changes in the prohibition laws favorable to the foreign liquor producers. Mr. Davis said the plat may be traced to a French group known as the exportation commission of French wines.

SENSATIONAL RAID ON SHORE OF LAKE ONTARIO

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Deputy collectors under Andrew Wiedenmann, collector of the port of Rochester, early today staged a sensational raid on the shores of Lake Ontario west of the Hilton Beach lighthouse, arresting seven men and a boy, and seizing two automobiles and four trucks, a dinghy and 250 cases of alleged ale, valued at $10,000.

One man in a high-powered motor boat, a short distance from the shore, and from which the gang was unloading the alleged ale, escaped in a volley of revolver shots, the deputies wading into the water and emptying their guns at the boat disappearing in the darkness. The men and boy arrested all are residents of this city and are of foreign descent.

BOYS MADE SICK BY STOLEN LIQUOR AND SEWAGE WATER

Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 14—Filched liquor and sewer water today placed Chester Matuski, 9, and Ralph Broughton, 1, in a hospital here. According to hospital authorities, the boys climbed an apartment house fire escape and found the liquor near a window. Taking the bottle with them to the banks of a creek into which waste from a gas generating plant is emtied, they drank the greater portion of the full bottle. Thirsty, they drank sewage water from the creek. Doctors say they will recover.

MACEDONIAN AUTONOMIST LEADERS ASSASSINATED

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 14.—The assassination of two Macedonian autonomist leaders, Aleko Vassilef and Georgi Atonhof, at Diumaia, has been reported to the ministry of the interior. Macedonian circles here are greatly excited over the report.

The United States department of agriculture has issued a warning against the use of "preserving powders" in home canning, because these preparations usually contain boric or salicylic acid.

COLBERG PITCHES EAST SIDE SINGLE MEN TO CLOSE VICTORY OVER MARRIED MEN

It's all over but the shouting, but the shouting won't be over for many a day for the last and deciding game of the East Side Married Men and Single Men series was a game that will occupy its place in history in big red letters until after the married men are gone and the single men will be grandfathers. Although the critics all predicted a real hair-raising ball game, they fell down miserably in trying to describe it as the game on the Dudwell field yesterday was one that can never be told about in black and white and only those that happened to be lucky enough to pass through the turnstiles at the gate know of all the thrills that were furnished from the time the band struck up, Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here, until the mighty Berger was borne off the field on the shoulders of his many admirers with the large loving cup pressed lovingly to his bosom.

At 2 o'clock the gates of the field were thrown open and the fans flocked from north, east, south and west, from the city and from the country and jammed the park from one end to the other, everyone of them eager to see the Mighty Berger and the less mighty Coleman in action. At 2.30, led by Houston's brass band, the rival teams marched onto the field and immediately started to warm up, first the married men and then the single men, while the band played merrily. Although the single men showed lots of pep in practice it could be seen that they were about to enter the game slightly nervous while their rivals showed plenty of confidence. In the meantime the crowd started to get uneasy and began to cry for action.

At 3 o'clock Umpire "Muggsy" Ellsworth called the rival captains to center and announced the ground rules and the married men took the field. Manager Cook winning the toss up and the game was on.

Coleman threw the first ball and received a wild ovation from the stands, pitching in the same form that has earned him a stall in the hall of fame. He retired the first two men and Bill Pedace doubled sharply to center, but it was as far as he got as Risley, the next man up, smacked out on three pitched balls retiring the side and the Single Men then took the field. Captain Colberg then delayed the game for a few moments by calling all the team into the pitchers' box to give them final instructions and shook hands with each one and then sent them back to their positions.

Whether it was his instructions or to a friendly handclasp, the single men immediately lost all their former nervousness and retired the married men in one, two, three order. In the next inning the single men scored a run when the big chief "Bullett" Pedace laid a bunt down the third base line, stole second and third and scored on an error by Perkins. After that both pitchers mowed down the opposing batsmen as fast as they approached the plate while the fans cheered wildly and as the fifth inning drew along the score still stood 1 to 0, but the break was bound to come sooner or later and in that inning the single men scored four more runs on hits by Pedace, Risley, J. Pedace, Bovens and Wilcox, in addition to two free tickets that Coleman handed Lynch and Colberg. By this time the over ackie crowd that always admires a winner but hates a loser began to cry for Manager Cook to hand Coleman the water bucket and send him on his weary way to the clubhouse. But Cook, the heady manager that he is, decided that Coleman still had a few good innings in his system and he let "Todd" stick it out and well he did for instead of blowing up Coleman only got better and held the single men to only one run during the remainder of the game. The game was again delayed in the sixth inning while Umpire Ellsworth threw out a ball which had the cover entirely worn off on one side through Berger's consistent use of emory, the married men protested but in vain, as the two managers had cast all rules to the winds before the game, allowing either pitcher to use anything that he may desire.

The married men scored twice in the sixth, once in the seventh and again in the eighth and when they took their licks in the last of the eighth the score stood 6 to 4 against them. Campbell, first man up, singled to right and advanced to second on Rieve's hit over second but was forced at third when Risley made a beautiful stop of Cook's hot liner and doubled him at first. With two down and a man on second, Capt. Colberg called time and again called his team into the pitchers' box, with drawn face it could be seen that Berger was pleading with his teammates in these few moments of his uneasiness. At this stage Coleman dashed wildly onto the field and protested to the umpire which came near being the cause of his receiving Berger's mighty left on the chin. The game again started and Belair singled to deep center, scoring Riley and took third when James was safe on an infield hit. By this time the shadows of dusk were gathering and with the score 6 and 5, with men perched safely on first and third and two down it began to look as if the game was destined to go well into the night, but Randall, the next man up, drove a sizzler to Dyer, who tossed to Woodmansee at second, forcing James, bringing to a close a battle such as one's only stared within the covers of dime novels. The many features of the game included the sensational work of Cook and Risley at third and the hitting of Woodmansee and Randall, each getting a brace of doubles and a single. After the game the single men received the beautiful loving cup, presented by Brother Bill Shanley and Manager Cook was presented the surprise package, which when opened, revealed a cup, not a loving cup but one that has proved mighty useful during many a night and then the crowd surged madly onto the field, raised Berger on their shoulders and paraded off the field while the bank played The Shiek.

MOOSUP TAKES SERIES FROM HARTFORD TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Moosup, Sept. 14.—Moosup took the second game and series with the Hartford Herrups here today in a pitching battle between "Chick" Davis of Moosup and Shovac of Hartford, the former having the advantage and winning 2 to 0. Both pitchers were in rare form, Davis allowing 2 hits and issuing no passes while Shovac allowed 4 hits and gave three passes. It was a game that stands out among the season's record games in the Eastern part of the state and was one that was well worth seeing.

Moosup drew first blood in the first inning when Coullard drew a pass and was advanced on Moore's sacrifice, scoring a minute later when Mills crashed one over McKernan's head for two bases. Moosup's other run came in the seventh inning when Frechette singled, Mangold, batting for Strike, walked and Allard scratched a hit in the infield. With the base full Davis hit to short and Frechette scored on the put out. This ended the scoring.

Next Sunday Moosup either plays Willimantic or Webster, Mass., team. The score:

RIVERVIEW TRIMS TAFTVILLE IN SECOND SERIES GAME

Riverview closed up the series with Taftville Saturday afternoon by winning the second game 3 to 1 in a well played game. For six innings it was a pitchers' battle between Pepin for the home club and Posick for the Riverview team. Pepin however, weakened in the seventh allowing four hits which resulted in two runs, breaking the tie and winning the game for Riverview.

Artie Coullard led the hitting attack for Riverview, having a perfect day at bat, getting two doubles and two singles in four times up. Lefty Harrell played a brilliant fielding game for Riverview.

Taftville also lost Sunday's game 4 to 3 to the Hartford Federals. The scores of Saturday's game:

Fuller Team Fails to Appear

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 14.—It was a disappointed crowd that wended its way home from Morgan Park Saturday afternoon. The disappointment could not be begrudged the fans who came from various sections of the city, and other outlaying districts with the expectations of seeing the much heralded Fuller Brush Company team in action against the New London Ship and Engine, in one of the Industrial elimination games scheduled in this state on Saturday. Instead they saw little or anything that even resembled the Hartford aggregation, who failed to put in an appearance at the park.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch

Fordham Star and Giant Captain

6th inning. Score 6 to 4 in favor of the team in the field. One man is out. There are runners on second and third. Batter hits a long fly to the center fielder. There is no possible chance for a play at the plate.

Where should the center fielder throw the ball?

When the outfielder sees there is no possible chance of throwing out the man at the plate, he should make the throw in this situation to prevent the man on second base from reaching third, for this is the winning run. You see if the outfielder makes a hurried throw home, thinking there is a possibility of catching the runner going in from third, he is very likely to make a wild throw and the opposing team would then score both runs. In throwing the ball to third, he should see it there on one hop, so it can be easily handled. Such a throw will hold the runner on second and it will then take a base hit to score the winning run.

PIONEER TEAM WINS EASY GAME FROM YANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 14.—If any doubt existed in the minds of those fans who witnessed the Pioneer Hose-Yantic game at Yantic last Sunday that the Pioneer Hose nine was not the superior of the two, it was demonstrated at Groton this afternoon, where the Yantic team was administered a sound thrashing by the Hose men. The final tally of 9 to 1 for the Pioneers is a solution to the story. We could drop the remaining details of the story and call it a day, but we will add a little more to the story.

While the departure of Cannonball Jones to other parts of endeavor has been deprecated no doubt by the Yantic management, yet in J. Lamphere an able successor to fill the shoes vacated by Cannonball Jones has been unearthed. While the rest of the team behind him was laboring in a slovenly manner, Lamphere was working havoc with the Pioneer batsmen and he sent twelve of them back to the bench via the strike out route. But his was not enough to guarantee success, for the indefferent play of the visitors was to much to insure success even though the pitching was exceptionally good. Lamphere deserves a better fate than what was in store for him but the goddess of luck had it otherwise.

Pitted opposite the Yantic hurler was Henry, and he likewise twirled a good game and struck out eleven of the visitors. The breaks however were behind him, but he easily deserved a shut out. The only run scored by Yantic came as the result of a misjudged fly and a poor relay to the plate. Outside of this there was little trouble caused for Henry.

Champions Lose Last Game

Waterbury, Sept. 10.—Worcester defeated Waterbury, winners of the 1924 pennant race in the final league game of the season here today by a score of 2 to 1. Manager Kitty Bransfield of the Waterbury team was presented with a purse of $500 by the owners and a gold watch by President Herman Weissman, as an appreciation of his fine work with the team. Rush of the Brassies and Joe Batchelder of the Panthers engaged in a pitching duel, but the Worcester hurler received better support and won the interesting game.

EASTERN CONN. BOWLING LEAGUE GETS UNDER WAY THIS EVENING

Tonight the maple pins will begin to fly all over Eastern Conn. when the Eastern Connecticut Bowling league will swing into action. Although every effort has been made to secure eight teams for the league only seven have been signed and the league will go along with these teams. This means that one team will lay off a week while the other six roll.

The opening games will take place in Norwich, Taftville and Moosup. The Palace will roll at the Aetna, Plainfield will open at Moosup and Taftville will get into action and the New London alleys. On Thursday the same teams will oppose each other but on different alleys, Moosup bowling at Plainfield, New London at Taftville and the Aetna at the Palace. Willimantic, the seventh team in the league will be idle this week but will swing into action a week from tonight.

This league is conducted under the auspices of the Eastern Connecticut Bowling association and it is planned to have the winner of this league compete with the winner of the Central and Western state leagues to decide the state bowling title. However, these plans are yet indefinite but it is expected that a series of this kind would be a decided stimulus to the bowling game throughout the state.

The league will continue until the middle of February when the prizes will be awarded. There are eight prizes, three for team play and five for individual honors, which will be well worth winning and will be competed for by some of the best bowlers of the Eastern part of the state.

The complete schedule will be published this week.

Brooklyn, Sept. 14.—Dazzy Vance made his fourteenth straight victory a shutout today when he blanked Cincinnati 2 to 0 in a pitchers' battle with Rixey and Benton. It was the speed ball king's 26th win of the season. He also added nine strike outs to his record of the season.

He fanned the side in both the third and sixth innings, pitching only five balls in the third. The Reds got only four hits, two being bunched with two out in the fourth without damage.

The Dodgers scored one run off Rixey in the 4th on hits by Mitchell and Fournier and Brown's sacrifice fly. They got their other tally off Benton on successive singles by Griffith, Deberry and Vance. Score:

STARS BEAT SILKMEN AND TIE UP LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 15.—Inability to field bunts, was cause enough for the defeat of the Corticelli Silk company nine in the City league contest with the Fort Trumbull Stars Saturday afternoon, on the same day. Their game comes earlier this year than ever before.

Intersectional games will be played by Minnesota and Chicago, against Vanderbilt and Brown Universities, respectively. The opening game of the conference schedule will be played October 4 between Purdue and Ohio State at Columbus.

Harold Grange, sensational half back last year, with Illinois, will be supported by a veteran lineup this year, while at Michigan prospects so far are good.

THREADMAKERS NOSE OUT MANCHESTER IN CLOSE GAME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Sept. 14.—Willimantic regained some of its lost prestige by taking the third game of the series with Manchester at Recreation Park Saturday afternoon in a hard fought contest by the score of 3 to 2. Both teams confined their scoring activities to one inning. The locals got away to a flying start and piling up an early lead, which try as they might the visitors could not overcome.

Richards allowed seven hits and Thompson six but the former twirled the better game of ball and but for Adams' error of omission would have been a shutout.

Massey scintillated in the field for the visitors while Shortstop Wright also played a good game. For Willimantic, Normandin, Harris, Adams, Johnson Welch and Richards pulled off a number of good fielding plays for the home club.

The game was played in fast time. Umpires Coughlin and Lynch handled the game satisfactorily. The attendance was comparatively small.

RUTH HAS 46 HOME RUNS AT PRESENT TIME

Chicago, Sept. 14—Interest in the major league home run race is centered upon the contest for second place with Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees, away out in front of the pack. Fournier, Brooklyn slugger, is second, with 27 circuit counters, but is followed closely by Hauser, of the Philadelphia Americans, who has 26 and Hornsby, St. Louis, national stellar sticker, with 23.

Ruth knocked out three homers during the week, but still has thirteen to go to tie his best record. He must average about one a game for the remainder of the season to tie or better his 1921 mark.

The leaders:

American: Ruth, New York, 46; Hauser, Philadelphia 26; Williams, St. Louis, 17; Jacobson, St. Louis, 17; Boone, Boston, 13.

National: Fournier, Brooklyn 27; Hornsby, St. Louis 23; Williams, Philadelphia, 21; Kelly, New York, 19; Hartnett, Chicago 15; Harper, Philadelphia, 15; Wheat, Brooklyn 13.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY MARKET REVIEW.

New York, Sept. 14.—(By The A. P.)—Bond prices drifted aimlessly last week in the dullest market sessions of the year. Reactionary tendencies predominated but were not pronounced, and when the net changes for the week were chalked up losses generally were found to be slight.

Diminishing trading activity was accompanied by a lull in new financancing, with offerings for the week approximating $45,000,000 as compared with nine than $75 000,000 the week before. The most important issue of the week was a $10,000,000 loan to the Paris-Orleans Railroad Other foreign financing, in which the public did not participate, included a $3,000,000 short term loan granted by a banking group to Jugo-Slavia for railroad construction and the purchase by banks of $2,200,000 notes of the Paris-Lyons Meriterranean Railroad.

Chief trading interest centered in a sharp break in St. Paul Railway bonds, following publication of rumors that the road would readjust its financial structure and scale down its capital in order to meet maturities of about $45,000,000 next year. On official denial of these reports, the issues rallied slightly but closed the week with net losses of 1 to 5 points.

Renewal of the $160,000,000 credit granted by J. P. Morgan & Co., to the bank of France last March to stabilize the franc was one of the outstanding developments of the week. Prior to extension of the credit for another six months would place France in a better position to obtain a long-term loan of between $100,000 000 and $200,000,000 later in the year.

Prospective foreign borrowers in this market after the flotation of the forthcoming German loan include the Berlin city government and the republic of Czecho-Slovakia, which proposes to consolidate its floating debt. Important developments in connection with the German financing were reported from abroad that it would be offered on a dollar basis and that French banks would assume the portion of 40,000,000 marks allotted to France.

The United States treasury's offering of $350,000,000 certificates of indebtedness was oversubscribed despite the unusually low interest rate of 2 3-4 per cent. for a one-year maturity.

As the result of a collision between the motorcycle he was driving and a Chevrolet touring car on North Main street, near the Norwich Belt Manufacturing company plant, Saturday evening, about 8.30 o'clock, James Gardner, U. S. N., of the Submarine Base, is a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital, suffering from painful injuries about the hip. Miss Florence Brown, 21, of Providence, a guest of relatives in Waterford, who was riding on the motorcycle with Gardner, was somewhat injured but her injuries are not considered serious.

The touring car was driven by Joseph Pilecki, 21, of No. 86, Otrabando avenue. It is claimed that the motorcycle driver was on the left hand side of the road. The touring car was badly damaged by the crash. Gardner and the injured girl were taken in another automobile to the office of Dr. N. B. WASHINGTON SPEAKER FOR MEMBERSHIP MEETING

Announcement has been made by E. O. Rodier, chairman of the membership meeting committee of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce that Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D. Episcopal bishop of Washington, D. C., will be the speaker at the chamber's September membership meeting. The meeting is to be held at the Wauregan hotel, Monday, Sept. 22, at 6.15 o'clock. The speaker's topic will be The Business Man's Religion.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke has called the attention of the chamber members to a proposed change in the by-laws, which provides an opportunity for the board of directors to be more thoroughly representative of the community.

The proposed revision is being adopted in a large number of chambers of commerce and is believed to be a progressive step to take.

Article III. Section C is amended as follows:

"In all elections four directors shall be elected to serve for two years. Twice the number to be elected shall be nominated each year as there are directors to be elected. At the first meeting of the directors following the regular election, the four newly elected directors and four elected directors who hold over, shall proceed to elect enough additional directors to make the total number 12. These additional shall be elected for a term of one or two years as the directors at the meeting may decide."

Under this procedure there will be eight of the twelve directors elected by the membership through the direct ballot. The duty of said directors will also have the power to choose four other directors to serve on the board with them, thus having on it eight to create a well representative board of business and professional men to direct the affairs of the chamber.

This matter is proposed for your consideration, and action will be taken on it at the membership meeting on September 22nd in accordance with the by-laws of the chamber.

FATHER GUERRIERO BEGINS SERMONS ON THE CREED

Yesterday was the fourteenth Sunday after Pentecost. The epistle read in all the Catholic church masses was Galatians V. 16-24, and the gospel was Matthew VI. 24-33, setting forth the impossibility of serving two masters. At the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church the junior assistant pastor, Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero, began a series of sermons on the twelve points of belief in The Apostles' Creed, taking up the first profession, "I believe in God, the Father Almighty; Creator of heaven and earth."

Having considered the full significance of this admission and profession, the preacher deduced the lesson that more pronouncement of belief in God is not enough—even the evil spirits have this. The best proof of man's faith in God, his Creator, comes from works rather than words—from putting faith into practice by strict and consistent obedience of God's laws. Not all of those who say "Lord, Lord" shall enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Father Guerriero assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin—who read the low mass—in giving Holy Communion. The hymns were sung by the junior choir, Organist Frank L. Farrell playing. With the return of so many vacationists, auditory and galleries were filled. The children of the Sunday school, in charge of their teachers, the Sisters of Mercy, occupied the pews on either side of the main aisle, as is customary at this, the children's special mass each Sunday. Later, the classes in advanced study of Christian doctrine and Bible history assembled in the lower church for instruction.

TWO MACHCINES DAMAGED IN BOLTON NOTCH CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

Willimantic, Sept. 14.—A Ford touring car driven by William Goodwin of Providence and owned by the Greene garage of that city was wrecked and an Overland roadster owned and driven by Lester Thornton of Hartford was damaged in a sideswiping accident shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday evening just west of Bolton Notch on the Hartford-Willimantic highway. The Providence car was being driven toward this city and the Hartford man was headed for his home. The machines hooked front fenders, sending the Ford car careening to one side of the road where it overturned. One of the six men occupying this car sustained slight injuries. The remainder including the Overland driver, escaped without injuries. State Policeman Henry Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks investigated the accident.

Beginning Work Again

The Women's auxiliary to Fletcher Post of the American Legion is to take up its work for the season at its regular meeting this (Monday) evening which will be the first after the summer recess.

4,697 DRIVERS HAVE BEEN BARRED FROM ROADS

People who "take a chance" driving motor vehicles without securing an operator's license from the state motor vehicle department, as required by law, are being caught in Connecticut at the rate of about three a day. During the eight months of this year up to the first of the current month, 746 such cases were reported to the department, resulting in the suspension of the right to drive of those found guilty of the offense.

The operator who is discovered thus violating the law is deprived of his right to drive for thirty days. This is accomplished by withholding an operator's license from him for thirty days after the receipt of his application and fee. In case he is found guilty of a breach of the motor vehicle laws such is reckless driving, intoxication, overloading trucks or evading responsibility, this suspension term is extended accordingly. It frequently happens, however, that the illegal operator is found out through an accident, in cases of which the discipline by the department, independent of court action, may be more severe.

By order of the motor vehicle department, 4,697 drivers of motor vehicles have been taken off the roads of the state for various periods of time during the first eight months of this year. The total of suspensions of operator's licenses exceed the total for the same period two years ago by over 3,800 indicating the extent to which the department is resorting to this form of discipline in the effort to make driving safer in Connecticut.

Reckless driving was responsible for 1,756 of the suspensions made by the department up to September 1st, this year, driving while intoxicated, for 578 evading responsibility for accidents, for 95; driving unregistered cars, for 161; failure to report accidents to the department, for 853; fatal accidents 157 and the rest for miscellaneous causes.

REV. R. B. DAY SPOKE TO SCOUTS ON DEFENSE DAY

Norwich council Boy Scouts were guests of Troop No. 20, Norwich Town at Camp "Up-E-Nuf," Friday night last from 4 to 9.30 p. m.

This was the fall rally of the scouts and over 60 were present from various troops of the city.

Rev. R. B. Day gave an address at the camp fire on "Defense Not Defiance." Mr. Day enlisted with the Seaforth Highlanders ten years ago and saw service in the World war.

His talk was concerned with the attitude of nations and individuals toward matters of defense and friendship toward others. Scouts should not say they are indifferent to their school work and other duties, but should concern themselves with being prepared, because the whole world of scouts are working out a plan that means preparedness in every line of activity. The spirit of scouting must make for world peace.

Some of you may see another war, but we hope you will not. Reverence, courteousness, and respect for people, law and order are expected of a scout.

Mr. Day related incidents of the great war and in a very interesting way brought out the fact that these things make for universal peace.

At 4 o'clock Scoutmaster Wyant and his boys put on the corn to roast and the scouts in the meantime were enjoying games, capture the flag, golf croquet and others.

Mrs. Ozias Dodge assisted as hostess when supper was ready. This consisted of delicious roast corn, cocoa and cake a generous supply being provided.

The entrance to Camp "Up-E-Nuf" was lighted with Chinese lanterns and rows of them piloted visitors up the winding trail to camp.

Rustic seats, swings, see-saws, observation tower, croquet, golf and a large tent and fireplace placed here and there among the cedars, and gray rocks made a camp site to delight everyone.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Ozias Dodge, F. A. Benton, scout executive, Arthur L. Peale, Mr. Sauter, Mr. Filmore and Rev. R. B. Day.

At the close of the camp fire all wended their way down the back trail to Mediterranean lane having had a most pleasant evening.

Roses in September.

Although the season is late for roses Mrs. Hugh Finlayson of 61 1-2 Broad street picked a bunch of roses from bushes in her flower garden the past week. The roses were in full bloom.

TIRED

After Summer-Heat— Or Summer-Washing?

Many a woman who finds herself "all run down" after summer is over, blames this on the heat of July and August. But there are many other women who have found it easier to endure summer heat since they have freed themselves of the worry and work of summer washing. They use the laundry—and they will continue to use it during fall and winter. For they have found the laundry's excellent work and reliable service well worth its moderate prices. If you're "run down" in the fall, don't blame the summer—blame the wash-tub. Let us give you relief from work that is unhealthily tiring at any time. Telephone today and our representative will call.

COTTRELL CASE GOES TO THE SUPREME COURT

The plaintiffs in the case of Leone Balfe Cottrell, et al., vs. Charles P. Cottrell, et al., individually and as executors, have filed an appeal from the judgment of the superior court. Notice of the appeal, which takes the case to the supreme court, was filed Saturday with the clerk of the superior court in this city. The plaintiffs in the case are Leone Balfe Cottrell, Nicholas Cottrell, Leone Cottrell, Elizabeth Cottrell and Edward Cottrell, Jr. The reasons for the appeal are set forth as follows:

1.—The court erred and mistook the law in overruling the claim of law stated in paragraph 42 of subdivision III of the finding.

2.—The court erred and mistook the law in overruling the claim of law stated in paragraph 43, of the subdivision III of the finding.

3.—The court erred and mistook the law in overruling the claim of law stated in paragraph 44 of the subdivision III of the finding.

4.—The court erred and mistook the law in reaching the conclusion of law set forth in paragraph 41 of the sub division II of the finding.

5.—The court erred and mistook the law in failing to render judgment for the plaintiffs as prayed for under the third count of their complaint and as claimed in paragraphs VII and VIII of the Prayer of Relief because the transaction referred to having been found by the court to be not a gift but a contract from sale and said contract not having been performed by the defendant, Arthur Cottrell, individually, but having been denied and repudiated by him, the stock which is the subject matter of said contract and belonged to the estate and the defendants should be ordered and directed to do all things necessary to confirm title thereto in the estate and to account for the dividends received.

7.—The court erred and mistook the law in failing to render judgment for the plaintiff as claimed in paragraphs 7 and 8 of the Prayer of Relief because the court having found that with respect to the transaction referred to, Edgar Cottrell did not intend to and did not make a gift of said stock but did intend to sell the same to Arthur Cottrell and that Arthur Cottrell did not intend to buy said stock but claimed that the stock was a gift and it appearing from the facts found that there was not a legal delivery of said stock certificate there was no meeting of the minds of said Edgar Cottrell and said Arthur Cottrell with respect to said transaction the claimed gift was ineffectual to pass the title and therefore as a matter of law the plaintiffs are entitled to the relief demanded.

8.—The court erred and mistook the law in failing to render judgment for the plaintiff as claimed for under the third count for their complaint and as claimed in paragraphs 7 and 8 of the Prayer of Relief because the court having found that with respect to the transaction referred to, Edgar Cottrell did not intend to and did not make a gift of said stock but did intend to sell the same to Arthur Cottrell and that Arthur Cottrell did not intend to buy said stock but claimed that the stock was a gift and it appearing from the facts found that there was not a legal delivery of said stock certificate there was no meeting of the minds of said Edgar Cottrell and said Arthur Cottrell with respect to said transaction the claimed gift was ineffectual to pass the title and therefore as a matter of law the plaintiffs are entitled to the relief demanded.

9.—The court erred and mistook the law in failing to render judgment for the plaintiffs as prayed for in paragraphs 5 and 6 of the Prayer of Relief, because the court having found that with respect to the transaction referred to, Edgar Cottrell, did not intend to sell the same to Arthur Cottrell and that Arthur Cottrell did not intend to buy such stock but claimed that it was a gift to him there was no meeting of the minds of said Edgar Cottrell or Arthur Cottrell with respect to said transaction and therefore as a matter of law the plaintiffs are entitled to the relief demanded in paragraphs 5 and 6.

Railbird Season Opens

The open season for railbirds began Friday. The limit for a single day is 25 birds. The prospect of a good season for rail birds is not bright, according to John P. O'Connell of East Hampton whose word is considered an authority among sportsmen. Mr. O'Connell said he had talked with sportsman from Essex, Deep River and Lyme, where the best hunting grounds for rail birds are to be found and they said because of the scarcity of oats in the river and meadows, few rail birds have been seen.

If Solomon had had a telephone in his house he would have had to give up some of his 700 wives or all of his king business.

VOTED AT TWO CAUCUSES, MAY BE PENALIZED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, Sept. 14.—This is a morning when some people who keep in touch with things are wondering whether there will be arrests and court action and fines and jail sentences and all that sort of thing for some people who so far forgot the statutes of Connecticut, Saturday afternoon, as to participate in two caucuses held within the town of Killingly by the democratic and citizens' parties.

This little diversion of participating in caucuses of different political parties happens to be illegal in Connecticut, in this day and age. In fact the solons assembled at Hartford during the legislative session of 1923, did enact a statute that provides a fine of $100 and a sentence of 60 days in jail, or both, for people who do this thing. The statute referred to can be found in Chapter 22 of the Acts of 1923.

It may be assumed, and without doubt is true, that democrats whose names appear upon the caucus list of their party and who participated in the democratic caucus, were not aware that they were violating any state law when they later took part in the citizens' party caucus. But such is the fact.

Attorney E. L. Darbie, chairman of the republican town committee, was interested in this matter Sunday. What he is going to do about it he would not say at that time. When questioned about the matter he merely quoted the statute and pointed out what the penalties might be. He did say, too, that the printed ballots of the citizens' party will be scanned, once they appear, to find whose name heads the list of the pair of candidates for selectmen. It is claimed that this caucus named Thomas Bradford for first selectman. If the official ballots do not appear carrying Mr. Bradford's name in that position, in accord with the alleged action of the caucus, Chairman Darbie is likely to challenge the arrangement. Mr. Bradford said Sunday afternoon that Mr. Riley had been named both by the democratic and citizens' caucuses as candidate for first selectmen on both tickets.

Thus politics furnishes something of interest for the community—and demonstrates that there are many little angles, many little regulations that figure in a large way in getting a list of candidates before the public in an entirely regular way. Really, the science is almost as difficult as golf, and sometimes—sometimes—more expensive, depending on what one wants and how much he thinks it is worth to him!

POETRY

At Communion

The roll was read at church today.
Loved ones we stayed to weep.
Those whom this year God's finger touched
And stilled in deepest sleep;
They were called dead because no more
They're seen beneath the sun.
They were called dead and yet I saw
Them plainly every one;
They came to comfort me a while
And none was missing, none.

The dear grandmother, every trace
Of pain gone from her face;
The darling girl forever now
To wear her childhood's grace;
The queenly one, that smile and step
Shed radiance where she trod,
The wise old teacher, all whose words
Lifted us from the clod,
And valiant soldiers young and old
Who gave their souls to God.

And mine eyer were not the only eyes
They came to satisfy.
More real than many a presence there
That no one might deny;
"The truth to flesh and sense unknown"
The eye of faith may see.
And blessed bread and sacred wine
Were taken so lovingly
No less to them than Him who said
"In memory of Me."

Elizabeth West Parker in Boston Transcript.

Fleet of Dreams

Out across the seas of sleep
Drift pale argosies of night,
Some a tryst with horror keep;
Some, with mad delight.

One faded o'er unfathomed tides
Weighted low with ancient fears,
Silently another glides
Freighted deep with tears.

Floats the laughter of a child
That has fled its house of pain
Spectres troop from closes aisled
Where fresh earth has lain.

Visions pass that ravished eyes
Strain to see through chancrous years
Melodies from others rise
Like the scent of flowers.

From their swift shapes mist and press,
Eager faces through the gloom,
Bearing tidings none may hear,
From the deeps of doom.

No veiled hint of meaning gleams
From the phantoms fugitive.
These dim caravels of dreams
Cryptic answers give.

Each one for a moment's space
Touches at the ports of night,
Then on courses none may trace
Sets its sails in flight

On what embassies they face
To what anchorage they press
Secrets are. They venture where
None that live may guess

The silver fox farming industry in Prince Edward island is now yielding an annual cash revenue of over $1,000,000 and producing excellent profits for the farmers. The pelts sent from the farmers to the last fur auction in Montreal realized the highest prices there.

The American aviators' round-the-world trip airplanes are Douglas machines with 400-horse power engines. They weigh 4,300 pounds and in each case the lift is 3,615 pounds, counting men, food, equipment and fuel. The total weight is 6,915 pounds. The span of the machines, worn to standboard, is fifty feet, and they fly at about eighty miles an hour as normal speed.

Long Island wives boast their meals with thanks to the ingenuity of an employe of a lighting company, who, when two hot boilers showed leaks that would make necessary a curtailment of service on locomotives for them while they were being repaired. Two engineers ceived the idea of substituting train rented from a railroad at a reported rate of $200 a day, pumped away for three days and then went back to hauling commuters to and from New York.

In South Africa mines grease is an important aid in the extraction of diamonds. A table with a riffled top is smeared with about half an inch of grease. Concentrated ore is then passed over the table with the aid of running water. Garnet and olivine have no affinity for grease, but diamonds adhere to the greasy surface. The grease is later removed, heated and run off, the diamonds being left in the vessel. They are then boiled in sulphur acid, for cleansing purposes, and sorted.

TO EXACT 100 PER CENT ASSESSMENT OF STOCKHOLDERS OF DEFUNCT PUTNAM BANK

Constantly Alert

Comptroller of the Currency Dawes Has Authorized Receiver Coffin to Take Necessary Legal Steps to Enforce Payment of the Assessment—Initial 25 Per Cent Payment Will Be Due October 20, With Final 25 Per Cent Payable on or Before January 20, 1925—Stockholders-Depositors Must Share With Other Depositors Any Loss, Should There Be a Loss.

Putnam, Sept. 15—Stockholders of the First National Bank, wrecked by the peculations of its cashier, G. Harold Gilpatric, former state treasurer, who attempted suicide by shooting on August 7, will be called upon in the next few days to pay over to the receiver, George W. Coffin, an assessment of 100 per cent., according to an announcement received by the stockholders from Comptroller of the Currency Henry M. Dawes today.

This action follows official announcement made recently that Cashier Gilpatric's accounts at the bank showed a shortage of $700,000. The assessment will amount to $150,000, each stockholder being called upon to pay 100 per cent. Payments will be due on or before October 20, 1924. Receiver Coffin is authorized by the comptroller to employ all necessary steps by law to enforce payment of assessment.

Letters sent to the stockholders [illegible] Mr. Coffin has not been authorized by the comptroller to grant an extension in case interested stockholders who [illegible] ent of the assessment on or before October 20, and who will give [illegible] satisfactorily secured, to pay 25 per cent. additional on or before November 20, 25 per cent. on or before December 20, and the remaining 25 per cent. on or before January 20.

Receiver Coffin stated that cash [illegible] the stockholders may have on deposit at the bank cannot be used for payment of the assessment as it has not been definitely determined that the bank can pay its depositors 100 cents on the dollar and should there be a loss, the stockholders must share with the other depositors in meeting this loss.

Stockholders, however, who have securities in safe-deposit boxes, at the bank will be permitted ot sell these securities if they so desire to raise money to meet the assessment.

Putnam citizens see indications in a series of conferences now being held that the new bank proposed, The Citizens' National Bank, will be granted its charter and will open its doors for business in the near future. Following a conference last Friday between the citizens' committee, in charge of negotiations for the new bank, and H. H. McKee, a Washington banker sent here as the personal representative of the comptroller to inquire into the Putnam banking situation, two more conferences were held today, one this morning at the First National Bank and a second this evening at the Chamber of Commerce. No statements were given out after the sessions.

It was indicated today that Receiver Coffin has been gathering together all cash available after the wrecking of the First National Bank and that in the near future the depositors will receive a partial payment on their claims. Depositors will be called upon this week to file such claims at the bank.

OBSTRUCTIONS TO GENERAL AGREEMENT AT GENEVA

Geneva, Sept. 15.—(By The A. P.)—While Foreign Minister Benes of Czecho-Slovakia presiding as a kind of impartial judge and councillor, French and French representatives at the assembly of the League of Nations united all today with the problem of security which forms the gravest obstacle in the way of a general agreement on disarmament both countries nevertheless voiced optimistic sentiments. They said the vital issue of security seemed on the road toward a satisfactory solution. Whether this general agreement will take the form of a resolution, a protocol or a treaty has not yet been decided but this question has been relegated to a second place because of the proposal put forward today with the force of France behind it, that a clause be inserted in the covenant of the League of Nations which makes it possible for any country to engage in any war which effectively and hermetically sealed.

The French propose that the [illegible] in Article 16 of the covenant whereby the nations agreed not to resort to war until three months after an award by arbitrators or a report by the council of the league, be taken from the covenant. This is in accordance with the French desire that any and all causes of war shall be submitted to pacific settlement by the world court, by specially appointed arbitrators or by the council of the league.

Although today's meeting was entirely private, it is understood that one of the most difficult points of the discussion was the question of just what Great Britian will come forward with in assistance to the league when a state has been declared an aggressor.

The British delegation gives the impression of being somewhat alarmed over the elation engendered among the continental powers by Britain's implied engagement to throw her naval forces against a proclaimed aggressor and there has seemed to have been created on the part of the British representatives a distinct tendency to refrain from any definite and specific commitments.

The efforts today were largely centered about securing clarification of Article 16 of the covenant. Paragraph 1 of this article says that the council shall recommend what military, naval or air forces the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armed suasion which will be used to protect the league covenant. This suggestion of a recommendation is hardly satisfactory to France which wants something more definite and something stronger.

SKIPPER WITH APPENDICITIS REFUSED TO LEAVE BRIDGE

Boston, Sept. 15—The story of a skipper who refused to leave the bridge of his ship even for an operation for appendicitis was told today when the liner Scythia arrived here from Liverpool and Queenstown with a new captain in charge. Captain William Prothero, who became ill on the Scythia's eastward voyage, is recuperating at his home in England and Captain F. G. Brown is in temporary command.

On the third day out from Boston on the last voyage, officers said, Captain Prothero developed an acute attack of appendicitis. He refused to leave the bridge even when physicians decided on an immediate operation, and remained in his bridge cabin while Sir John Bland-Sutton, president of the Royal College of Surgeons and one of the most eminent British authorities on surgery, who was a passenger, performed the operation which was successful.

Mrs. Sturges was born in New York 71 years ago. She was associated with Anna Held for several seasons. Her last appearance was in 1918 as a member of the "kick-in" company.

DAVIS SPEAKS AT GIGANTIC BARBECUE AT BUNCETON, O.

Eastwood Farm, Bunceton, O., Sept. 15.—(By the A. P.)—John W. Davis carried his fight for the presidency into the heart of agricultural Missouri today attending a gigantic barbecue at the farm home here of Dr. Arthur A. Nelson, democratic candidate for governor of Missouri.

Mr. Davis told his thousands of hearers grouped in a natural amphitheatre in front of the Nelson home, that this was a "fighting campaign" and "we still make war."

The democratic candidate had for an audience the greatest crowd ever gathered in rural Missouri, and he remarked that it was probably the largest assembly that ever met in to open to discuss governmental affairs.

Joshua A. Barbee, democratic state chairman, who was in charge of the celebration, estimated that between 40,000 and 50,000 persons were present. The vast crowd spread out over the expansive pastures surrounding the speakers to hear Mr. Davis and Dr. Nelson launch their Missouri campaigns. The voices of the speakers were carried distinctly to the edges of the assemblage through loud speakers.

Mr. Davis assailed "special privileges" and "corruption in office," denouncing Albert B. Fall and Harry M. Daugherty. Charles R. Forbes, Edwin Denby and others formerly connected with the republican administration.

FINDS BULL BUFFALO A DANGEROUS ANIMAL

Washington, Sept. 15—An apparently general belief that a buffalo will respond to friendly overtures by wagging its tail or proffering a hoof, has been rudely dispelled with delivery of several of the animals the National Park Service is distributing from the surplus Yellowstone Park herd.

A La Grange, Ind., recipient of a bison bull complained in a communication that the animal sent to him only a week ago, charges at every caller and has wrecked three fences. A little girl in Faust, N. Y., who said she had tired of her dog, three cats and rabbits and wanted an "affectionate buffalo to play with," was advised there was no such animal.

"Preparations are being made to begin shipping the most of the surplus herd, some 250 in number, about October 1. They are being given to applicants willing to pay the freight.

DECLARES PRESENT WAR IN CHINA MERELY A BUBBLE

It would run its course, in a few months, he said, without materially affecting the Peking government or the people.

Americans and other foreigners, Mr. Schurman added, are absolutely safe with the navies of all nations standing guard near the battle ground.

In the third "billion dollar day" this year, it was estimated that the government received approximately $350,000,000 in income tax installments and $275,000,000 in cash payments for the 2 3-4 per cent. treasury notes, recently offered. Expenditures totalling $500,000,000 included $377,000,000 to meet maturing treasury 5 1-2 per cent. notes and interest payments exceeding $100,000,000 on other government obligations.

Making Progress For Elimination of War

Declaration Made by President Coolidge in Greeting to American Legion Convention.

The "heavy drain upon the loyalty and patriotism of those able to defend" this country the president said, "always have been glorious, met, but the meeting of them has brought suffering and trained beyond all acquitting."

"It has represented a burden that must not again be laid upon the unthinking manhood of the nation, save in circumstances which makes it absolutely unavoidable.

"The thought of the world turns increasingly toward peace, its preservation and perpetuation. I am glad to say to the legion that this thought is more and more finding leadership and direction.

"We are justified, as never before, in the hope for great accomplishments through the cooperation of the nations, in the ways of peace. Highly important progress is making along the road which leads to the elimination of war from this world."

GERMAN CABINET DID NOT DISCUSS WAR GUILT

Berlin, Sept. 15 (By the A. P.)—A cabinet meeting was held today, presided over by Chancellor Marx, but the question of formal repudiation of Germany's war guilt was not among the subjects discussed. It is expected that a decision on the war guilt question will be taken next week after President Ebert's return from his vacation.

At the conclusion of the cabinet meeting Chancellor Marx and Foreign Minister Stresemann conferred at length on the subject of war guilt, and an official announcement was made later that "no difference exists between the chancellor and foreign minister." The statement added that the negotiations between Dr. Stresemann and Dr. Oscar Hergt, leader of the nationalist party, before the reichstag voted on the bills for making the Dawes plan effective, had the full approval of the chancellor and the entire cabinet.

A semi-official statement was issued tonight saying that all the cabinet members are in complete agreement regarding the question of war guilt and Germany's entry into the league of nations.

Both questions, according to this statement, will be dealt with thoroughly September 23, when President Ebert is expected to preside at a cabinet meeting.

BOSTON PATROLMAN SHOT IN BATTLE WITH GANGSTERS

Boston, Sept. 15.—One patrolman was shot and seriously wounded and a second was injured tonight when three gangsters clashed with three policemen in a running gun battle in the Northampton street-Shawmut avenue section. All three gunmen escaped.

The fight began when Patrolman David M. McCarthy was shot down by one of the members of the gang. McCarthy with two other officers, Benjamin Goodman and William M. Dooley, had approached a man whom the police said was known to them as "Irish" Collins and who was loitering before a saloon in Northampton street. As they began searching Collins, a companion opened fire with a revolver concealed in his pocket, shooting through the cloth. McCarthy dropped with a wound in his left side.

The gangsters fled, pursued by Dooley and Goodman. They fired at the officers who returned their bullets, none apparently taking effect. As the officers neared the intersection of Northampton street and Shawmut avenue, a third gangster leaped from a doorway and felled Officer Goodman. The three gunmen then escaped into an alley and were lost to pursuit.

Two men who had been in an automobile across the street from the shooting ran to Patrolman McCarthy's assistance as the officer dropped and took him to a hospital. Police say all three gangsters are well known to them. A large force of men is searching the neighborhood.

GAIN IN FOREIGN SHIPMENTS FROM NEW ENGLAND STATES

Substantial Increase in Value For the Second Quarter Over the Earlier Months of the Year—Connecticut Increased its Exports by $940,403.—Facts Disclosed at Convention of New England Workers in Mechanics' Building, Boston.

Boston, Sept. 15.—Each of the New England states showed a substantial increase in the value of foreign shipments for the second quarter of 1924 over the earlier months of the year, Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the department of commerce, said in an address tonight at the convention of the order of New England Workers in Mechanics' building. The meeting was held as part of the program of New England week, a movement to present New England products to New England people.

Quoting hitherto unpublished figures, Dr. Klein said that New England exports amounted to $90,000,000 for the six months ending June 30. Massachusetts, he said, increased its export trade for the second three months of 1924 over the preceding three months by $2,986,723; Connecticut by $940,403; Maine by $525,860; Rhode Island by $392,155; New Hampshire by $306,413, and Vermont by $130,217, a total increase for the six states of over $5,250,000.

"In Massachusetts we find increasing exports of cotton cloths and shoes," Dr. Klein said. "Connecticut showed gains in its exports of hardware, electrical machinery, tools, ammunition and fireworks; Maine shipped more pulp wood, leather, rubber boots, unbleached cotton cloth and canned fish. Rhode Island's improvement was comprised largely of shipments of cotton cloth, tools and rubber-soled canvas shoes. New Hampshire exported chiefly, consignments of knitting machines, leather boots and shoes, mining and oil well machinery and sulphite wood pulp; while Vermont showed larger exports of scales and balanced and household goods."

Dr. Klein, who brought to the convention the greetings of Secretary Hoover, declared that New England might look to the future of its commerce with confidence because of improved conditions in western agriculture and the promised economic stabilization of Europe.

"It has been estimated that the purchasing power of the western farmer be increased this year by approximately a billion dollars," he said. "This money will not be hoarded. It will be used to replenish stocks, make improvements and extensions to back new enterprise. And however, it is used there will be a demand for products made in this section. But New England cannot wait for this new business to come to her. Her good name and her good will are great in the marts of trade but many plates have to be burnished and she will renewed more frequently these days. New England must step out and get this business."

Besides the address of Dr. Klein those at the convention heard speeches broadcast from Springfield by Governor Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts, Governor Charles A. Templeton of Connecticut, Governor Fred H. Brown of New Hampshire, Lieutenant Governor Felix A. Toupin of Rhode Island, Governor-elect Ralph O. Brewster of Maine and H. S. Brigham, Vermont commissioner of agriculture.

The speeches were heard throughout New England and the radio station telephone hook-up to accompany the broadcasting was said to be the longest ever employed for a purely New England event. Six hundred miles of telephone wires were necessary to link the four broadcasting stations, it was estimated.

Mayor James M. Curley and Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston were other speakers. The officials at Springfield had been guests at the Eastern States Exposition and had been guests of Governor Cox at a noon luncheon.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Tells of Mrs. Vogel's Terrible Suffering and how she was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Detroit, Michigan.—"My troubles were severe pains in my back and terrible bearing-down pains in my right side, also headaches and sleepless nights. I first began having troubles when I was 15, and they have increased as I grew older. A little booklet was left at my door, and I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women and decided to try it. After the first week I could go to sleep every night and I stopped having that nervous feeling and got a better appetite. The doctor had always said that an operation was the only thing that would help me, but I never had any faith in an operation. Since the Vegetable Compound has started helping me I do not suffer the severe pains, feel stronger, and am able to do my own work. I am more than glad to tell my friends that it helps where other medicines have failed."—Mrs. Gus Vogel, 6608 Palouze St., Detroit, Michigan.

A record of fifty years service must convince women of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS WITHOUT A CONTEST

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Sept. 15.—Contrary to all expectations of hard fought battles at the democratic town caucus held Monday evening in th etown hall, the meeting was one of the shortest and most harmonious held by that party in some time. Interest had been centered on the tax collector's position and it was thought up to Monday noon that the present incumbent, Albert J. Peche, would strive for a nomination against Bert F. More, a new comer in the field. Collector Piche returned from a trip to Canada Sunday and when informed he was facing a contest he gave the matter consideration. He announced Monday that out of gratitude for the support his party had given him in electing him tax collector for two terms, he would rather withdraw his hat from the ring to give Mr. More an opportunity. He then pledged his support to Mr. More and at the caucus nominated him for the candidacy. All nominations were made unanimously. Chairman of the town committee, Frank P. Fenton, opened the meeting at 8 o'clock. Michael F. Sullivan was chosen chairman and Mr. Fenton, clerk. The session adjourned at 8.25 o'clock. The results follow: Assessor, Arthur J. Dubreuil; board of relief, Charles Palmer; first selectman, Russell A. Andrews, incumbent; second selectman, David P. Ahern; agent town deposit fund, John M. Bransfield, incumbent; auditor, John A. Gaudreau, John Reilly, incumbent and Jeremiah E. Sullivan. The last named is to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Walter R. King. The fourth district committees chosen for the coming town election were named in report by this district chairman and accepted by the caucus.

Brazil Ships Bulk of Coffee.

Three-fourths of the world's coffee is grown in Brazil. Europe and North America use nearly four-fifths of all the coffee produced. The world consumption now amounts to something like 3,000,000,000 pounds a year. Holland is the greatest coffee-drinking nation on the globe. It uses more than fifteen pounds per capita annually, while the people of the United States use about thirteen pounds.

Attractive Invitation.

Junior gave a party to his little friends, and insisted on writing his own invitations. He was a precocious youngster, especially in his diction; after the formal invitation had been written he added: "There will be indoor and outdoor amusements, 'eats' and other activities."

Opportunity.

The world with all its mystery spells opportunity. It means opportunity to be as well as to do, and opportunity for the personal life as well as for the general.—Hugh Black.

Breed Theater

A wife should not make a business of being a wife; she should make a game of it.

That is the moral to be found in Cytherea, Goddess of Love, a First National picture which is enjoying a successful engagement at the Breed theater this week. It was produced and personally directed by George Fitzmaurice for Samuel Goldwyn.

Adapted from Joseph Hergesheimer's most-discussed novel, it is enacted by a stellar cast that includes Lewis S. Stone, Alma Rubens, Norman Kerry, Irene Rich, Constance Bennett and Betty Bouton.

Miss Rich enacts the role of the young wife who discarded all romance when she said "yes" at the altar, and became immersed in her domestic duties. Her husband, played by Lewis Stone, despite the encroaching years, still was susceptible to the influence of love and romance, and could not understand his wife's unsympathetic and prosaic attitude.

Then a doll came into his life, a dainty little French doll whose features resembled those he had dreamed of. The doll represented his ideal of the woman, and he called it Cytherea, the name of the Ionian Goddess of Love.

One day he met the living image of the doll, and then began for him a series of startling adventures such as he had never conjured in his dreams or thoughts of love.

Mr. Fitzmaurice has turned out a beautiful picture in Cytherea.

Snub Pollard in Before the public and the Pathe news make up the remainder of the bill.

BROADWAY THEATER

The patrons of the Broadway theater again had the opportunity of viewing a crackerjack program of vaudeville and pictures yesterday, which sent everyone home happier for having seen it.

The vaudeville show opened with the Melroy Sisters in Songs and Steps. They are pretty, chic, clever and fit their songs and steps a delight.

Olyn Landick followed presenting Feminine Reflections. He is generally considered one of the best female impersonators, not only in appearance and gesture but in voice and manner.

Billy Zeck and Gladys Randolph offer a highly humorous skit called Grooming the Groom which is an attempt to bring the young man of the threshhold of matrimony into his own. This is done with bright dialogue, a few songs, some dances and a piano.

Lazar and Dale are blackface comedians. They present an Etheopian travesty entitled The Bazooma Hunters. The only aim of this combination is to bring fourth laughter and in this they certainly do succeed.

The Herberts close with a thrilling comedy gymnastic exhibition that immediately commands and holds attention.

A chorus of "ohs" and "ahs" punctured the atmosphere last night at the Broadway theater as an amazed and delighted audience witnessed the unfolding on the screen of Paramount's widely-heralded Wanderer of the Wasteland. By the time The End was flashed on the silver sheet even the most blase of those present would have been willing to testify that it was the most unusual film of the season. It is a pleasure to record that the picture more than fulfilled the high expectations aroused by the advance reports that had been circulated about it.

Palace Theater

The management of the Palace takes pleasure in announcing the presentation of Mabel Normand's latest picture The Extra Girl, which comes to that house on Thursday for a three day stay. The Extra Girl is a typical Mack Sennett comedy-drama and was directed by F. Richard Jones, who has directed Miss Normand in some of her biggest film successes.

Miss Normand is one of the most popular film stars of today and her coming to the Palace is hailed with delight by every movie fan in this city. In her new stellar production, there are a million laughs, a million thrills and a million reasons why the audiences will find the latest Normand production up to the Normand standard.

The male lead is handled by Ralph Graves, who puts another feather in his popularity cap and he gives the star splendid support. In several of the big scenes he is called up to give an athletic demonstration and his physical prowess is brought into bold relief. He fights the villain and there is a mighty good one in the film in the person of Ramsey Wallace as the wily, unscrupulous oil promoter.

The Extra Girl is a strong, vibrant, vigorous comedy, pulsating with all the thrills of intense drama and which carries a punch from start to finish.

Added attractions, new Telephone Girl story number nine, Fine showing of the Pathe news and Sport Light.

Palace Theater

Dante, noted European magician and wonder worker who is making his 2nd annual tour under the management of Thurston greatest of American necromancers, opened a three days engagement at the Palace theater last night, a special popular matinee will be given tomorrow, Wednesday. It stands unique in the annals of necromancy.

Featured in his performance are The Ghost Woman, psychic phenomenon of the age. You may ask her any question. She is said, to be unequalled as an exponent of mental telepathy.

"The ticket stands as reported to the secretary of state." This was the declaration Monday morning of Thomas Bradford, sponsor for the citizens' party in Killingly. It had been contended that the ticket was not reported for publication on the official ballots in accord with the action of the caucus, which named Thomas Bradford for first selectman and Patrick Riley for second selectman. Mr. Bradford explained Monday that Mr. Riley declined to run in second place, this creating a vacancy, he holds, and that under the power of filling vacancies given him by the caucus he had a right to make the change as noted. Mr. Bradford said Monday that he had received competent legal advice that the changes made are allowable under the circumstances.

As to his having taken part in the democratic caucus, where he voted, and as to his immediately afterwards acting as chairman of the citizens' party caucus, Mr. Bradford said that he had been legally advised that he committed no wrong in doing this, inasmuch as he cast no vote in the citizens' party caucus. Mr. Bradford would not deny, however, the probability that numbers of persons who attended both caucuses voted in both of them, which certainly is contrary to a statute of the state of Connecticut and for doing which heavy penalties may be inflicted.

There may be further developments of interest on the result of what are viewed in some minds as the irregularities incident to the affairs herein discussed, but nothing definite relative to the matter likely will be heard until some time later.

Ernest Aubin, an Attawaugan youth, must be a bit discouraged over his early motoring experiences. He made an appearance before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court Monday afternoon to answer to a charge of speeding, was fined $25 and costs, $20 of the fine being remitted. Aubin told Chief John McFarland who arrested him that he was learning to drive. The officer said Aubin first attracted his attention when he flashed down the street headed for the West Side. In a few minutes he came tearing back again, to find the officer waiting for him. Chief McFarland does not think the crowded business section of the borough is a good place for making speed tests. Youthful Mr. Aubin probably agrees with him this morning. It simply can't be done.

This continues to be a queer world. A man who came down street with a straw hat Monday morning heard about it from all sides. His attention was called to the fact that it was September 15. There is an unwritten law against men wearing straw hats on and after September 15 of each year. Somehow, most men observe it. Though the mercury climb to 90 degrees tomorrow, man will abide the ruling and swelter under some heavier type of headgear. And in the meantime, the women who have been wearing furs all summer, are discarding the furry pieces for low necked and sleeveless dresses, possibly that they may not be overcome with the cold next winter. It is a queer world and foolish custom and practices and superstitions help make it so. Sometimes vanity aids in adding to its queerness, but there are still some stubborn men who will not buy a certain type of hat because "the prince wears one," for the same reason they will not fall off a horse because his royal highness is addicted to doing that particular thing. Few of them are so stubborn, however, that they will challenge ridicule by wearing a straw hat from now on.

At the home on Academy street on Monday afternoon, at 1 o'clock, funeral services for Mrs. W. M. Judson were conducted by Rev. E. A. Legg of Stafford Springs, a former pastor of the Danielson Methodist Episcopal church. There were many relatives and friends of the family in attendance, including members of Mrs. Judson's Sunday school class of the Methodist church and members of the medical profession in Danielson. Burial was in Westfield cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Legg. The bearers were Judge W. Fenner Woodward, Charles S. Bill, Charles Bacon, Abner S. Young, William P. Perkins and Sidney H. Perry. There were many beautiful floral pieces. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Monday, the funeral of Mrs. Selina Tourcotte was held from her home in Goodyear, with services at St. Joseph's church in Danville at 9 o'clock. Rev. Ignatius Kost being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Numbers of relatives and friends attended the service. Burial was in St. Josephs cemetery. The bearers were Fred Vandale, Joseph Billings, Aldor Magoirle, Noe Boucher, David Morin and Joseph Vellieux. Louis A. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Though it has been weeks since the New Haven railroad had new rails put down through this section, the crossings at North street, at Hutchins street and at Franklin street are in bad condition, and rack all traffic passing over them. Only a few hours' work would be required to make the necessary improvements, but for some reason this work is long neglectedand delayed. In the meantime many impious things are being said about the matter, by people traveling over these crossings.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich will be here today (Tuesday) to conduct a clinic at the health station in the town hall building.

Upon the occasion of his visit to St. Alban's church Sunday, Rt. Rev. Edward Campion Acheson made a subscription of $100 toward the cost of fitting up a young people's room in the basement of the church.

A legal contest is in sight over insurance on the life of Michael Zybr, who met death in an accident near Arctic, R. I., a few days ago. Zybr, a former resident of Dayville, carried two life insurance policies, these being made payable to his former wife. He did not change the policies after the divorce and the former Mrs. Zybr is now claiming the money. There are two children of the Zybr marriage and it is in their interest and to see that they do not become charges upon the town of Killingly that the contest over disposition of the insurance money is developing. The former Mrs. Zybr si now a resident in Rhode Island.

PUTNAM

Members of Putnam's Headquarters company of the 43rd division, C. N. G., have learned that they will have an opportunity, possibly, of entering the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. The opportunity comes by virtue of the possibility of one of three appointments allotted to the National Guard of the State of Connecticut.

The Headquarters Company has a number of enlisted men who are well qualified by actual experience as soldiers and education to pass the test. To be eligible to compete for the appointments, applicants must be enlisted men of a unit recognized by the federal government. They must, on the day of admission, July 1, 1925, be between the ages of 19 and 22 years, and must be at least five feet, four inches in height. Continuous service is not essential. Members of the local company will just come inside the list of eligibles having had a year's service as the Putnam Headquarters Company was federalized on June 6th this year.

Preliminary examinations will be held at the office of the adjutant general, Hartford, between November 1st and 10th before a board to be selected. Candidates selected at this preliminary examination will be authorized by the war department to report for the regular entrance examinations to West Point to be held beginning March 4th of next year. Qualified candidates will be awarded the appointments in the order of merit as established at this competitive examinations. It is an unusual opportunity for those who would like to make their profession that of an officer in the United States Army.

Funeral services for Deputy Sheriff George F. Holbrook were held at the Holbrook home on South Main street, Monday afternoon at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. John C. Stoddard of the Baptist church, assisted by members of the Woman's Relief corps. The gathering included members of the G. A. R., W. R. C. Also present were County Sheriff Charles E. Gates and a number of his deputies, members of the bar and other friends.

Deputy Holbrook had held office for over 30 years. It was his wish that he should remain in office as long as he should live and the fact that he continued to receive appointment to office, although bedridden for almost five years, was of the greatest satisfaction, and pleasure to him. He was a veteran of the Civil war, was wounded at the charge on Fort Wagner and survived the southern prisons at Bell Isle and Libby.

According to a publication devoted to life insurance $91,000 was paid to beneficiaries in Putnam during 1923. Among the largest single payments was that to the beneficiary under a policy carried by Captain Remie De'age of the Putnam police department amounting to $19,469.

Captain Delage was killed in an automobile accident in May, 1923. The captain and Alderman Honorius Magnan went to Worcester from Putnam following a meeting of the common council. On the return trip the car in which they were riding struck the abutment of an underpass between Webster and Oxford, Mass. Alderman Magnan was instantly killed. Captain Delage was taker to a Worcester hospital where he died within two weeks. While it was generally believed in Putnam that Captain Delage was at the wheel, the coroner found that Magnan was driving.

When the criminal session of the superior court adjourned Friday night, after the case of State vs Frank W. Russell, charged with perjury, had been started, the jury was told to report Wednesday morning to continue with the trial. Since the adjournment of court State's Attorney Charles E. Searls, has nolled the case against Russell and members of the jury have been notified not to appear. The only other case on the criminal list for the session of court was that of state vs Zepherin Bergeron of Putnam charged with violation of the liquor law, which will either be continued or nolled.

The Russell case had attracted a considerable amount of interest in Putnam as the defendant is well known in the city where for years he conducted a restaurant on Pomfret street. He also owned the building in which the restaurant was located and leased rooms on the second story.

The state police conducted a raid on several of these rooms two months ago and arrested two men and two women. Charges were made by the city prosecuting attorney against the quartette for keeping and frequenting a disorderly house and for keeping a place where liquor was kept for sale. The two women were found guilty, one paid a fine and the other was sent to jail for a short term. One of the men, Walter Scott, paid a small fine as a frequenter. Harvey LeClair was found not guilty.

LeClair was charged with keeping the place, but when Russell, the owner, testified in the city court that he did not let the rooms to LeClair but to a woman named Nellie Jacques, LeClair was found not guilty and was discharged.

No sooner had Russell given this testimony than he was placed under arrest on a charge of perjury on complaint of the prosecuting attorney. Russell was taken at once from the courtroom upstairs to the police station below. The next morning he was in the city court, where probable cause was found and he was held for the superior court in bonds of $5,000. He spent two nights and days in the police station when his employers, the Beachmont Worsted company, for whom he manages the French River (m. Mechanicsville, put up a cash bond and he was released. The trial started late Friday afternoon and two witnesses had been heard when court adjourned to Wednesday.

Incidental to the putting up of a cash bond was the fact that the $5,000 was deposited in the First National bank. Archibald Macdonald, clerk of the city court, who was responsible for the bond money, withdrew the money Monday, the bank closing its doors Tuesday. In view of the situation at the bank, Attorney Macdonald felt it his duty to remove the money which was not his own but for which he was liable, as clerk of the court. The money is therefore available for the bondsman.

Bergeron is another well known Putnam man. He and a man named McManus from Worcester, conducted a small restaurant on Providence street. The police made a raid on the place and searched it for intoxicating liquor. Bergeron, according to the testimony in the lower court, was in a rear room in the act of taking a drink of whiskey from a bottle. No other liquor was fcund.

Bergeron did not deny that he was taking a drink nor that the liquid was whiskey. He said he got it in Worcester and was just taking an appetizer before eating his supper. Both McManus and Bergeron were fined $100 and appealed to the superior court. McManus paid just before the criminal term of the superior court opened, but Bergeron was in court last Friday ready to go to trial. Whether he will be tried at some future time depends upon the action of the states atorney.

NEW ENGLAND WEEK.

New England week is with us. In anticipation of it several weeks of preparations have been made in order to set forth the merits of the idea and to get the cooperation of the various states.

New England week is for the purpose of setting forth and developing the possibilities of all of the six states. It is for the purpose of directing attention to New England enterprises and products that the people within this part of the country may know what is produced here and what of their necessities and luxuries may be obtained here.

From time to time there have been industrial exhibits arranged in the cities for much the same purpose. Whenever such have been held they have been a revelation to a large proportion of the people, who find they know little or nothing about what is produced within the limits of their own community and are naturally surprised when they find out.

On a much larger scale the New England week is intended for the same purpose. Instead of being confined to a community it embraces the whole six states. It is a movement for the benefit of New England and a time when New England should and probably will rise to its opportunities.

It is to be expected that there will be widespread cooperation in the week.

The manner in which Northern merchants and manufacturers are to enter into it indicates an appreciation of its importance. Much time has been devoted to arousing the proper interest in it and it is to be hoped that it will not fail to bring about a re-purse.

New England has reason to be conscious of its opportunities, of its natural resources and its future. It will be more gratifying when those enough who consider it worth while to make a fuss about it. Whatever stirs up a greater interest in New England and New England products means just that much more success for New England.

FOR HIGHWAY SAFETY.

When the bureau of public roads in the federal department of agriculture gives expression to the belief that the greatest importance attaches to the consideration of highway safety it voices the sentiments of a large part of the people of the country. Some states and cities have been brought to a greater realization of this than others, but it is impossible that the conditions which are daily being discussed do not bring one to such a conclusion regardless as to where they may be located.

From the bureau's study of the highway problem it advocates these principles in order to obtain greater highway safety:

The development of safe roads by the elimination of all known dangers in so far as such elimination is possible within physical and economic limitations.

Warning of uneliminated dangers by means of easily recognized signs and other devices of standard form, uniformly placed with respect to the danger.

The development of safe vehicles by perfection of running parts and adoption of safety devices.

Diligence and care in the licensing of drivers of drivers to eliminate the incompetent, careless and irresponsible driver.

The development of simple, uniform and effectual traffic regulations and the education of the whole public to a common acquaintance with them.

The rigid enforcement of traffic regulations.

These are principles to which more careful consideration has been given. There are states where for the most part they are being followed. There are others where partial endorsement will be found and others where they are still thinking about a situation which is steadily growing worse and there is a failure to keep up with the requirements.

It is folly to attempt to ignore the importance of taking all possible steps for the safety of the highways. Delay is simply making the problem all the harder, giving encouragement to lax conditions and inviting more of those highway fatalities that are already too numerous.

THE FRENCH DEBT.

If we are to judge from reports coming from France that country has been clinging to the idea that the war debt to this country would not have to be paid. The impression seems to be that France has delayed all talk of funding the debt in the belief that we would cancel it. No encouragement in that direction has been obtained from this side of the ocean for it could not be overlooked that such an arrangement has been carried out between this country and Great Britain and Finland, and other countries are making plans to such an end.

The move for an adjustment of the matter comes after France has been given to understand that this government is disposed to be lenient, that it will not press for immediate payment, that a moratorium will be agreeable and the interest will probably be cut in two from the five per cent rate at which it now stands. In connection with the British and other debts payments are to extend over a long term of years. That arrangement will be made in the case of France so that it may be 70 years before the debt is wiped out.

What causes the greatest satisfaction at this time is the apparent willingness of the French authorities to make preparations for such a settlement. It must of course get consideration in connection with other expenditures and other taxation. It must be brought into the budget in the future, and even though France hasn't been balancing its budget provision for it must be made. That is where a hard rub is coming for France but that urges such readjustments as will meet it.

Ground has apparently existed for convincing France that there was no possibility of having the debt cancelled. The announcement that it is now ready to move for the funding of the debt would indicate that it has been convinced and that the arrangements which have been proposed are so favorable as to warrant their acceptance at no distant date. France hasn't been in the habit of repudiating its debts. It doesn't appear to be committed to any such policy at this time.

DEFENSE DAY TEST.

In spite of all the opposition that was raised, and the political capital which some tried to make by opposing it, Defense day from the accounts of its observance throughout the country must be regarded as a success. Such at least is the way in which Secretary Weeks of the war department and General Pershing regard it.

There were those who tried to decry it under the claim of standing for peace and against war preparations, but it isn't possible to get very far with pleas which stand in the way of providing a proper defense for one's country and one's home.

To some the chance of making a political appeal in connection with it could not be lost. Governor Bryan of Nebraska took up the cudgel immediately and apparently sought to swing the country to his support for the vice presidency by displaying his opposition. He rallied a certain few to his attitude but he found that it wasn't taking in his own state and it must have been convincing to others who argued with him that it did not represent the sentiment of the people.

The demand was not for creating the war spirit. It was not for giving encouragement to militarism. It was for the purpose of taking inventory of our means of defending ourselves in case it becomes necessary, and there was a gratifying showing made. There were spots where the idea was grasped much better than in others. Some places had bigger and better turnouts of civilian resources than did others, but the first of the test days will serve as a guide for others, and it is safe to say that the interest in our defense system will continue to show steadily increasing interest from year to year.

The test of Defense day as well as of the system was satisfactory.

MACDONALD'S MISTAKE.

Premier MacDonald of Great Britain is coming in for some criticism, and as time goes on he may hear more from it, because he has accepted a gift of 30,000 pounds in stock of a concern. He explains that the sum does not come to him outright, but that he is to have the income from it for the upkeep of his automobile. Likewise he points out that it comes from a friend of long standing who is interested in providing the means whereby he can live up to his office.

So far that is good. It might also be said that there were other premiers who were given substantial legacies for the same purpose. One of his predecessors, Lloyd George, received a handsome gift from Andrew Carnegie. There is no question but what he had a right to receive it, and the same is true concerning Premier MacDonald.

What bothers, however, is the fact that three months following the establishment of this annuity by Alexander Grant he was made a baronet by Premier MacDonald. That is where the rub comes. It is already creating the impression that the fund for maintaining the automobile for what obtained the baronetcy, and of course it is going to be hard for Premier MacDonald to satisfactorily explain it, whether it was or whether it was not. It is bound to bob up among the opponents of the premier at election and probably other times.

Perhaps the premier made no mistake in accepting the fund and later making the donor a baronet, but if he didn't his mistake lies in being found out.

"What were those lights in your house that I saw along toward 3 o'clock this morning?" asked the interested neighbor. "I just happened to be awake and noticed lights bobbing round, but they went out after a few minutes, so I didn't think anybody could be sick."

"Nobody sick," responded Eve. "Just burglars."

"Burglars! And you say it calmly. Anybody would think you got burgled every night and would be disappointed if they didn't call on you at 3 each morning. I do hope they got that red dress of yours that makes you look almost like a broiled lobster every time you wear it!"

"Sorry to disappoint you," giggled Eve, "but they really got nothing, so far as we can learn. They had a long ladder like those that painters use and they put that against the back of the house and climbed to the second story and pushed up a window that was open just a crack. It happened to be the window of Bridget's room and the rush of cold air woke her. And then when she saw a man's head coming through you should have heard her yell."

"What happened then?"

"Of course, I wasn't present, and this is only hearsay evidence," Eve resumed with maddening deliberation. "But he must have been a sort of amateur burglar, for Bridget says that instead of shooting her, as a well-trained burglar should have done, his head disappeared and she rushed to the window in time to see him getting off that ladder in record pace.

"By that time Bill was up and in his bathrobe and he got to Bridget's room just in time to see her pull her head inside and start a fine exhibition of hysterics. I turned on the light and between us we got her calmed down enough to find out what it was all about.

"Then we took Bill's flashlight and saw that every door and window was fastened right and we locked Bridget's window and escorted her to the guest room, so that she could feel safe for the remainder of the night. And that is when you saw our light, I suppose, as the guest room is opposite your room."

"And they didn't get a thing?" quirled the neighbor disappointedly.

"No, but they will cost us something before we get through, for if we want to keep Bridget we will have to put an iron grille on that window of hers to keep out untimely visitors.

"And the funny thing is that while we can't find anything of ours is missing, that man left a trail of the handsomest table and the loveliest linen towels all down the walk on the garden side of our house. It is lovely stuff, with the most artistic monogram on it. But I don't know anybody with the initials V. L. T., do you?"

"V. L. T.!" exclaimed the neighbor getting suddenly excited. "You show me that linen quick. Eve Gordon! Where is it? Did you get it all? Is it hurt any? I thought I'd closed that linen closet last night and this morning the door was open and the top drawer pulled out, but I was in a hurry to come over here and see what had happened to you so I just pushed the door close and ran over without looking.

"Yes, that's it," she sighed as Eve produced a neat pile of linens. "Let me count 'em.

"Yes," she added after a minute, "all here and not hurt a bit. But my land o'Goshen! That was a close call! That is the linen Neil and Betty and I have been embroidering for a wedding gift for the girl our brother Will is to marry Violet L. Todd.

"Here I sleep through it all while we was bein' burgled and only woke up after you flashed that light. I must get right home and count our silver! I told those men that came to repair our roof that they better not let their ladder lie round, but they said it was safe there and they'd get it today. Their ladder was safe, all right, but I only hope I can say the same for my silver," her voice trailed off as she gathered up her precious linens and made a dash for home.—Exchange.

Head Won Success, Then Started at the Bottom

As a boy, following a Missouri mule hitched to a plow, Walter W. Head dreamed of the time when he would be a teacher. As a teacher, he aspired to commercial success. Then he sank all his money, lost an opportunity for higher honors in the educational field, and started over again.

Son of an Adrian, Mi., farmer who moved to Missouri, the boy worked in the fields and went to the country school. His ambition to teach caused him to work his way through the Missouri Normal school. He taught at the old Sampson school in the country and at the end of three years was chosen principal of public schools at DeKalb, Mo. Married and receiving a salary of $75 a month in his chosen profession, he believed success certain.

Having saved $1000, he invested in a local hardware store. Then he learned that the concern was tottering. He ran for county school superintendent, tossed coins with his opponent and lost. Just as the outlook seemed darkest, the president of the local bank offered him a position in the DeKalb State bank at $30 a month.

Head accepted and frugality was needed, for there now were three in the family. Left in charge of the bank, he loaned $700 on "20 mules," then found there was only one, and had to talk the father of the borrower into making good the loan. Then he received his $1000 from the hardware store's liquidation.

In three years the bank's deposits increased 750 per cent. For two years Head was state and national bank examiner, after which he accepted a position with the American National Bank of Saint Joseph. Two years later he was made cashier, bought a farm and accumulated a competency.

After serving nine years, he was called to be vice president of the Omaha National Bank of Omaha, Neb. Three years later, at 43, he was elected president.

And last year he was elected president of the American Bankers' Assn., composed of 23,000 bankers. He teaches a Sunday school class, writes articles on thrift and banking, and owns one of the largest and best farms in Missouri.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Mr. Kingfisher at Work

"Put out your tongue but don't you sneeze.
There, there, don't tremble at the knees.
Nothing's the matter; you're not ill.
So I'll prescribe only a Candy Pill.

quacked the famous duck doctor when Little Jack Rabbit hopped into the good doctor's office. After filling a tiny round box with pink candy pellets, Dr. Quack wrote on the cover:

"One every minute until you are worse;
Then take the whole box."

"Dearest me," sighed the bunny boy, "shall I take one now?"

"Suit yourself," answered the kind duck doctor as the little rabbit hopped down the front steps. As soon as he was out of sight, he opened the box and ate two tiny pellets; then three more until, pretty soon, there were none left.

"Oh, my! How well I feel," laughed the bunny boy, and away he went, faster than ever, clippety clip, lippety lip, until all of a sudden, just like that, quick as the wind that blows off your hat, he heard a strange sound, something like a watchman's rattle. Looking up, the little rabbit saw Mr. Kingfisher alight on a dead limb which hung far out over the Old Mill Pond. The dark crest on his large head gave him a rather fierce look and his big, heavy bill made a splendid fishing pole.

As the little rabbit stood admiring his handsome bluish-gray feather coat, he noticed a belt of the same color across his white breast and a small white spot just in front of each eye. Then all of a sudden, down went Mr. Kingfisher, head first into the water, with a great splash, and the next moment rose with a silvery perch struggling in his great bill.

But goodness me! The fish was too large to be easily managed and Mr. Kingfisher had to beat its head against the limb. Even then it was no easy matter to swallow it for its tail hung out of Mr. Kingfisher's bill until, with a great effort, he gulped it down his throat.

As if quite pleased with himself, he gave a flirt to his tail and a harsh rattle, and looked down at the little rabbit.

"That was some job," he said. "The fins stuck in my throat. Now I must get another fish for Mrs. Kingfisher and the little ones," and into the water he plunged again, rising the next minute with a wriggling perch in his bill. Then off to his nest in a hole in a sand bank along the river he flew.

But the rabbit didn't follow. No siree. He had no time for that. Besides he knew that he wouldn't be able to see the kingfisher family at supper in a nice room which had been hollowed out at the end of a long tunnel five feet in length. There wasn't much of a nest there,—just a lot of sticks, bark, fish bones, and grass, but the kingfishers liked their home and came back to it every year, and when the young ones had grown large enough to fly, Mr. and Mrs. Kingfisher taught them how to dive and fish from a limb overhanging the river.

The great enemy of teeth

Film is the great enemy of tooth beauty. And a chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of pyorrhea and most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. It holds food in contact with teeth, inviting the acid that causes decay.

You can't have prettier, whiter teeth; you can't have healthier teeth unless you combat that film.

Mail the coupon now. Don't expect the same results from old type dentifrices. Begin beautifying your teeth today.

A Little Talk on Thrift

Using One's Savings

The intelligent employment of one's savings constitute quite as important a part of thrift as the original practices of saving.

The newspapers are constantly recording the stories of people whose savings have been lost through various schemes of fraudulent or worthless investment and constant allurements are being held out by unscrupulous persons who make offers of fabulous returns to those who are willing to entrust their hard earned savings to them. It is to be borne in mind that any form of investment suggestive of abnormal returns should be viewed with suspicion.

In several cities quite recently there have been men brought before the bar of justice for defrauding the savvy in amounts aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars. These operations work terrible hardships. Those who are robbed are quite often poor widows or elderly persons who through these misfortunes are made paupers for the rest of their lives. It is not enough that the charlatans who invent and execute these fraudulent schemes are given the penalty of the law. Every possible step should be taken to prevent repetitions of these practices.

Greater public education along practical lines is necessary.

Those who come in contact with the public should be qualified to discuss funds with persons who offer extravagant rewards.

There is not enough general understanding of the most simple fundamentals of finance. It is too easy for the mountebank to appeal to imagination and credulity of his victims.

The greatest barrier against fraud is practical education. Those who assume leadership in public thought have not discharged their duties when they teach the trift in public thought have not discharged their duties when they teach the thrift that consists only in saving money and those who are in a position to give advice and instructions on personal economics should realize the danger that may come from lessons in thrift and economy that are only half taught.—American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Just Rooming There.

An anxious colored boy slipped up to a policeman the other evening and inquired: "Officer, do you know whether Sam White has been 'rested?"

The policeman suggested that he better go to the police station and inquire. The little colored fellow didn't want to do that and went into an explanation.

"Yer see," he said, "my mother sent me over to see 'cause he rooms at our house—he's my mother's husband!"

Her Own Opinion.

The night was exquisite. The milky way was a cool slow of light with Mars and the north star shining in all their glory. The party contained only girls, girls who were living again the experiences of similar nights. One was dreaming of her last house party and one just back from the shore was lost in a reverie of just such a night spent tramping along the beach with a life guard.

Suddenly the moon, looking like a slice of orange, shot up from behind the dark trees. Memories grew poignant. Finally someone from the depths of the pillows found utterance.

"Look at that moon!" Doesn't it thrill you to death?" casting her weather eye heavenward, she who was supposed to be in love answered calmly enough, "Well, it does light things up a bit."

POETRY

Prairie Flower

On a distant prairie where the heather wild,
In its quiet beauty lived and smiled,
Stands a little cottage; and the creeping vine
Loved around its porch to twine.
In this peaceful cottage lived a little child,
Her blue eyes beaming soft and mild
And the wavy ringlets of her sunny hair

Chorus—
Fair as the lily, joyous and free,
Light of the prairies home was she.
Every one who knew her felt the gentle power
Of Rosa Lee, the prairie flower.

On the distant prairie, when the days were long,
Tripping like a fairy, sweet and the birds at play,
Beautiful and bright as they,
In the twilight shadows gathered in the west
And the voice of nature sang to rest.
Like a cherub kneeling, seemed the lovely child,
With her gentle eyes so mild.

But the summer faded, and the chilly blast
O'er that cottage swept at last.
When the autumn song birds woke the dewy morn,
Little prairie flower was gone,
For the angels whispered softly in her ear:
"Child, the Father calls thee, stay not here."
And they gently bore her, robed in spotless white
To their homes of light.
—Author Unknown.

IN FLOWERING FIELDS

Come to the fields where there is room
For tress to grow and flowers to bloom,
Far from the marts with clatter loud
Where men each other press and crowd.
And you are jostled every day
As if you were in some one's way.
Come to the fields of rich perfume
Where for you there is lots of room.

Come to the fields where all may live
Each with the rights their neighbors give.
Where there is no vain rivalry,
But all is loving harmony.
Should some new flower desire to bloom,
For it the others will make room.
As to its wish they gladly yield,
More beautiful becomes the field

Forget your troubles for a while
And sit beneath kind Nature's smile.
Through skies of blue toward Heaven look,
And dream beside the meadow brook
As it goes dancing on its way,
Singing the songs of yesterday
Come out into the flowering fields
And feel what joy an hour reveals!

Come to the fields, where all is pure.
From foul temptation quite secure;
The sunshine brings to us new health,
Fresh air o'erwhelms us with its wealth.
Happy indeed is he who yields
Himself up to flowering fields.
Where, for all things but sin and gloom,
In flowering fields, is ample room.
—Thomas F. Porter in Boston Globe.

JUDGE ROBINSON SUSTAINS WILL MADE BY MRS. MARY T. RING

Monday morning, at the court of common council chambers, at the court house, a hearing on the application of Miss Mary M. Ring of this city to probate the will of her mother, Mary T. Ring, who died at St. Francis hospital in Hartford, on July 26th, 1924, was held before Otto B. Robinson of Willimantic, who sat as acting judge of probate for the District of Norwich, in place of Judge Nelson J. Ayling, who ruled himself disqualified to hear the application. Judge Robinson, who isjudge of probate for the district of Windham, opened the hearing at the office of Judge Ayling at 10 o'clock, standard time, but at the suggestion of the lawyers interested, the hearing was adjourned to the council chambers where more space was available, for the parties, counsel and the witnesses. Mrs. Sadie Machol, official court stenographer for New London county was present and took stenographic notes of the entire proceedings. The application, Miss Mary M. Ring, was represented by her counsel William H. Shields and Thomas M. Shields, and appearing in opposition to the probating of the will were Mrs. Ring's three sons, Charles B. Ring, of Springfield, Mass., Bernard Ring and Joseph Ring, both of this city who were represented by their counsel Attorney William B. McKechnie, of Springfield. Former Congressman Augustine Lonergan, of Hartford, and Arthur M. Brown of the firm of Brown and James.

The will sought to be probated was made by Mrs. Ring on January 29th, 1924, at St. Francis hospital in Hartford, where she went as a patient on Dec. 30th, 1923. The will gave to her daughter Mary M. Ring, the nousb at 49 Broad street, to Charles B. Ring $100., and the residue to her sons Bernard and Joseph and her daughter Mary in equal parts. Mrs. Ring appointed her son Bernard executor and provided for the appointment of her daughter Mary as executrix in the event of the inability of Bernard to serve.

Lawyer Shields, after calling Judge Ayling and formally offering the application of Mary M. Ring for the probate of her mother's will as an exhibit, and the will itself as an exhibit for identification, called Attorney John J. Burke of Hartford, as a witness. Attorney Burke testified that some two or three days prior to the execution of the will by Mrs. Ring he received a telephone communication request that he call upon Mrs. Mrs. Ring at the hospital and that at that time he was not acquainted with Mrs. Ring or any of her family. The next day he did call on Mrs. Ring, who told him that she desired to make her will, and he spent an hour with Mrs. Ring at that time discussing the proposed will and took notes of her wishes in the matter. Mr. Burke said that he met Miss Mary M. Ring at the hospital at that time but that upon his starting to discuss the matter of the will with Mrs. Ring, the daughter Mary left the room and was not present during his talk with her mother. In this conversation, Mrs. Ring told him that she had three son. Charles who lived in Springfield and Joseph and Bernard who lived in Norwich, but that at that time one or the later was ill and in New Jersey, that she had but one daughter Mary, who had sacrificed more for her than the other children and was least prepared for the future, that her son Charles was the best fixed of the children, Mrs. Ring also told him of her property, he said, and that she had already deeded eda valuable piece of real estate to hre sons Bernard and Joseph and had also deeded another piece to her daughter Mary; that she wished Mary to have her home at 49 Broad street, Norwich, Charles to have $100. as he was already well situated, better situated than the others. Mrs. Ring also told him, the attorney testified, that her son Charles had had a paper served on her asking for the appointment of a conservator which paper she showed him and said that she only hoped that Charles' children would never treat him as he was treating her.

Attorney Burke testified that in accordance with the directions he received from Mrs. Ring he drew the will on the morning of the 29th., of January, 1924 and went with it to the hospital that same afternoon, that upon reaching Mrs. Ring's room at the hospital it was empty but after waiting a few minutes, Mrs. Ring wheeled in by her nurse. He read the will over with Mrs. Ring and asked her if it was as she wished, to which she replied that it was, after that Miss Mary Ring came into the room and he told Mrs. Ring that it would be necessary to have two witnesses. Dr. George F. Cook of the hospital staff and William R. Daly, a patient, were procured as witnesses, but whether Miss Ring or the nurse got them he didn't know. Mrs. Ring stated while all were present in the room, according to the witness, that the document he had brought to her was her will and requested himself Dr. Cook and Mr. Daly to witness it. She then signed the will and he and the other two witnesses signed as witnesses. Attorney Burke testified that Mrs. Ring's mind was keen and rational and her conversation with him intelligent and businesslike and that she showed no signs of mental weakness at all but appeared to he in good mental health.

Dr. George F. Cook, the next witness called, testified that at the time of the execution of Mrs. Ring's will he was one of the doctors at St. Francis hospital, and that while Mrs. Ring was there he saw her from 10 to 25 or more times a week, sometimes having extended talks with reh, as she was himself a Norwich boy and Mrs. Ring was also from Norwich. He had not been acquainted with Mrs. Ring when he was in Norwich nor with her daughter Mary, but he had known of them and was at the Norwich Academy at the same time that the daughter Mary was. Dr. Cook gave his opinion that Mrs. Ring was mentally normal in every respect and that in her many talks with him she gave absolutely no indication of mental infirmity. On the afternoon when he witnessed the will, he said, he was called on the phone by the hospital telephone operator and told he was wanted at Room 245, Mrs. Ring's room, that he did not know then what he was wanted for but went to the room where he found Mrs. Ring, her daughter Mary, Lawyer Burke, Mr. Daly, a patient, and Mrs. Ring's nurse. He was then told that Mrs. Ring desired to execute her will. He then cautioned Mrs. Ring not to sign any paper unless se knew what she was signing. He did this, he said, as it was a rule of the hospital to make this statement to patients who were about to execute papers. Mrs. Ring told him that she knew what the paper was, that it was her will. He saw Mrs. Ring sign the will and he signed it at her request as a witness Dr. Cook said he never discussed the will with Mrs. Ring in his talks with her, neither did he discuss her family, but that he did remark to her on one occasion that she had a very good daughter and that she was fortunate to have a daughter so good and attentive to her. In reply Mrs. Ring said that Mary was a good daughter to her and that she loved her, and that she would look out for Mary as the boys would be able to look out for themselves.

The last witness called was William R. Daly, of Hartford, manager of the Allyn House at the time the will was executed. He testified that prior to going to the hospital he did not know Mrs. Ring or any of her family, but that at the hospital his room was across te hall from her room and he occasionally passed the time of day with her and sometimes had a short talk with her but only on everyday subjects and not connected with the will or her family. In all his observation of her and talks with her, her mind seemed perfectly good, he testified, that on the afternoon he witnessed the will Miss Ring, whom he had met once or twice when she called on her mother, came into his room and told him that her mother wished him to step across the hall and witness her will. He went to Mrs. Ring's room and witnessed the will with Dr. Cook and Lawyer Burke in the manner that Lawyer Burke had related.

Lawyer Shields then stated that the case for the applicant was closed.

Attorney Brown on behalf of the remonstrants said they had no testimony to offer at that time.

Judge Robinson then stated that the evidence showed that the will was properly and legally executed by Mrs. Ring and that Mrs. Ring from the evidence, appeared to have been competent to execute it, and that the will was therefore admitted to probate.

Judge Robinson then stated that Bernard Ring had filed a declination to act as executor. At this point Attorney Lonergan stated that they might decide to have the executor bring an action against Miss Ring personally and that it would not be proper for Miss Ring as executrix to sue herself. Lawyer Shields suggested that no such contingency had arisen as yet, and the court under the law would be bound to appoint the person named in the will.

Judge Robinson stated he could see no valid objection to the appointment of Miss Ring as executrix, and that he would confirm her nomination and fix her band as executrix at $5,000.

Brother Sues Sister.

Further legal contests over the disposition of the estate of Mrs. Ring are promised by a suit that Charles B. Ring has brought in the superior court against his sister, Mary, to recover a piece of Chestnut street property valued at $30,000, which he claims Mary induced her mother to deed to her in November, 1923. Charles Ring seeks an injunction to restrain his sister from conveying, mortgaging or leasing the property and also asks the court to declare the conveyance null and void, because it was made by Mrs. Ring when she was in an enfeebled condition.

Mrs. Ring went to Hartford Dec. 30, 1923 and had three minor operations, which were followed by two major operations, in the first of which her right leg was amputated June 2, 1924, and in the second her left leg on July 14, 1924. She died twelve days after the second major operation.

MACHINE STRUCK GIRL IN WASHINGTON SQUARE

An automobile driven by David Bassin of Plainfield on Washington square Monday afternoon struck and knocked down little Dorothy Knouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Knouse of East Great Plain. The child suffered a badly bruised side, and injuries to ankle and wrist. An X-ray is to be taken to determine whether there may be internal injuries.

According to a report made of the accident, the Bassin machine was coming from Water street towards Mrs. Knouse, Mrs. Lawrence Sylvia and Dorothy Knouse who were walking across the crosswalk. There was no horn blown, Mrs. Knouse declared, and Mrs. Sylvia jumped out of the way barely in time to escape being hit but saw the wheel strike the Knouse girl who went under the machine. Mr. Bassin brought the machine to a stop almost at once. Mrs. Knouse lifted the girl out and Herbert Houston carried her to the office of Dr. Louis T. Cassidy who attended her injuries.

DANTE, THE MAGICIAN, AT PALACE THEATRE

Heralded as Europe's famous magician, Dante and his troupe of men and girls thoroughly mystified a capacity house at the Palace theatre Monday evening with an elaborate programme of magic card tricks, spiritualism and mesmerism. There have been from time to time exhibitions of magic and spiritualism on the local stage but few, if any, have equalled the performance given by Dante, who last night opened a three day engagement at the Palace theatre.

The performance was given in three parts with brief intermissions. The opening number was a rapid series of Thurston & Kellar mysteries, a score or more of tricks done so quickly and in such rapid succession that it was difficult to keep up with them. Money tricks, card tricks, the phantom princess, the creation right on the stage of a living vampire were followed by the unsolved mystery, "Sawing a Woman in Halves", which was the feature trick of the first part of the evening's programme.

In the second part of the entertainment the magician produced live pigeons, geese, chickens, a baby pig, etc., from nowhere and everywhere. Spiritualism featured this part of the evening's programme. In this Dante used a mysterious cabinet which threw chairs out onto the stage and from which issued uncanny sounds an dnoises. Strange lights and queer apparitions including a "spirit" added to the deep mystery. There was also a remarkable exhibition of mind reading by a ghost. After giving messages and answering questions for a number of those in the audience the ghost vanished on the stage and right before the eyes of the spectators.

Edna D'Lerr, a member of the troupe, showed how quickly she could get out of a straight jacket while padlocked in a trunk. She not only got out of the jacket but got out of the trunk as well.

There were ten mysterious numbers in the third part of the programme which featured a remarkable impersonation by Dante and his troupe of the famous Chinese court magicians.

CHILDREN WITH RICKETS NEED COD LIVER OIL

For weak, puny, under-developed children —, and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in seven weeks, and is now healthy and happy — thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists all over North America—but be sure and ask for McCoy's—the oroginal and genuine.

JIMMY MURPHY, LEADING AMERICAN AUTO RACE DRIVER, KILLED IN CRASH

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 15—(By the A. P.)—Jimmie Murphy, of Vernon, California, favored to win the national racing championship of the American Automobile Association for 1924, and veteran of many an automobile speed classic both in this country and abroad, met his death on the state fair grounds track here this afternoon when the car he was piloting crashed through a wooden fence on a curve during the 138th lap of the 150 mile race.

Murphy survived the accident but a few minutes, and was brought to a hospital in this city, six miles away, but he never regained consciousness. He was the only victim of the accident which happened on the inside of the curve where spectators were not allowed. The tragedy was staged, however, directly opposite bleachers seating approximately 2,000 people and in full sight of at least 5,000 persons who had grouped at the curve.

Splinters of wood from the wrecked fence and debris from Murphy's car, were cleared from the track by state troopers just in time for the leaders in the race to thunder by. The event was won by Phil Shafer, in one hour, 34 minutes and 25.20 seconds. Bennett Hill, teammate of Murphy's flashed over the line second in one hour, 57 minutes and 20.81 seconds. Harry Hartz substituting for his teammate, Fred Comer, came in third in two hours and nine seconds.

It was in an attempt to lap his teammate and pass Shafer, that Murphy pushed his car into a final burst of speed, and he roared down the straightaway past the grandstands at approximately 80 miles an hour. At the turn which would have brought him into the backstretch, he seemed unable to straighten the car out, and the bleacher occupants were horrified to see him clip the inside fence once, then rapidly skid around and strike it again, and finally on a complete third swing crashed into the railing, and carry it before him for nearly 100 feet.

The car did not overturn. Witnesses of the crash believed that the injuries which Murphy received were due to wooden splinters from the fence rails striking him in the chest.

His body will be taken to Los Angeles tonight by other drivers who competed in the race, it having been their intention all to return at the close of the local event.

The record which Murphy had attained so far this year placed him easily as the leader of American racing drivers in the point contest for 1924 championships, and it had been his hope togain the 300 additional points which victory here would have given him so as to be assured of the Automobile Association honors. He had up t this race 1,695 points to his credit, while Shafer, today's winner, was credited with but 80 points.

COLLINS HOLDS SENATORS AND TIGERS WIN EASILY

Detroit, Sept. 15.—"Rip" Collins, sometimes called the unluckiest pitcher in the American league, pitched brilliant ball for Detroit to shut out Washington, 2 to 0, dropping the Senators to a tie with New York for the league lead.

Collins' double and a single by Manush gave Detroit the two scores and Rigney's two base hit scored one of a single by O'Rourke accounted for the second. The score:

YANKS BY BEATING CHICAGO TIE FOR FIRST

Chicago, Sept. 15.—New York tied Washington for first place in the American league pennant race today by shutting out Chicago, 2 to 0, while the Senators were defeated by Detroit.

The World's champions gleaned only four hits off "Red" Faber, but wild pitches of Faber's passes developed runs. Witt's walk, a sacrifice, and Ruth's single scored the first run and the second came in the fourth on a walk to Pipp, Meusel's single and a double play which retired Meusel and Hoffman, Pipp scoring.

The White Sox collected seven hits off Sam Jones, but the fielding behind him was spectacular. With men on third and first and one out, Kamm lined to Dugan in the fourth inning. Dugan caught the ball off his shoe strings and doubled Sheeley off third retiring the side. The only other chance the White Sox had to score was in the eighth with men on second and third, but Jones hooped over the third strike on Hooper. Collins was then passed, but Sheely was an easy out. BALTIC BEATS OUT SOUTH WINDHAM IN 12TH

The Baltic A. A. baseball team playing in Willimantic on Sunday defeated the South Windham team in a long drawn out contest that lasted 12 innings by the score of 1 to 0. The feature of the game was the pitching of Papineau of the Baltic team who has held South Windham scoreless for 21 innings with 2 shut outs to his credit. Junior for South Windham pitched good ball for the losers. Gaudette who replaced Green in right field, lost the game for South Windham when he dropped Charron's hit which went for 3 bases, with Shaws hit that brought in the run in the 12th inning.

Next Sunday the Baltic team plays the Rossie Velvet A. A. in Mystic. Score:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Fordham Star, New York Giants

Score 1 to 0 in favor of team in the field. There are runners on first and third. Runner on first attempts to steal second.

Where should the catcher throw the ball?

The team in the field has the advantage of a one run lead and it should try to hold this lead. Therefore if the man on first successfully steals second, this puts their opponents in a position to score the winning run on a hit, so the catcher should make the throw to second base in order to prevent the team at bat getting in this position. Very likely the runner on third will attempt to steal but the player who takes the throw at second, always has a good chance of getting him at the plate.

FARRELL LEADS FIELD IN PROFESSIONAL GOLF

French Lick, Ind., Sept. 15—(By the A. P.)—John Farrell of New York, today proved to be the best golfer in the elimination rounds of the national professional championship, not only leading the 32 survivors with a score of 140 for the 36 holes, but setting a course record of 68 in the morning round and a record of 33 for the first nine holes of the 6,471 yard links whose par is 36-36—72.

In spite of his spectacular performance, his total was only one stroke better than that of five other players, one of whom, Mike Brady of New York equalled the course record in the afternoon. Tying Brady for second place at 141 were Walter Hagen, British open champion, Bobby Cruickshank, Francis Gallet, and Harry Hampton of Canton, Ohio, who was the only man west of New York City to get into the first six places.

Gene Sarazen of New York, defending his title, shot a 69 in the morning but slipped off four strokes in the afternoon to seventh place with 142. This was one stroke below the total returned by Charles Hoffner, of Philadelphia.

It required a score of 150 or better to survive the medal rounds. But most of the favorites survived for match play.

Tracey Ferguson of Wallingford, won the decision from the Wallspring Wop of Oakville, Emil Paluso knocked out Tony Norman, of Pittsburgh in the sixth round of the scheduled ten round semi-final. Jiggers Palladino won the decision from Eddie Lord, both of this city.

New London took the lead in the opening games of the Eastern Connecticut bowling league at New London on Monday evening by taking three straight games from the Taftville team. At the Aetna alleys in Norwich where the other match of the league was rolled the Palace five took two games from the Aetna team.

The Game at New London

The Peerless Big Five drew first blood in the new Eastern Connecticut bowling league at New London, taking all three games from the Taftville bowling quintet. Steady bowling by the anchor man, Belcher for the New London team gave them two games, the first and third.

Two games were exceptionally close and but one pin separated the two teams in the final match, while the first game was decided by three pins. In both these games, the two teams had close scores and the final outcome was not decided until the final box. The first game was decided by Belcher for New London, who spared twice in his final two boxes, and then struck out for a whirlwind finish. Dugas missed three pins which would have given his team a tie score in this game.

The final game was a thriller, and it was Belcher's fine pinning that gave New London the third and final game, for a clean sweep. The two teams were deadlocked when Dugas and Belcher took their turns at the alleys. Belcher received a two pin split as did Dugas, but both managed to make ten. The last box was to decide the final winner, and Belcher was first to bowl. He received a perfect two pin split through the center, while Dugas received a one pin spare break. Before Dugas bowled, Belcher showed great skill and mowed down all the pins on the ally for a ten box. Dugas not only missed his spare break but also missed the pin in the second attempt and the final game went to the Peerless Five by a single pin.

The bowling in the first and second games was not so good, but it increased by leaps and bounds in the third and final game. A total of 530 for the winner was exceptionally good. Of the individual records, Hallisey had both high single and high three strings for the evening. His single was 121, while his three strings reached the total of 332. Armitage was the only member of the Taftville team to hit more than 300. Score:

BERNSTEIN WINS VERDICT OVER JOHNNY DUNDEE

New York, Sept. 15—Jack Bernstein of Yonkers, N. Y., former junior lightweight champion, won a decision over Johnny Dundee of New York, former featherweight and junior lightweight champion in a 15 round match at the Queensboro A. C., in Long Island City tonight. Bernstein weighed 132 1-2, Dundee 132.

Dundee, only a shell of the former king of the 130-pounders, was outclassed from the start by the speed and aggressiveness of his youthful opponent. The veteran was outboxed and outfought. Bernstein took the aggressive from the start, nooked and jabbed Dundee and caused him to hang on desperately to save himself. Dundee called upon all of the old ring wizardry which has made him one of the most popular ring idols of the day to stem the ebbing tide of defeat. There were no knockdowns.

Johnny Leonard of Allentown, Pa., won a judges' decision over Angel Diaz of Havana, Cuba, in a thrilling 10 round struggling match. The Havana boy, marking his debut in this country, carried the fight to Leonard during the early stages of the match but weakened as the bout progressed. Diaz is the featherweight champion of Cuba and holds a 15 round decision over Jose Lombardo of Panama.

In a six round bout, Frankie Albano of Brooklyn won the decision over Ernie Goozman of Milwaukee.

Billy Murray of California scored a technical knckout over Soldier Jones of Long Island City in the third round of a scheduled four round bout.

BRITISH POLOISTS WILL TRY TO EVEN UP SERIES TODAY

New York, Sept. 15. — Battling against heavy odds, Great Britain's polo ists with a shifted line-up, will enter the second match of the International challenge cup series tomorrow to check the Americans who galloped to an overwhelming victory in the first game last Saturday.

The Americans are heavy favorites to win and thus retain possession of the historic trophy despite the fact that they will play without Malcom Stevenson, crack No. 3 who sustained a slight concussion of the brain in a bad spill in the eighth chukker of Saturday's match. Stevenson's place will be taken by Robert E. Strawbridge, Jr., of Philadelphia, who finished the first game at No. 3.

Although one more victory for the United States will settle the question of polo supremacy between the two countries for another three years, the minimum interval now provided between series, a third contest will be played regardless of the outcome of tomorrow's encounter.

It will take place on Thursday, however, instead of Saturday as originally scheduled, so that the tournament for the American open championship may get under way on the latter date.

Stevenson's loss breaks up America's formidable new "big four," but Strawbridge is looked upon as a capable substitute. He demonstrated on Saturday he could fit in nicely with the mainspring of America's attack, Tommy Hitchcock, and the bulwark of the defense, Devereux Milburn.

Stevenson was reported today to have improved to such a extent that he left his home this afternoon to see "how it felt on a pony". He expressed a determination to get in tomorrow's game, but it was decided that he would only be risking further injury to do so.

Tomorrow's game has taken on unexpected interest, however, in spite of expectations of another sweeping American triumph. Critics question the ability of the Amercans to Continue the display of dazzling team-work that smothered the British Saturday, with a new No. 3 in the combination, while, on the other hand, the challengers, with a line-up rebuilt around the spectacular Louis Lacey, may show marked improvment.

Lacey, outstanding figure of the first game, will have two new forwards to aid his attack, Lieut. Col. T. P. Melvill replacing Major T. W. Kirkwood at No. 1, while Major G. H. Phipps-Hornby has been substituted for Major F. B. Burnaby, former captain of the team, at No. 2. Major E. G. Atkinson will remain at No. 3, although it was first planned to put Hurndall in his place, while Lacey will stay at back.

Further reports of dissension in the ranks of the challenging outfit, following the sudden departure for England of Lord Wimbone, one of the team's financial backers, were published today. Cable reports from London of the reaction to Saturday's defeat also referred to difficulties prior to the team's departure for this country, but these were denied here.

Acting as spokesman, Major Kirkwood said:

"We are all working as hard as we know how to get a team together that will make a showing. We have had very real handicaps. We had poor weather in England and poor weather here. Lacey was injured, but his shoulder came through the first game nicely. For some reason or other we have been portrayed as fighting one another and squabbling when nothing could be further from the truth".

RECORD NUMBER TURN OUT FOR HARVARD GRID TEAM

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 15. — The second largest squad to report for football in Harvard's history turned out today for the opening practice of the season on Soldiers field. But, while 128 candidates were on hand, exceeding in number the turnout of any year except 1923 when 131 reported, only six of the 26 men who won their letters against Yale last fall reported. A seventh is expected to join the squad later in the week.

The situation of last year which found the crimson line strong and the backfield handicapped was reversed today. Only two letter men remain from the powerful crimson line of 1923 and a survey of materal indicated little likelihood that the forward line would have the weight and caliber of last season. The backfield outlook was brighter.

As a nucleus of the 1924 line head Coach Percy Fisher this year has Captain Malcolm Greenough, regular center last season, who is expected to play tackle this year. He was tackle in 1922. Henry T. Dunker, regular guard, was the other lineman to win a letter last year, who reported. In the backfield, however, the crimson will have Philip Spalding and Joseph McGlone, substitute quarterbacks of last season, and the regular half backs, John W. Hammonds and Adolph Cheek Robert Cordingly, a substitute half back and letter man, is expected to report later.

Additional backfield power was indicated by the return of Erwin Gehrke, 1921 halfback. Included in the new material were Izzy Zarakov and Al Miller, crack freshmen backs of last year. Other candidates were Adolph Samborski, backfield substitute last year and A. H. Stafford, freshman quarterback of two years ago.

Of the candidates to report for the line, eight tipped the scales at more than 200 pounds. Leading the list was Paul Berglund, hammer thrower, who stands 6 feet, 5 inches tall, and weighs 235 pounds. Daniel Holder, a letter man in 1922, reported as candidate for center. Mauran Beals, hockey captain, will try for an end berth.

The squad has six candidates for center, 14 for guard berths, 22 tackles 32 ends, 17 quarterbacks and 31 other backfield men.

It was indicated that a cut might be made as early as tomorrow afternoon with a view to getting the squad down to a workable size. Coaches, planning new plays, hoped to begin closed practice on Wednesday. Today's workout was merely for conditioning purposes.

THIRTY FIVE REPORT FOR FOOTBALL AT ACADEMY

When Coach Artken issued his call for candidates for the football team at the Academy last week, thirty-five responded including about six veterans of last year's team. During the past few days there has been light practice for the squad but the more strenuous work will start this week when the boys get limbered up.

From all appearances it would look as though the Academy would have a real football team. The material that turned out is very promising, there being a number of heavy men for the line and some fast boys for the backfield.

NEW LONDON CITY COUNCIL VOTES SUM TO WIDEN BANK STREET

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Sept. 15.—The city council this evening voted to acquire land of Benjamin Carrolls heirs and lang of abutting property owners on Bank street at the outer end to make the highway of uniform width of four rods. The street was of this width originally, but in 1887 encroachments were made and a line was established which left some of the highway narrower and some of the sidewalks correspondingly of less width. The land to be purchased will cost the city $1937, while the removal of hedges, the relaying of walks and other work consequent upon the changes will run the cost up to $7378, it is estimated. The city manager recommended the improvements and the council gave approval and ordered the appropriation made. The planning board reported the passage of a vote by that body asking that Harris court be made a uniform width of 50 feet but the council decided that a map of the proposed alterations and other information should be furnished and that will be required. Councilor Fox expressed the opinion that the expenditures for streets had been all that they should be the present year and suggested that the incoming council take up the matter of Harris court and Harris street. The money for the improvement on Bank street was voted from the sale of bonds for street improvements No. 3, which series is of $45,000 in amount. The council refused to grant the petition of C. L. Barnett for the removal of a tree on West street.

City Manager Holt was given a leave of absence during the week beginning Monday, the 22nd., at his request that he might attend the convention of city managers to be held at Portland during next week He said a big crowd is expected and he considering and helpful in its proceedings.

There was a time when Water street was regarded as a section where strangers should go guardedly, but that time long since was supposed to have passed. Today, in the police court, there was evidence that caution must be exercised there as in other sections which are a little removed from constant police patrol. John Carney, employed in the service of the government on a mine planter, was charged with having robbed Nicholas Fleming a boatman, who was intoxicated and who was napping near the plant of the gas station of the Connecticut Power company. Stone & Webster who are the managers of the power company, are doing work at the gas plant. Their paymaster is George L. McKenzie. Sunday he came upon Fleming on the ground evidently sleeping off a drunk. Carney was standing over him and Mr. McKenzie declared that Carney was robbing Fleming. Mr. McKenzie approached the pair while a third man stood by, and asked Carney if he was robbing the man on the ground. Carney replied in kind by asking McKenzie what he was butting in for? Carney manifested a disposition to fight but Mr. McKenzie summoned the police. Mr. McKenzie noticed that the bystander had left Carney wise as to the approach of a disinterested person and McKenzie saw that Carney dropped some bills on the ground. As soon as the police appeared they recovered $3 from Carney. The officers also saw that Carney was supposedly guilty by other movements he made.

Carney denied his guilt as did his companion, Stanley Trotzky, also a sailor on the mine planter. They related that they were with Fleming in the forenoon, but claimed that they left him after the party had consumed four pints of liquor and that they went aboard the ship for their meals. They admitted that they were with Fleming later in the afternoon, but denied that they had "rolled" him and had taken his money. They said Fleming was still drunk in the afternoon and that they had carried him bodily from a position where he was lying at the entrance to the wharf so that he would not be struck by any automobile. Fleming's shirt was outside his belt when the officers arrived and Carney and his friend were moving the man. The court found Carney guilty as charged and fined him. Fleming and Trotzky were also fined. The trio went to jail.

John Harrington, a man with a bad record for intoxication, was in the court today accused as before—of being drunk. Two colored women of John street asked for his arrest, alleging that he went into their home and became so familiar and so affectionate with them that they were frightened. And it requires some strenuous actions to frighten the women Harrington molested. John said he was drunk. He came here from Moneville where he has been shoveling coal for a living. He was fined and then that he might continue at work he was placed on probation for a year.

The three-story brick building, Nos. 30-36 Main street, owned by Charles K. Smith, and for a number of years used as an automobile sales station and residential purposes, has been sold to Jacob Rosen, Julius Daren and Benjamin Smithline. The price paid was $32,500 and the deed transferring the property has been filed at the office of the city clerk. It is understood that the New London Paper & Supply company will occupy the ground floor and that the upper two floors will continue to be utilized for apartments.

It is apparent that someones residing in the northwest section of the city entertains a hatred for police dogs, for within a few months three animals of this pedigree have been killed, being administered poison mysteriously. The latest dog to be poisoned is that of Mrs. Ida Bragaw, Wes; street, the animal having died this forenoon. The other dog owners were Owen O'Neill and Dr. Hugh F. Lena.

Miss Crumn is survived by two sisters, Misses Fannie and Alice Crump, and a brother, Richard Crump, of New York.

Seth Armitage, Montville, will be in the police court tomorrow morning, charged with violation of the automobile law in operating his machine past a trolley car while the latter conveyance was discharging passengers. Armitage was complained against yesterday by Motorman Maurice Wilkinson and Conductor Mortimer Nott, following Armitage's automobile speeding past the trolley car on Montauk avenue. This afternoon State Policeman Bernard W. Kenerson located Armitage and summoned him into court.

The automobile owned and operated by Clarence Slater, R. F. D. No. 5, Norwich, and a machine owned and driven by Edward Heffernan, 38 Williams street were in collision Sunday night on Williams street, near Gallows Lane. Both cars were damaged.

F. C. Whiting is a man of many and varied attainments. He can raise flowers and garden "sass," is a carpenter, painter and mechanic and can sing, play and dance. But he never learned to sew, as the premium list in Monday's Bulletin would make it appear. The beautifully hemstitched sheet with crocheted insert and tatted hand-made waise accredited to Mr. Whiting, were Mrs. Margaret Perkins' work for which she received first premium. Mr. Whiting knows so little about sewing that he had to solicit the services of a woman friend when he rent his clothes in twain while frantically rushing around serving hot dogs. When interviewed on the subject Monday and being importuned to sell the waist he said he was going to exhibit it at the Springfield Fair. George H. Prior judged the art exhibit in which there were a large number of artistic works and every one received first premiums, as the entries were so varied. The shooting contests under the direction of John Kaufman, for the committee, proved to be one of the main features. The final score stood:

NORWICH TOWN

This included a large delegation from Friendship Circle of Versailles Methodist church, there being more than 20 who responded to the special invitation.

Women Are All the Same.

It is a funny thing, but while you can divide men into men and artists, women are all the same; they're all artists of a kind and women as well; any woman is better than a mediocre man, but no woman is as good as a clever man.—From "Last Week," by Nora D. Vines.

That's the Difference.

"If a man is improvin' his mind," said Uncle Eben, "he looks foh people dat knows mo' dan he does. When he's improvin' his pocketbook, he looks foh people dat knows less."

Father John's Medicine Has Been Successfully Used by New England Families For Over 69 Years

Prescribed for Father John O'Brien at Lowell, Mass., on June 9, 1855.

New England Made Product Has Most Interesting History.

The true history of Father John's Medicine shows it to be a New England made product which originated at Lowell, Mass., on June 9, 1855, when it was prescribed for Reverend Father John O'Brien, pastor of St. Patrick's Parish in that city.

Father John, as he was affectionately called by his people, received so much benefit from the prescription that he recommended its use to his parishioners when he found them suffering from a cough or cold, or when they were in need of a body builder. In going to the drug store to have the prescription refilled they naturally asked for Father John's medicine, and thus it was named by the people.

For many years it was prepared one bottle at a time, but as more and more people began to know its value, it was made up in somewhat larger quantities. By word of mouth recommendation, the number of users continually increased, as one family after another having proved its value, spread the news to neighbors and friends.

In [illegible] the value of Father John's Medicine was further strengthened because it was endorsed by hospitals and institutions as well as by increasing thousands who knew its value by actual trial.

Now Known In Every State Because of Proven Value For Coughs and Colds.

Mothers Depend on Father John's Medicine As the Greatest Body Builder.

It is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs. It is a pure and wholesome emulsion of cod liver oil with other valuable ingredients so combined by scientific process that it has the approval of leading medical authorities and has become generally known as the greatest body builder.

Its nourishing food elements are correctly prepared so that they are quickly and easily taken up even by a weakened system and promptly turned into new flesh and strength. It treats colds in the natural, logical way; soothes the irritation, helps to drive out the impurities, and gives renewed strength with which to fight off illness. As a food tonic when you are weak and run down, it has proved its value during its more than 69 years of success. It is safe for all the family to use because it is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form.

Magnetism Long Known.

Magnetism was known 3,000 years ago. Ancient Greeks discovered black stones in the vicinity of Magnesia in Lydia which had the power of attracting iron and were themselves attracted to each other by an invisible force. "Magnet" derives its name from its original point of discovery—"Magnesia."

Some Youthful Prodigies.

Macaulay was a historian at eight Tennyson a poet as early; Byron wrote verses at ten, and Bacon was a philosopher at the same age. Mozart made his debut as composer and musician at six.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, Sept. 15.—Stock prices turned downward just before the close of today's market after an early period of irregularity, which was featured by the strength of several low priced railroad shares. With the single exception of Monday, Jan. 2, total sales of approximately half a million shares were the smallest of any full day session this year.

Heavy selling of Crucible steel, which was hammered down 3 points to 53 1-4 on rumors of unfavorable divident developments at tomorrow's meeting of he Board of Directors caused the late break. Losses of 1 to 3points were registered by American Can, Baldwin, Colorado Fuel, General Electric, Davison Chemical, Maxwell Motor Issues, United States Cast Iron Pipe and Western Union Telegraph.

Rock Island issues were in brisk demand on reports that the Southern Pacifichad acquired large blocks of stocks in connection with merger plans. The common touched 34 5-8 and then closed at net gains of 3 1-4 and 1 3-4 respectively. Good buying also was noted in Frisco Common and Preferred. Gulf, Mobile and Northern Pfd., St. Louis Southwestern Pfd. and Western Maryland Second Preferred, up 1 to 2 points.

More than a dozen issues established new peak prices for the year, General Baking standing out with a net gain of 9 points at 142. Other stocks to better their previous high prices were Standard Milling, Gimbel Brothers Common and Preferred, Goodyear Preferred and Prior Preferred, Columbia Gas and Electic and Consolidated Gas, of Baltimoe, American Type Foundry, Niagara Falls Power Preferred, American Chicle, Sloss-Sheffield Preferred and General American Tank Car Preferred.

Oils were again under pressure in reflection of price cuts in the middle west and Rocky Mountain districts, Marland closing a point lower at 31 1-4 and a number of the others yielding fractionally.

Most of the divident paying rails lost fround, losses of a point or more being recorded by Baltimore and Ohio, Lackawanna, Southern Railway and Delaware and Hudson.

Nash Motors jumped 6 1-4 points on one sale while Union Tank car, Sears Roebuck, Kelly Springfield 8 per cent preferred and Loose-Wiles Biscuit Second Preferred moved up 3 to 6 points.

Money rates held steady despite an enormous turnover of funds in connection with income tax payments and maturing government loans. Call money and commercial paper markets were quiet.

Foreign exchanges were slightly reactionary with business on a fairly large scale. Demand sterling ruled about half a cent lower around $4.45 7-8 and French francs declined six points to around 5.31 cents. South American currencies continued strong.

BOND MARKET

New York, Sept. 15.—Bond prices failed to develop a definite trend in today's quiet trading. Accumulation of selected railroad issues enlivened trading in the domestic list but price changes generally were narrow and insignificant. Investment houses were reported to be unloading some of their present holdings in anticipaption of the forthcoming German loan but their scattered offerings apparently were easily absorbed without putting any strain on the market.

Liberty Bonds failed to reflect the resumption of the Treasury's sinking fund operations, said to have been centered on the third 4 1-4s. This issue, with most of the others, moved lower, with the Treasury 4 1-4s suffering the heaviest loss. The turnover of several large blocks of Liberties in over-the-counter trading was credited to buying for the Treasury Sinking fund.

Demand for Rock Island obligations, based on reports that the Southern Pacific was buying the road's stock, was a feature of trading in the railroad group. Other semi-speculative issues which were active and higher included Seaboard, Chicago and Eastern Illinois and St. Paul lines. International Great Northern adjustments 6s reached a new top price at 57 1-2.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Export buying and reduced estimates of yield in Canada did a good deal today to send the wheat values up. About 1,500,000 bushels were said to have been taken by foreign interests. Closing quotations on wheat were strong, at 1 1-2 to 2 5-8 net advance, with December 1.34 1-4 to 1.34 3-8 and May 1.40 7-8 to 1.41. Corn finished 3-8 to 7-8 down, oats at 1-4 decline to 1-2 gain and provisions unchanged to 25c lower.

Highest prices today in the wheat market, reached just before ended, were in connection with guesses that Canadian crop figures to be issued tonight would show a total yield of about 230,000,000 bushels for the three prairie provinces as against 267,000,000 bushels, according to the latest government estimate. Earlier, the market here had been considerably affected by a report pointing to a much more reduced yield in Saskatchewan than any previous forecast had called for.

Persistent buying on the part of houses with Seaboard connections formed the main basis, though, for the upward price trend which from the state was evident in the wheat trade. The fact that Liverpool quotations were higher than had been looked for was deemed significant in this respect. Much notice was also taken of estimates of the amount of wheat and rye which up to date have been purchased for Europe this season. On the other hand, announcement of 3,661,000 bushels increase of the United States visible supply today had no apparent effect.

Somewhat better weather and especially absence of frost led to selling of corn at times and kept the corn market easier in the face of wheat strength. Bullish Canadian crops helped to steady the price of oats.

Lard reflected a decline in Cottonseed oil, but meats were more in line with action of hog values.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Sept. 15.—Trading in today's Curb Market was on a broader scale with considerable irregularity in price movements.

Weakness of the Pipe Line shares was the feature of the oil group, Cumberland Pipe breaking seven points and several others losing 1to 4. StandardOil of Nebraska moved up 4 points and a few add lot sales and Prairie oil and gas moved two.

Declaration of a stock divident on Guillette Safety Razor was followed by heavy profit taking which carried that stock down 5 1-2 points to 293 1-2. National Tea advanced 7 points on a few sales and net gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded by American Light and Traction, Goodyear Tire and Rubber, Hudson Company preferred and Ward Baking A. Duz, Dubilier and Lehigh Valley Coal certificates, three of the most active features, were heavy.

Active buying of Jib Consolidated which advanced 13 points on reports of important developments featured the mining list. Other changes in that group were of a nominal character.

Interest in the bond list was confined largely to Standard Gas and Electric 6 1-2s of 1954, which improved fractionally in heavy trading.

The treasurer of the Second Hopkinton S. D. E. church was authorized at the semi-annual meeting Sunday evening Sept. 7th to give a quit-claim deed to the town of Hopkinton of the plot of ground on which the soldiers' Memorial stands.

This town joined the towns of Charlestown and Richmond in observance of National Defense day. A parade and public exercises were held at Hope Valley. Ira L. Letts of Providence, gave an inspiring address.

Universal regret is felt at the loss of the Ashaway-Westerly trolley line, but it is hoped that a suitable bus line will be established as soon as possible, which will give the people some service.

Laying of cement between Hopkinton City and the Haston farm on one side of the state road will probably be completed this week. While this is drying out cement will be laid on one sode of Broad street, Ashaway.

Miss Donna Mills visited her mother, Mrs. G. Arthur Mills at Lawrence hospital Sunday. Mrs. Mills twill probably return home this week.

Walter White and family cff Providence were guests at the home of Mr. White's father, Joseph T. White over Sunday.

Etiquette has nothing to do with the good form displayed by the tailor-made woman.

Young Men

There are excellent opportunities for men trained at this school for the duties of office manager, auditor, cost accountant, comptroller, treasurer, and public accountant. More than 300 positions have been filled through our Placement Bureau during the past year. There is no charge for this service.

The surest way to an executive position is through the accounting department. Most of the treasurers and many of the presidents of our large corporations are products of the accounting department, for in their work they had opportunity to become familiar with all activities of the business.

While most of our graduates are employed in Boston and other cities of New England, a large number are holding excellent positions in New York, Newark, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Colombia, Porto Rico, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua.

This is the largest professional school of college grade in the world devoted exclusively to training men for commercial and public accounting practice. Last year we enrolled 2292 day and evening students, ranging in age from 18 to 40.

To be Bentley-trained carries prestige in business

Day courses require two years for completion. Tuition is $225 per year if paid in ten equal installments, or $215 if paid in advance.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

There are no signs of building operations in Norwich slacking up and contractors report that all men are working and that there is even difficulty in getting masons for the stone and brick work. All the contractors have had a very busy season and while there has been very few large contracts there has been plenty of small work that has kept them busy.

Building operations have made good progress during the past week in all parts of the city. The work on the new nurses' home at the Backus hospital is well along, the brick walls having been raised to the second story and the steel structural work is practically completed. Like progress has been made on other projects in and about the city.

At the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton 14 building permits were granted during the past week, the total valuation as placed by the owners being approximately $25,000. TAR KETTLE FIRE CALLS THE DEPARTMENT

The tar kettle at the city's stone crusher on Roath street took fire about 9 o' clock Monday morning and a telephone call for help was sent in to the fire department. One line of hose was laid and the blaze was drowned out with water. Dense volumes of smoke rolling up from the burning kettle gave the impression that there was a large fire in progress.

STATE POLICE SUPERINTENDENT IS HEARD ON TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

The second meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Civic Association was held at the Wauregan hotel Monday at 1 o'clock, daylight saving time. President V. L. Murphy of Willimantic presided. The Norwich United Commercial Travellers were represented by H. R. Branch, C. W. Nay; Alexander Jordan, Adelard Morin; W. W. Bromley, Jewett City; the Norwich Lions club by R. Henschel; Fred Watson; Geo. H. Fullerton; New London Chamber of Commerce by James G. Hammond; Willimantic Chamber of Commerce by J. C. Tracy; Willimantic Business Men's association by J. H. Hurley; Colchester Chamber of Commerce by President A. T. Vance; F. O. Brown; Norwich Manufacturers Association by Secretary C. J. Twist; Norwich Chamber of Commerce by President H. M. Lerou, J. N. Weymouth and Secretary John J. O'Rourke.

After the formality of opening the meeting by acceptance of the minutes as read by Secretary O'Rourke, President Murphy called upon Superintendent of State Police Robert T. Hurley to speak to the members of the Association regarding traffic problems in Connecticut. In opening his remarks, Superintendent Hurley stated there are three supreme hazards today, fire, crime and automobile. Fire losses in 1923 totalled $508,000,000 and statistics show that forty-one lives are lost by fire every twenty-four hours throughout the country. Taxpayers of the country pay a total of $2,775,000,000 for protection against crime and that business men cash about $1,000,000,000 each year in bad checks. He stated that ninety per cent. of the people of the country are law abiding and ten per cent. criminal and yet it cost the ninety per cent. the huge amount named to safeguard itself against the ten per cent. of the criminal class. In 1923 17,000 people were killed by automobiles and in his opinion ninety per cent. of the automobile drivers were careful and ten per cent were careless. He stated that it is the careless class that always caused the accident and provide the dangers so common in travelling conditions on our highways today. The improvement of roads and the supervision of state police have little or no effect on the careless driver that the only remedy in his opinion was the strict enforcement of law by the courts. In this respect he believed it was harder to prove intoxication in driving automobiles than it was to prove murder. The intoxicated driver and the careless driver in his opinion are greater enemies to mankind than the burglar, inasmuch as very often they wipe out both families and friends in the automobile killings caused by careless and drunken drivers throughout the country in a year's time. Until the time comes when all automobile drivers can be relied upon to always have control of their cars, accidents and killings are bound to occur and neither good roads or state poplice supervision can curtail the tremendous toll taken each year in maimed lives and dead persons. Connecticut has 2,200 miles of finished highway with sixty state police to cover this great area. During the past year the state police have refused to grant operators licenses to persons who cannot read or write the English language and he related some of the troubles of the state police caused by persons trying to get licenses for their friends who are illiterate of the English language In his opinion also the driver who drives about fifteen miles an hour on a heavy travelled highway is as bad as the speeder who travels fifty, because the slow driver often heads a long procession of automobiles, some of whom are business and professional men who must keep appointments. Thus the slow drivers cause an impatience in his followers resulting in cut-ins and dangerous passing of other cars which are a sources of a great many accidents on our highways.

Superintendent Hurley was given a rising vote of thanks by those present. The meeting also adopted a constitution and by-laws which was prepared by a committee consisting of H. R. Branch, chairman; James G. Hammond and John J. O'Rourke.

The constitution and by-laws as recommended by this committee were approved and adopted. The meeting empowered the Board of Directors to appoint a legislative committee and a committee on highways. These committees will be appointed at a meeting of the directors to be held next Monday.

FINES FOR FAILING TO GRANT RIGHT OF WAY

In the city court Monday morning Lawrence Deveau of Jewett City was fined $25 and costs on a charge of failure to grant the right of way to another motor vehicle while he was driving his automobile on the Jewett City road, near Baldwin's store about noon Saturday. He figured in a collision with a motorcycle owned by William Gley of Taftville.

The contined case against Frank Wildkowski, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law for failure to grant the right of way with his motorcycle several weeks ago at Chelsea Parade to an automobile driven by a NoanK man, was brought up. He was fined $15 and costs, his bill amounting to $31.72.

Five cases of failure to pass traffic beacons on the right and of parking oncrosswalks were nolled upon payment of $5. in each case. Three men went to jail to work out fines for intoxication and two others paid fines on intoxication charges. One local man, charged with breach of the peace, had his case nolled on payment of $5. and the case against a local business man, charged with intoxication was nolled.

In the case against Wassel Ludeza, charged with breach of the peace and driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor, a bond of $300 was called because of the non-appearance of the accused. The bondsman was Morris Markoff.

Deputy Judge H. H. Pettis was on the bench.

During intervals between taking and counting the ballots C. B. Montgomery the clerk enlivened proceedings by telling old time political stories that were well received. More than 50 more democrats will be added to the caucus rolls before the next caucus if those whose names appear on the list to be made attend to that duty.

STUDYING PROPERTY VALUES AFFECTED BY HIGHWAYS

An investigation to determine, with such facts as are available, the effect on property values due to the existence of stact highways, including a study of the tax laws and methods of financing the state highway functions is to be carried on in Connecticut Through an agreement reached between the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and the Connecticut highway department, a study of all manner of road conditions in this state has been decided upon. The investigation is designed to supplement the researchc made a year ago concerning density of traffic, etc., which produced much valuable information and has since been used as a model in a number of other states.

Among other objects sought in the proposed suhvey is the establishment, if possible, of a basic distinction between trunk line motor highways and roads which are of service chiefly to the lands in their vicinity and which are known as land service highways. It is also desired to allocate the cost of road service between passenger cars and trucks and business and non-business motor vehicles.

The survey is expected to produce facts as to the cost of maintenance of all roadway types, including the expense to date per mile and per square yard, classified with respect to the several types of road surface or pavement. The plan further contemplates classification of the administrative and engineering expenses of the department and the development, from the date assembled, of the cost of service on the state highways in Connecticut.

The headquarters of th enivestigation will be at Hartford under general direction of a representative of the Bureau of Public Roads, with whom engineers of the state department will co-operate.

MACMILLAN REVIEWED SOME EXPERIENCES IN FAR NORTH

Explorers Found That During Five Months of Sunlight the Radio Was Useless — Electrical Disturbances of the Northern Lights Had No Effect Upon Wireless—Party Succeeded in Growing Vegetables Under Glass on the Deck of the Bowdoin, and There Was Walrus, Whale, and Musk or Ox Meat in Abundance—There Was No Semblance of Scurvy During the 15 Months Trip.

Sydney, N. S., Sept. 16—The Arctic expedition of Captain Donald B. MacMillan, returning to its home port in Wiscasset, Maine, sailed from here this afternoon on the auxiliary schooner Bowdoin.

The explorer while here reviewed the experiences of the party in the course of their 15 months absence, emphasizing the part that radio played in their interests. The continual sunlight that began in March, however, prevented the use of the wireless for any time until a few days ago, when the electrical disturbances of the northern lights seemed to have ceased upon it. Dr. MacMillan said, was only the pleasantest incident of the trip was when I heard from my sister and my nieces and me through the air away up in the north," the explorer said.

MacMillan, who announced upon his arrival here that he would start back again on his way north on another Arctic expedition next year, said that his observations on the trip had closed convinced him that white men could exist anywhere the Eskimo can. "But I don't want white men will ever want to go to the Arctic," he added.

Arctic lands are not entirely barren, the explorer remarked, in commenting on the fact that they had grown excellent radishes, fresh from the garden of the governor at Dis-coe, the farthest north of the settlements in the region.

He added also that the party had succeeded in growing radishes of lettuce and spinach, under glasses on the deck of the Bowdoin during the long day of Arctic summer. There was no semblance of scurvy during the trip, as a result of the plentiful supply of fresh meat and vegetables; the party obtaining walrus, whale and musk ox meat in abundance.

White wolves were to be found unusually numerous, hunting in small packs, but the party had no report of any trouble with them. On the deck of the Bowdoin as she is sailing home are two young foxes in crates, caught by an old woman, who found them hiding in a rocky cave.

The Bowdoin's radio missed the word of the death of President Harding, but the Canadian government steamer Arctic picked it out of the air and passed it along to the Bowdoin when they met. That day, August 8, the Bowdoin's flag flew at half mast. It was the only time during the trip that the colors were lowered in memorial, all members of the party returning safely.

Discussing the radio operations, Dr. MacMillan said:

"Our radio worked splendidly, but owing to the coming of day in March we had little, or no use of it from that time for five months until a few days ago. This was on account of the continual sunlight. Arctic sunlight for some reason Kills radio. The northern lights, on the other hand, seemed to have no effect upon it. Of course, our winter quarters were far north of the northern lights. During the winter we got Dallas, Texas, and as far south as Catlina, Cal., but the east was mostly a sealed book. At times, we were in communication with the Canadian government steamer Arctic at Pond Inlet."

Dr. MacMillan has received a bushel of telegrams of congratulations by radio on the Bowdoin from friends all over the United States and Canada. One of those received Monday night informed him that he had been made an honorary member of the Rotary Club of Portland, Me.

MOTION BEFORE LEGION TO PREVENT FURTHER BONUSES

New York, Sept. 16.—Adoption of an amendment to the constitution of the American Legion, barring the organization from seeking to obtain further bonuses or rewards from the government, today was asked of the Legion convention now meeting in St. Paul.

The request was made by George Brokaw Compton, who resigned as New York county commander in 1920 as a protest against the action of the national executive committee in demanding adjusted compensation for able-bodied members. It was contained in a letter to the chairman of the convention resolutions committee, stating that the committee introduce and support the constitutional amendment at the present meeting.

"Let us make our stand unmistakable by amending our constitution so as to serve notice upon the people of our intention that the successful demands for adjusted compensation for able-bodied will never be repeated in any form," Mr. Compton wrote. "Service will make the Legion a more powerful force for good than self-service."

Such a step, the writer urged, would bring many new members into the organization and would "restore the confidence of all the people in the Legion."

TWO FATALITIES IN STORM IN GEORGIA

Macon, Ga., Sept. 16.—Two persons are dead, and a half dozen others were injured as a result of the storm that has been sweeping through Southern Georgia.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTOR TO RESIGN AS BANK PRESIDENT

Hartford Sept. 16.—In order not to jeopardize a Coolidge-Dawes vote in the electoral college Charles F. Brooker, of Ansonia, whose name heads the list of seven candidates for presidential electors nominated by the republican state convention, notified Chairman J. Henry Roraback of the state central committee yesterday that he will resign as president and director of the Ansonia National bank.

Under the constitution no person "holding an office of trust or profit under the United States" may serve as a presidential elector. It is a moot question whether this would apply to a director of a national bank, but Mr. Brooker decided not to take any chance on having his vote thrown out on a technicality.

Colonel Francis T. Maxwell, of Rockville, another of the republican nominees for presidential elector, said tonight that, for the same reason, he will resign as president and director of the Rockville National bank and as a director of the First National bank of Hartford and the Hanover National bank, of New York.

The "Directory of Directors" shows that only one other republican nominee for elector is a national bank director. Frederick W. Mercer, of New London is a director of the National Bank of Commerce of New London. Efforts to reach Mr. Mercer by telephone tonight to ascertain his attitude on the question elicited the information that he is out of the city for several days.

Chairman Roraback called the attention of all presidential elector nominees to the constitutional provision in question.

MUDLE ABOUT TERM OF PRISONERS' SENTENCE

New Haven, Sept. 16—Louis J. Derner, taxicab driver of 419 Oak street, who was arrested on the charge of knowing something about the robbery of $3,200 from John T. Dempsey, plumber of 77 Winchester street, by several men while on a taxicab ride to Waterbury and then back to Orange about two weeks ago, has presented a legal tangle to the Orange and New Haven officials that may have to be referred to the Connecticut supreme court for settlement.

Following the alleged robbery, Lerner was arraigned in the Orange court and according to Justice Frederick W. Jaynes, of that town, the case was continued for one week and Lerner was sent to the county jail in New Haven in default of $3,000 bond.

A week later, while Lerner's attorney was endeavoring to raise the bond, Lerner walked into his office, declaring that he had completed his term at a jail and had been discharged. An investigation disclosed that while the Orange judge had continued the case for a week, that Lerner had been received at the jail as a convicted prisoner with a week's sentence to serve. At the completion of that sentence, the man was discharged.

Lerner was taken back to Orange by his attorney and again arraigned before Judge Jaynes. He was then bound over to the superior court for trial in $500 bond and was returned to the jail. The question now has been raised whether Lerner, having served a week's sentence in jail can be tried and convicted again on the same charge.

Mr. Haskins was employed by the Northern Connecticut Light and Power company. COOLIDGE PICTURED AS A MAN OF STERLING QUALITIES

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 16—The popular picture of Calvin Coolidge is entirely accurate, United States senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania said in an address tonight at the New England republican women's conference here.

"There is no Coolidge legend," Senator Pepper said. "Those who affirm that there is such a legend are themselves the myth-makers of journalism. The materials for the picture are known to everybody and accessible to all. With them the people have made their own picture. The background is a training in hard work, plain living, straight thinking. The outline is an unbroken record of public service rendered without respect of persons but in the fear of God. The bright lights are the official acts of his administration, his messages, his courageous advocacy of measures of which he believes and his vetoes of bills of which he could not approve.

"Quick to heag, slow to speak, slow to wrath, he loses many opportunities for spectacular action by his determination to be right rather than showy. In simplicity, in shrewdness, in reserve, in home humor and in quiet force he is American manhood at its best. Those who do not admire the type have read the American history in vain.

"With like-minded candidates of tested character and proved capacity; with a supporting platform on which a united party can stand; with a definite policy respecting the controverted issues of tax reduction, agricultural relief, the tariff, the railroads and our foreign relations, the republican party has a right to expect intelligent voters of all types to declare that in a Coolidge administration rests America's brightest hope," Senator Pepper declared, after summarising the issues of the presidential campaign.

"The coalition between LaFollette and the democrats has no common constructive purpose," he continued. "It has only one objective—the defeat of Coolidge and Dawes. Republicans believe that the chance of such an outcome is remote. Yet the bare possibility should be enough to stimulate voters of all types to intense activity. If the republican ticket were to receive less than a majority of electoral votes the choice of a president and vice president, would be surrendered by the people to the very congress which they have stamped with their disapproval. LaFollette could and would prevent an election in the house.

"The senate, being limited in choice to the two vice presidential candidates highest on the list, would proceed to elect one of them. As between Dawes and Bryan, the coalition could choose the latter. Governor Bryan would then become president by default. Thus securing for the Bryan family at the hands of democratic and LaFollette senators an honor three times denied it by the votes of the American people."

Draft of Proposals For Outlawry of War

Has Been Submitted to Disarmament Committee of the League of Nations.

Geneva, Sept. 16 (By the A. P.)—The provisions of the draft protocol for the outlawry of war, already approved by the French and British representatives at the assembly of the league of nations, which was presented today by Foreign Ministers Benes of Czecho-Slovakia, to the disarmament committee of the league, and which became available this evening to The Associated Press, are in substance as follows:

The draft begins by stating that, with a view to insuring lasting peace in the world and to guaranteeing the security of peoples whose existence, liberty and territory might be threatened, and being desirous of establishing a system providing for peaceful settlement of disputes arising between the members of the international community and for the repression, if necessary, of international crime, and being determined to carry out the reduction and limitation of armaments contemplated in Article 8 of the covenant of the league of nations, it is agreed to accept the following provisions:

Articles 1, 2, 3 and 5 of the draft must eventually be drawn up in agreement with the arbitration commission of the assembly. They provide that the signatories recognize henceforward as obligatory ipso jure and without special convention, the jurisdiction of the world court of justice in conformity with the compulsory arbitration clause but with reservations.

These include that in the application of Articles 12, 13 and 15 of the covenant, the signatories confirm their undertaking to submit to the council of the league all disputes, in respect to which no other court of arbitration is provided for, with the understanding that the league assembly alone shall be competent to decide as to the necessity for the revision of existing treaties.

The council shall act as a court of arbitration, taking its decisions by a majority vote, and the parties to the dispute shall retain the right to sit in the council during discussion of the matter submitted. During examination of the dispute, the council may, by a majority vote, order measures to be taken by the parties involved with a view to preventing or stopping armed conflict. The procedure provided in the foregoing article shall apply to the permanent court of justice in cases which come within the competence of this court. If a dispute is submitted for arbitration to some other body than the court of the council, the council of the league shall have power to follow this procedure.

Article 4 of the draft provides that to safeguard the carrying out of provisional measures to prevent conflicts and to facilitate recognition of an aggressor, the council or the permanent court of justice, on its own initiative or at the request of one of the parties to the conflict, shall, when an appeal is made or at any other time, arranged for the sending of international supervisory commissions. These commissions shall during the entire course of the procedure be entrusted with the task of insuring that none of the parties engages upon the preparation of mobilization of an economic or military nature. The commissions shall be composed of military and civil experts appointed by the council of the league from lists constantly kept up to date by the different governments.

Article 5, which must go before the arbitration commission of the assembly declares that a signatory state which fails to submit its disputes to the rules of peaceful settlement indicated above or fails to carry out the awards or competent arbitration bodies within the limits defined in a decision and, if its acts of disobedience is liable to trouble world peace, then it shall be declared an aggressor state and outlawed. This declaration of aggression shall be made by the permanent court of justice when an order issued by it has not been carried out and in all other cases by the council voting by a majority.

The draft then goes on to deal with the vital question of sanctions. When the above declaration is made, the council of the league shall call upon the members of the league to put into operation the sanctions contained in Article 7 of the protocol. This article, which formed the chief subject of today's discussions before the committee, is one of the essential features of the draft. It declares that as soon as a declaration of aggression has been made and the outlawing of an aggressor has been effected by declaration, the obligations of the signatories concerning sanctions of all kinds contained in Article 16 of the covenant will immediately become operative.

The obligations shall be interpreted as obliging each member of the league to cooperate loyally and effectively in support of the league covenant and in resistance to acts of aggression. In accordance with Article 16 of the covenant, the signatories undertake individually or collectively to assist the state which is attacked or threatened and to give one another mutual support by facilities and reciprocal exchanges as regards supplies, raw materials, and foodstuffs of every kind, opening credits, transports and transit, and for this purpose to ensure the safety of the land and sea communications of the attacked or threatened state. The next paragraph stipulates that if both parties to a dispute have been declared aggressors according to the preceding provisions, then economic sanctions will be applied to both of them.

Former Bridgeport Bank Man Sentenced

Minimum Term of Three Years For Embezzlement—Had Pleaded Guilty.

Bridgeport, Sept. 16—Victor J. Martin, 24 years old, former receiving teller of the Savings department of the Commercial Bank and Trust company, of Bridgeport, was sentenced to state's prison for a minimum term of three years, on embezzlement charges, by Judge John W. Banks in the criminal superior court this afternoon.

Accountants who examined Martin's accounts alleged in reports read to the court that Martin, over a period of three years, had embezzled bank funds in the sum of $11,848.94. The accused pleaded guilty to only three counts, admitting embezzlements in the sum of $2,010.

Harold Hill Godfrey, of this city, pleading guilty to a charge of bigamy, was sentenced to three months in the county jail. While still legally married to Ida Mellon Godfrey, it was set forth he went through a marriage ceremony with Sadie McGee, of Philadelphia. Godfrey's first wife has brought a suit against him for a divorce. He assured Judge Banks, if the divorce is granted, that he will legally marry Miss McGee.

SUMMONS TO WASHINGTON BREAKS WILBUR PROGRAM

Washington, Sept. 16.—Summons of Secretary Wilbur back to Washington by President Coolidge at a time when the naval secretary still had at least five definite dates unfilled on his speaking program in the west, remained unexplained today beyond the disclosure at the White House that President Coolidge desired to talk with him about several matters "in the navy."

Early in the day, it was indicated that budget matters relating to appropriations desired by the navy, particularly for repair and modernization of battleships and for aviation development, had prompted the president's telegram to Mr. Wilbur.

Later, however, it was said Mr. Coolidge had other matters in mind on which he wished to talk with Mr. Wilbur, and probably would not have summoned the secretary because of the budget situation alone.

No statement was available as to what these other matters included. It is understood to have been the policy of the White House, however, for cabinet officers not to protract trips they might make away from the capital during the summer and fall, the president himself having set his official family an example by remaining at his desk through the summer except for a very brief visit to his father in Vermont.

The president's summons has caused Mr. Wilbur to cancel engagements to speak at Denver, Casper, Wyo., Chicago and other cities.

BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY SCOTTISH RITE MASONS

Boston, Sept. 16.—The Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, 33 degree, for the Northern Masonic jurisdiction, tonight took to itself 97 additional members who included Edwin B. Denby, former secretary of the navy, and Simeon D. Fess, United States senator from Ohio. As candidates from 15 states they were initiated into the 33rd degree at exercises that may be among the last to be held outside a temple of Masonic consecration.

The erection in this city within a few years of a Masonic temple that that will cost several million dollars, and will take rank as one of the most imposing in the world, was indicated in the allocution of Sovereign Grand Commander Leon M. Abbott. If the proposal that he voiced is carried out, this city, which is the grand east of the supreme council, would embrace all the administrative activities of the northern jurisdiction and the grand secretary's office and archives now located in New York would be removed here.

The proposal for a new temple, made by Mr. Abbott with the word that the supreme council had outgrown its facilities and that it was humiliating to have to hold its sessions in a hoel ballroom, took composite form with the information that Massachusetts bodies were already considering new headquarters because of similar conditions of growth.

SIX WORLD WAR VETERANS KILLED BY AN AUTOMOBILE

Occurred at a Highway Crossing Near St. Johns, N. F.— Leonard Reid, a Member of One of Newfoundland's First Families, Ran Down the Group — Reid is Held on a Charge of Murder, With Bail Set at $200,000—Two British Naval Officers and Two of Newfoundland's World War Heroes Were Among Those Killed.

St. John's, N. F., Sept. 16—A charge of murder was lodged today against Leonard Reid, held responsible for the deaths of six men who were killed when his automobile ran down a group of world war veterans at Callahan's Crossing, near this city early today. When arrested, Reid was held for manslaughter and the charge changed to murder in court today.

Bail was set at $200,000 for Reid, who is a member of one of Newfoundland' first families. Of this amount, Reid himself furnished $100,000 bonds while his uncle, Robert Reid, and a friend, Leonard Outerbridge, each posted $50,000.

Broken up by the tragedy, which took the lives of two British naval officers and two of the colony's world war heroes, Reid was at a loss to explain the accident.

Because of the deaths, all the remaing events in the elaborate program planned by the citizens' committee for the reception of the special British naval service squadron now visiting Newfoundland, were cancelled tonight. These plans included a reception ball for the fleet officers tonight and golf matches, dances and motor drives during the remaining days of the visit.

All had been attendants at a late supper with other officers of the British light cruiser squadron anchored at Conception Bay.

They were gathered beside the road, getting into a bus, when the Reid car ran down the group. Reid is the third son of the late Sir William Reid, long head of the Reid-Newfoundland Railway.

The funerals of five of the victims will be held here on Thursday. The body of George Harrison was sent by train today to his home in Chatham, N. B., where the services will be held.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16—Down the streets banked with humanity, past plazas packed with cheering thousands, more than 25,000 members of the American Legion marched in a great parade today, an outstanding event of their national convention.

With Legionnaire Charles G. Dawes, vice presidential nominee, tramping along with his Illinois buddies, the long line wound its way past a reviewing stand at the state capitol, where National Commander J. H. Quinn headed the group of prominent visitors which reviewed the parade.

Police estimates of the crowd that witnessed the spectacle placed the number in excess of 150,000.

In the reviewing stand with Commander Quinn were Governor J. E. Prus, of Minnesota; W. B. Haldeman of Louisville, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans; S. R. Van Sant, and Eli Torrance, of Minneapolis, past commanders of the G. A. R., and Former Judge K. M. Landis.

AMOSKEAG DISCUSSES WAGE REDUCTION WITH EMPLOYES

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 16.—A proposal that the 14,000 operatives of the Amoskeag Manufacturing company accept a wage reduction, was made today by W. Parker Straw, agent of the mills, at a conference with epresentatives of the workers. No decision was taken at the meeting and it was announced that further conference would be held.

In an informal talk to 260 operatives acting as representatives of the workers, the agent declared that under present wage conditions the Amoskeag company was handicapped in the market by competition with other mills which had adopted lower wage scales.

Some of the delegates, it was learned, were willing to accept a 10 per cent. reduction of wages if the mills are operated on a normal times basis while others opposed any readjustment at this time as unnecessary. At present about 50 per cent. of the full force of the mills are working, it was said.

FORECAST OF NOMINEES OF DEM. STATE CONVENTION

Hartford, Sept. 16—Expectations that Governor Charles G. Morris, son of the late Governor Lucius F. Morris, remained the logical democratic responsibility for the democratic state convention for Governor tonight, [illegible] the eve of the democratic state convention [illegible] convenes in Foot Guard [illegible] tonight. Notwithstanding [illegible] Mayor Albert N Phillips [illegible] Stamford, among [illegible] democratic leaders, the likelihood of [illegible] nominated for lieutenant-[illegible] was strengthened by the receipt of [illegible] from national Committee [illegible] S. Cummings approving [illegible] selection for second place.

There continued the talk of [illegible] Professor Harry Morgan Ayres of Wesleyan for lieutenant governor and the name of former Insurance Commissioner Burton Mansfield was occasionally mentioned in connection with the nomination, but advocates of [illegible] attitude appeared to settle The state [illegible] delegation elected [illegible] over enthusiastic [illegible] Mayor Phillips and a week ago the Stamford town chairman announced [illegible] gation to Mayor Davis' [illegible] for governor at the [illegible] Phillips' nomination as Stamford [illegible] was being seriously considered [illegible] party leaders.

Apparently the only [illegible] about the gubernatorial nomination [illegible] council tonight rested on [illegible] Mr Morris himself. In Litchfield county however there remained traces of the sentiment [illegible] night have made ex-Mayor William E Thoms of Waterbury the nominee for governor if he had not [illegible] the defeat of Governor Smith of New York for the democratic nomination for president at Madison Square Garden in July. A report from Waterbury during the day was to the effect that Litchfield county would start a movement to draft Thoms, but Waterbury democrats sent word to Hartford that both Thoms and Mayor Francis I. Guilfoile had decided irrevocably not to accept the nomination.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER OF A FASHIONABLE MODISTE

New York Sept. 16—An apartment, exotically furnished, met the eyes of investigators of the robbery of Miss Edith Rose, fashionable modiste whose rise to wealth was as sudden as it was mysterious. Four armed and unmasked men, entered her apartment last night while she was alone. The escort who protested, was struck over the head with the butt of a revolver and left unconscious on the floor.

The mystery surrounding the identity of the escort was dispelled late in the afternoon, when Miss Rose, after keeping his name secret throughout the early part of the investigation admitted that her wealthy admirer was Robert Hague, marine superintendent of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey. WILLIMANTIC

Unrestricted parking will continue in Willimantic for a number of days, due to the unexpected delay in the arrival of the parking signs. Acting Mayor George W. Hickey stated on Tuesday noon that the signs had been ordered, but would not be on hand at midnight this (Wednesday) night when the new ordinances were scheduled to go into effect. He pointed out that it would be impossible for a police officer to enforce the new laws but that they would go into effect and be upheld upon the erection of the signs. The delay will offer a respite of a few days to the local taxpayers, who are the most concerned, as a special edict provides that they shall not park more than fifteen minutes between North and Church streets on the north side of Main street. The taxis have occupied most of that space for some time.

Upon the refusal of the New Haven railroad to replace the alarm bell at Smith's crossing, on Ash street, with a more suitable and serviceable signal, Alderman James J. Lee has taken the matter up with the public utilities commission, through Corporation Counsel Thomas J. Kelley. By virtue of a resolution introduced by Alderman Lee and adopted by the common council the request for a more adequate signal at the crossing was forwarded to the railroad company. An investigator came here to look the situation over, and some time later the request was refused. In submitting data on the condition at the crossing Alderman Lee states that the old fashioned bell used as a warning signal there cannot be heard by the occupants of an automobile and further that it is more likely than not that it does not ring at all. From other direction the crossing is invisible until but a few feet away and the tracks are completely obscured. Ash street leads from the Boston and Providence highway to many points in the city and to all points in Mansfield, also to Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs.

Willimantic Rotarians listened to one of the finest talks given at their regular weekly sessions in the past year, Tuesday noon, when Professor H. A. Standish had charge of the business session. The visitors included Howard Bradford and Henry Lyons of the Putnam club, "Joe" Weymouth of the Norwich club and E. C. Ford and Ruel Gray of the New London club. The next meeting will be held in Hampton next Tuesday evening and supper will be served. Rev. A. Avery Gates, pastor of Amity and pastor of the Congregational church, Hampton, will deliver an address on The Philosophy of Service. Several five-minute talks will also be given on Rotary Education. Plans are laid for another attendance contest to start on October 14 and last to December 16. Secretary C. W. Hall will submit the names of the members of the two teams and they will in turn select captains. Steps were taken for insuring a weekly or a monthly publication of the club and to make the arrangements the following committee was appointed: Richard E. Dodge, chairman, Charles W. Hill, Valentine L. Murphy, Elliott S. Smith, George Buck, John F. Green and C. Harry Branch. The club voted to attend in a body the opening football game of Windham High school team September 27. On the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 11 the Hartford club will have charge of the program for a meeting of the local club. A vote of thanks was tendered Professor Seckerson and Rev. Gates, and also James P. Bath, who secured his services for the club.

Dante, famous European conjurer who is making his 2nd annual tour under the management of Thurston, greatest American magician, closes a three days engagement at the Palace theater tonight, there will be a special popular priced matinee this afternoon.

While in India some years ago, investigating Hindu magic and mysteries, Thurston "discovered" Dante, and prevailed upon him to take a trip with him through the orient for the purpose of studying the magical abilities and occult powers of magicians in all parts of that hemisphere—not alone India. Together they visited China, Japan, French Indo-China, Siam, Korea, traveled all over Arabia and Afghanistan and spent weeks with several Tartar tribes in southern Siberia.

Dante was the member of an order of Mahatmas in India for years and is an occultist of high degree.

Among the Thurston-Kellar illusions and mysteries which he presents are "The Ghost Woman," psychic phenomenon of the age. You may ask her any question. She is said to be unequalled as an exponent of mental telepathy. Also Alvin's Six Musical Wizards. If you've read Zane Grey's novel, you'll want to see the picture. But whether you've read the book or not, you'll go to see the production anyway, when we tell you that the picture is done entirely in color. And when we say entirely, we mean just that.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday there will be a complete change of programme with an exceptional ensemblage of Keith vaudeville and pictures.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

What should a man do if spurred by the romance of spring he wants to take his wife on a second honeymoon" in Cuba, and she refuses?

That was the situation confronting Lee Randon, the hero of Cupidea, Goddess of Love, a First National picture, produced and personally directed for Samuel Goldwyn by George Fitzmaurice, and which is the feature attraction at the Breed theater today.

"Don't be silly!" was her calm retort when he broached the subject. "I've got the house and the children to take care of. And, anyway, it's a foolish idea in my opinion."

But the man did not agree with her. Hurt by her lack of sentiment, he was a ready victim for Cupid when a woman who represented his ideal in every matter, came into his life.

The manner in which the two workers after happiness solved the situation which kept them rent down to an intolerable situation, the adventures in Cuba, and the denouement which came afterward constitutes a drama such as only the author, Joseph Hergesheimer, could write.

Lewis S. Stone and Irene Rich are cast as the husband and wife with Anna Rubens in the role of Cupidea.

Snub Pollard in Before the Public and the Fox news make up the remainder of the bill.

PALACE THEATER

Abounding in ludicrous situations and tense dramatic scenes, The Extra Girl, with Mabel Normand as the star, came to the Palace theatre for three days starting tomorrow. The comedy drama which was written by Mack Sennett, who also produced it with F. Richard Jones as the director, is considered the best yet of all the Normand pictures.

Its theme is wholesome, its appeal carrying unusual weight with present-day audiences and Miss Normand injects into the role of the unsophisticated country girl who sought to do or die in the heart of Hollywood picture activity her characteristic personality. The Extra Girl is Mabel Normand at her best. That is the way Mack Sennett sums it up and is also the way that Director Jones puts it. Miss Normand is supported by a cast that includes some very well-known players, including: Ralph Graves, Vernon Dent, Charlotte Mineau, Ramsey Wallace, William Desmond, George Nichols, Anna Hernandez, Carl Stockdale, Eric Mayne, Charles K. French and Elsie Tarron.

New Telephone Girl story number 9, The Bee's Knees, with Alberta Vaughn, first showing of the Pathe news in this city, and Sport Light.

Truth.

The Greek philosopher, Protagoras, maintained that all is illusion and that there is no such thing as truth. But Aristotle refuted him thus: "Your proposition is true or false; if it be false, then you are answered; if it be true, then there is something true and your proposition falls."

To Even Up.

Jud Tunkins says a man who talks by the hour may find time to show that he has to think by the minute.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Anticipating the fact that the Connecticut highway has its plans for building a cement roadway southward from a point above Attawaugan through Elmville and to the borough line of Danielson, the Crystal Water will undertake within the next few days an expensive improvement that will involve the laying of new metal pipe between Elmville and Judd avenue, a distance of approximately 4,000 feet.

Between Elmville and what is known as the Beaumont property the water company will parallel its present mains of 10-inch cement pipe, with 16-inch metal mains. Southward from that point, where the cement mains end, to Judd avenue the water company will lay another line of 10 inch metal mains to parallel its present line of 10-inch metal mains.

Mains for the improvement to be carried out already are being distributed along the route where the work is to be done. The operation will entail much expense upon the water company, but it will be done at this time in order to have the job completed before the building of cement highway is undertaken by the state, probably in the spring of next year. The water company's project will be completed during the coming fall.

When the proposed work is finished the water company will have a double line of mains between Elmville and Judd avenue. This means a higher water pressure for the borough. The cement mains that are to be paralleled are old pipes, under ground well over 30 years. With the new line in, the water company will be in a position to supply all the water Danielson may need, even considering its probable growth, for many years to come.

In these days when so much is heard about the textile depression throughout New England, Danielson is particular fortunate in having such a concern as the Pace Manufacturing company doing business in this community.

This concern now has 400 looms operating in its two plants here and is ready to start operating its bleachery plant the coming week. Bleaching is something new in textile activities in Danielson. The Pace company also has taken the lease of a mill in Putnam and will begin yarn manufacturing there in about two weeks.

At the present time the Pace company is operating its Furnace street mill here and also the big plant which it has taken over on Main street—formerly the mill of the Danielson Cotton company. The concern has ample business in sight and prospects of even greater demand for its products.

The two lower floors of the 4-story Main street plant are now in use for manufacturing purposes and the remainder of the available space is reserved for other equipment the company will install later.

Although it would not be definitely stated at the mill Tuesday afternoon that the Pace company is to start day and night operations in the not distant future, this is a likely prospect. In fact, some machinery of the company is now being operated on day and night schedules.

Eventually, it is forecasted, all of the manufacturing operations of the Pace company excepting its yarn making activities at Putnam, will be centered here. The concern has shown a constant and amazing growth during the past few years and has become a very important asset in Danielson's textile activities.

September by right must be considered as now listed among the general vacation months of the year, if the scores of cars from many states of the union passing through Danielson every day of the year are at all indicative.

The campaign in the interest of Killingly's candidate for selectmen is now in full swing. About every voter may anticipate being buttonholed by the workers for one candidate or another within the next fortnight.

Evidence is that if engineers of locomotives hauling trains on the New Haven road have any excess of steam in the boilers of their juggernauts they have instructions to get rid of it in blowing for grade crossings in Danielson. This may sound a bit peevish, but listen to them as they run through—either day or night. At least they are credited with giving warning enough to avoid any crossing accidents in this town. Even if they take a chance of awakening the dead.

The fact that Killingly High school's registration has grown from approximately 70-25 years ago to upwards of 280 today is evidence that Killingly continues to be commendably interested in education, and seem to forecast an even greater school a quarter century hence.

Of interest is the fact that numbers of people in this vicinity already are saving weekly amounts in a vacation club, these savings to provide money for the recreation period of 1925. It is easier to save a little each week for such a purpose than to dig it all out of conserved resources on the spur of the moment.

Some people never will believe in no parking signs. Daily drivers park their cars directly in front of such signs and then, naively looking over at an officer, inquire, 'Is it all right to park here?" It isn't that they can't read English. They are simply dumb.

Anything that was said in this column Tuesday morning about the absurdity of men not daring to wear straw hats after September 15, was not an argument against buying new hats for fall. That should be understood by anyone. All this talk about fall hats for men is, in any event, advertisement of the subject. And the hat dealers are welcome to the free advertising, which, by the way, reaches a host of people in this corner of the state. And there may be a suggestion in that last sentence for those who really think twice before spending their money for advertising in the territory to which reference has been made.

Miss Helen Cronin has returned to Mt. St. Joseph's college on the Hudson to enter upon her third year of study at that institution.

Arthur W. Williams, graduate of Killingly High school, the past June, has entered as a freshman at Storrs college.

A police officers of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. company remaining on duty here Tuesday, saw to it that the recently imposed restrictions as to parking on railroad property were strictly observed.

Excavations are underway for the foundations of the new building to be erected at the corner of Main and Academy streets by the Standard Supply company.

It is late in the season, but reports are that some good catches of pout are being taken from waters in the vicinity of East Killingly.

If the "Vote for Coolidge" or "Keep cool with Coolidge" signs on automobiles passing through Danielson mean anything in comparison with the number of Davis or LaFollette signs to be seen on motor cars means anything, they mean that Coolidge will win under wraps—not even heated up after the race. But that's something anyone can guess on in mid-September.

There are a number of Killingly people that are entrants for prizes at the Woodstock fair, which had its opening day Tuesday.

Like the other stockholders of the institution, Killingly owners of stock in the First National bank of Putnam are to be called upon to pay an assessment of 100 per cent. on their holdings in the defunct bank.

The dam at Daniel's Village, where there is a water power in the northeastern section of the town of Killingly, above Ballouville and Pineville, has been restored to normal condition after spring a leak at the week end and causing a considerable loss of the water stored there. Filling back of the dam was required to repair the weakened place. There was no damage to property and the expense involved was confined to restoring the dam, a relatively small charge. Once the sight of much activity, the Daniel's Village water power is now merely a storage proposition. It is owned by William M. Norton of Norwich. The Attawaugan company operating mills at Attawaugan, Ballouville and Pineville, has an arrangement with Mr. Norton under which it uses water from the Daniel's Village privilege as necessity requires. Today the water privilege amounts chiefly to a storage proposition.

In the town court Tuesday morning, Elbra L. Baker of Brooklyn was fined $25 and costs by Judge W. Fenner Woodwrad on a reckless driving charge that grew out of Mr. Baker driving his car into a collision with a horse-drawn vehicle in which Fred Mason of South Killingly was driving, the accident happening at Elmville. Of the fine imposed, $20 was remitted. An error in judgment of distance is held accountable for the smash, in which no one was injured.

PUTNAM

A despatch in a Boston paper, Tuesday, told of a truck load of 1100 gallons of alcohol in five gallon cans, valued at $10,000 being found in a barn near the Blue Lantern tea house at Osterville, Mass. The place where the truck was found was leased to a Boston man by Thomas W. Dobson, a former Putnam boy, who runs a summer camp and inn on Cape Cod.

Alexander Yarbedian, a local shoe merchant, left New York Tuesday to visit relatives in Syria. He sailed on a French line steamship and will go to Paris and other points and may visit Jerusalem before he returns to Putnam two months from now.

Mrs. W. H. Holmes of Mount Vernon, N. Y., is the guest of her mother, Mrs. A. W. Macdonald.

Alvin Martin of Boston, formerly a teller in the First National Bank, was in the city Tuesday calling on friends.

The city highway department is giving the streets and gutters a cleaning before the winter months set in.

From eight a. m. to five p. m. Tuesday, there was an animated sight about the fair grounds of the Woodstock Agricultural Society as the exhibits were coming in and the stage was being set for the opening of the sixty-sixth annual exhibition and cattle show. From all the countryside appeared at the entrance, on foot and in trucks, cattle, swine, poultry, and horses. These were assigned to the stalls and sheds on the north end of the grounds which were well filled before sunset which points to a good showing during the two days of the fair. Loads of fruit, flowers and vegetables also passed through the gates. These have been arranged in the exhibition halls together with exhibits domestic department of the farm, jellies, pastry, bread, cake, etc. Trade exhibits are also in the exhibition halls.

South of the hall is the row of stands of the so-called fakers. No gambling devices however are allowed on the grounds but there is a hurly-burly midway that will attract the young folks. Woodstock fair is just what it pretends to be—an old time fair and cattle show and also might be added as a quasi old home day.

BANK LOSSES "STAGGERING" TO PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Putnam, Sept. 16—A sub committee of the protective committee of the stockholders of the First National bank of Putnam has submitted its report to the protective committee, following a check-up of the assets of the First National Bank and the protective committee is sending out a report to the stockholders stating its opinion that it would be futile to attempt to reorganize the defunct bank. The sub-committee consists of John B. Byrne, state bank examiner, Nathan D. Prince a Danielson and Hartford banker and John F. Carpenter, attorney for the protective committee, made the check-up. Based on the sub-committee's findings the following letter has been addressed to the stockholders of the bank:

"Putnam, Conn., Sept. 16, 1924:

"To the Stockholders of the First National Bank of Putnam:

"The Protective Committee of the stockholders appointed John B. Byrne, Nathan D. Prince and John F. Carpenter to determine the condition of the bank. They examined the schedule of notes as submitted by the representative of the Comptroller and made report to the Protective Committee that in their opinion, based upon the limited examination they were allowed to make, the defalcations together with doubtful and worthless loans amount to such a sum that it will be very unwise for the stockholders to make the venture of taking over the assets of the bank under the method offered or suggested by the representative of the comptroller, especially as there may be further liabilities which have not yet been disclosed.

"The actual defalcations seem to be greatly in excess of the doubtful and worthless loans. A very considerable recovery might be realized from the questionable loans, but the defalcations, as reported by the representative of the comptroller, which the committee did not have an opportunity to examine, are staggering.

"Your committee is informed that the estate of Mr. Gilpatric may be turned over to the bankruptcy court for the benefit of all of his creditors including the bank. The actual value of his estate is problematical, and we do not believe it practical for the committee to find a purchaser of his estate, subject to the equities of creditors, as suggested by the representative of the comptroller.

"Your committee believes that more than $600,000 additional funds would be required from the stockholders to rehabilitate the bank and put it on a satisfactory basis, and many of the stockholders can ill afford to even raise the 100 per cent. assessment required by the National Bank act which is inevitable.

"It is impossible for your committee to make a reasonably accurate statement of the present condition of the bank other than the statement already submitted by the representative of the comptroller which shows an approximate deficiency of $700,000.

"Your committee finds no practical way to reorganize the bank and believes that it must be liquidated by the receiver.

"Respectfully submitted, John B Byrne, Byron D. Bugbee, Nathan D. Prince, John P. Grosvenor, George E McClellan, John F. Carpenter."

The above communication seems to make is conclusive that nothing further will be attempted along the line of reorganizing the old bank. This leaves the field open to a new bank.

Two things stand out prominently in the above report although not stated specifically. One is that the defalcations are "staggering" and the other that there may be other liabilities which have not yet been disclosed. A man in close touch with the affairs said Tuesday that in his opinion the total loss would pass the million dollar mark. This of course includes estates and securities that have disappeared, for which the bank is not liable but which were entrusted to Gilpatric as an individual and not as cashier. The same gentlemen stated that a checkup on the Gardner estate showed a shortage of $50,000 and that new claims were still coming in against the bank and Gilpatric.

It is now believed that the receipt of one hundred cents on the dollar by those holding valid claims against the bank, including depositors, is doubtful. It was estimated by one in a position to know that the accounts of creditors would be scaled as possible 25 per cent. It was also stated that most of the 100 per cent. assessment against stockholders is collectible but in some instances it will work great hardship and leave the former prosperous stockholders nearly penniless.

After having several conferences with the citizens' committee Monday and Tuesday, H. H. McKee, representative of the Comptroller left Tuesday for Washington. It is claimed that the members of the citizens' committee expect to have a charter granted the Citizens' National Bank of Putnam in a day or two. This is all that could be learned concerning the conferences between the Comptroller's representative and the committee.

DEMOCRATS OF THOMPSON NAME A STRONG TICKET

The Thompson Democrats showed by their large attendance, which was well over the 100 mark their keen interest in the party and the candidates It was noted that considerable enthusiasm was manifested when certain candidates were put in nomination and especially when Mr. Duhamel's name came up for town collector. Harmony prevailed and the caucus made up its list of candidates without any contest. The republican party in their caucuses last Thursday night, endorse dthree candidates for the school board, compelling the democratic party to do likewise. It was not decided to do so until the last minute advice coming from the town counsel as follows: There is an apparent vacancy on the school board, but the party winning the election must prove his right to serve on the board.

The caucus was called to order by the town committee chairman, E. J. Keegan who was elected permanent chairman of the meeting. Isabele R. Tefft acted as secretary. The following candidates were placed on the ticket: Assessor for three years, William St. Marie; board on relief, Lawrence P. Keegan; first selectman, Wilfred Bellrose; second selectman, G. M. Tefft; town clerk and treasurer, Byer Elliot; auditor, Louis Elliot; grand jurors, Francis J. SELLING AT THE ROADSIDE.

Those who live along the much traveled state highways are not oblivious to the chance of doing a direct producer-consumer business. They are conscious of the opportunity of selling their wares by the roadside and are doing a good business quite the same as the gasoline stations, the pop and hot dog stands.

There are enough who like fresh produce to take advantage of such chances to lay in a supply. A study made by the department of markets of the Massachusetts department of agriculture shows that pursuant to the demand the farmers are encouraged to cultivate new products, and instances are common where farmers now keep bees, poultry and small fruit simply because they have found a way to dispose of small lots of produce without a trip to market that often counterbalances the value of the returns.

In season it is possible to find all kinds of fruit and vegetables, eggs, poultry, honey, cider and flowers. Freshness is the one appeal which such stands have to offer over the city market and the buyer relies on the fact that the goods are obtained from the country where it is supposed they are produced. The roadside stand is thus doing the same service that the truck gardener who reaches the home does, but does it without the expense of transportation. Reaching the end of a run a mile east of Farmington and the buyer pays for the transportation, though if obtained in the same goods it is supposed would probably expect to be delivered. There are those who go into the country for such food with no thought of the transportation costs and from these way-side purchases the farmers are getting that profit which accrues to the wholesaler, middleman and retailer.

It is a business that has many possibilities and one that has resulted in the development in some states, since good roads will increase instead of decrease and the users thereof are increasing every year the roadside market's offer greater prospects as the years go on.

ILLINOIS MURDERERS.

It is going to be a long time before the Loeb-Leopold murder case in Chicago is forgotten. The case and the manner in which it was disposed of is bound to get consideration from various angles for some time to come.

It has long been said that what is the sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. Because life imprisonment has been handed out to two who committed one of the most fiendish crimes after due deliberation, it is only what should be expected when others seek that same degree of leniency. And that particularly when minors are involved.

There is a young man in Chicago named Grant who has been sentenced to be hanged for murder. He is awaiting execution at the very time when Loeb and Leopold have been imprisoned. The crime he committed couldn't have been any worse than that which was confessed by Loeb and Leopold, and inasmuch as there is no age distinction in the Illinois law concerning capital punishment, and there is supposed to be none between the rich and the poor, Grant is making a plea for similar treatment as the other two murderers got.

He stands forth as a poor young man who has not yet reached his majority. He has as good ground for his plea, if not better, as those clients of Darrow. Perhaps his misfortune lies in the fact that his case came before a court which gave greater consideration to the upholding of the law than to encouraging crime among minors by the practice of what seems to be unwarranted leniency and leaving it to the judgment of the governor of the state to turn them loose when he feels like it.

If two rich boys are to have their lives spared there is certainly justification for a poor boy to ask similar treatment. Such may not work for the protection of society and the respect for law in Illinois, but justice does not mean making flesh of one and fish of another.

AN EARNED REBUKE.

One of the prominent claims in the La Follette campaign is that he is a progressive, with progressive views and therefore making a special appeal to those rating themselves as progressives. There are those who take exception to such a claim and they are none less than those who were actually associated with and participating in the progressive effort of a dozen years ago. They see forth that Mr. La Follette is not a progressive that he kept aloof from the progressive movement headed by Theodore Roosevelt, had no use for it and the inference is that he terms himself a progressive now in hopes of getting the vote of the progressives, quite the same as he has cattled to the farmer-labor party and the socialists for the purpose of advancing his own interests.

In view of his record in the past toward the progressives, many of the leaders in that movement throughout the country have considered it necessary to denounce his position and set forth before the country, just what his standing toward the progressives is. They are frank to state that he plays to any party from which he can expect support, and in describing the third party they say: "Its elements are in complete disagreement on national policies. Himself a pronounced 'wet,' Senator LaFollette seeks the support of groups almost unanimously 'dry.' Himself an irreconcilable isolationist, he has obtained the endorsement of certain leaders of groups committed to the league of nations; and so with many other issues. There is no unity of principle, and the unity of candidacy ends in November. Only the supposed class conflict remains. Continuance of the movement would be mere alibi, covering a purpose to establish the European system of multiple class parties, which socialism in its own name has never been able to naturalize in America."

The La Follette effort to ride several horses going in opposite directions at one and the same time has been effectively spiked by the progressives. They are unwilling to tolerate such a straddler.

TACKLING THE DEBT.

According to the Paris Excelsior, Premier Herriot is busy pruning the budget. It has been urged that inasmuch as France has not been able to balance its budget for sometime that there would be little chance of paying its debt to the United States.

Premier Herriot apparently takes the position that there must be retrenchments and when he sets out to get it down where it belongs he not only has a good sized job but one which has had to be tackled by other countries including this. Piling up expenditures is always easier than keeping them down. There is always an endless use to which government funds can be put. Some are justified and some are not. The aim of the French premier is apparently to cut expenditures to a point where it is possible to balance the budget, so that the revenue and taxes will be sufficient to meet requirements.

That being done there is ground for satisfaction over the intention of the French premier to use the money received from Germany in 1926 for the purpose of establishing a sinking fund that will be used for the purpose of meeting the internal and external debts. France has persistently maintained that the payment of its debts depended upon the manner in which Germany met its obligations. Thus when it considers the utilization of the money coming from Germany to wipe out its debts it is attacking a condition which will be made the easier by getting early attention. When France gets to the point where it prevents an annual deficit and reduces debt and interest accounts it will be making that progress which is always so desirable. Premier Herriot understands the importance of getting headed in the right direction.

NAVAL ACADEMY RULING.

The government maintains the naval academy at Annapolis for the purpose of training young men to become officers in the navy. It is not simply an institution of learning, the graduates of which are expected to go out into the world and desert the navy. If it were the object of the government simply to provide an education it would be better to change the navy.

Looking at the situation in that light Secretary Wilbur of the navy department has accepted the suggestion of Rear Admiral Wilson, superintendent of the naval academy, and made it a rule that all midshipmen must serve two years in the navy after graduating from Annapolis.

Trained for the navy it is to be expected that that training will be put to such use that the government as well as the individual will benefit. By requiring that there must be two years training at sea following graduation the young men are bound to be placed in a much more valuable position as subjects for navy commissions than otherwise and they at least owe it to the government to have such a thorough tryout in the service.

When midshipmen resign just before graduation their training, so far as the navy is concerned must be rated as a total loss. There are those who go from the navy to more remunerative places but that results where promotions do not come rapidly enough and where private business is able to make attractive offers for desired men. The two years' service after graduation will affect only those who do not intend to remain with the navy, and for that reason must be regarded as a timely requirement.

STORY OF A HOLDUP

"I've come to the conclusion that it doesn't always pay to be too awfully tidy," remarked the caller as she settled into Mrs. Simmons' most comfortable chair. "You were asking me about our motor trip and that made me think of it."

"Oh, one's motor trip you can't be gowned as if you were going to a tea," agreed Mrs. Simmons. "If you start out all fixed up you soon lose all your style and freshness and look like a tramp anyway."

"I was brought up to be very particular," continued the caller. "In order to help me be so, they gave me a penny for every button I sewed on and some other amount for every pair of my stockings I darned. It surely started me on the right road, even though I departed from it later."

"One never does stick to those fussy things as one gets older," said Mrs. Simmons. "But if we were not taught to be particular I suppose our clothes would never get mended."

"What made me think of it," said the caller, "was your asking me about my trip. You see, we went away up into a part of the country that few people got to and my husband said he was glad we had put all our valuable things in storage, and I was careful not to tell him that I had with me my wedding pearls, a diamond bar pin and two rings with jewels in."

"Dear me," exclaimed Mrs. Simmons. "However did you come to take such things with you?"

"Well, you see," explained the caller, "I never go anywhere without my pearls, because they are real, and I should never feel safe a minute if they were away from me. The other things I wear all the time and so didn't give them ever a thought. It would have been all right if we hadn't been held up."

"Held up!" cried Mrs. Simmons. "Gracious! Where did it happen."

"We were nearing a wood," said the caller, "but we could see a long way through it because the trees were at a little distance from the road. My husband and Mr. Dunbar—we had the Dunbars with us—said they didn't like the looks of some men they could see at the top of the hill on the far side of the wood. Of course they couldn't see the men's faces, but they meant the way the men acted, going from side to side of the road and all that, you see. They were silhouited against the sky and showed very plainly, although their faces didn't show.

"As soon as they said that I slipped off my pearls and my rings and the bar pin and put them into my pocket. It was the only thing to do and I didn't think I could save them if I slipped them under the seat, as some people do. Mrs. Dunbar just laughed at our husbands and didn't hide anything.

"Well, when we reached the top of the hill, sure enough, we were told to stop, and Mrs. Dunbar and I were made to get out and stand at the side of the road while one man guarded us and the other hunted for valuables in the car and on the gentlemen. It was really very exciting, though I felt terrible about losing my things. Our husbands had very little money in their pockets and carried only cheap watches, so the men didn't get much from them, but they got Mrs. Dunbar's watch and a ring and her earrings. They went through my pockets and, of course, the first thing they went for was the pocket in which I had put my valuables."

"You poor thing!" cried Mrs. Simmons. "And you must have been horribly frightened!"

"Now that was the funny part," said the caller, with a laugh. "I was so mad that I wasn't scared a bit. I was trying to think all that time, too what my husband would say when I told him. I was still wondering when the men let us go and I took my seat in the car. After we had gone a way, however, I was uncomfortable and put my hand on the cushion to see what I was sitting on. Then, after investigation, I discovered that there was a big hole in my coat pocket that I had neglected to mend and all my valuables were safe and sound having slipped down into the lining when they made us get out and stand up to be searched. I'm not going to mend any more holes in pockets!"—Chicago News.

Morgenthau Forced From Ideal

Early in life Henry Morgenthau established his ideal, necessity veered him from it and he found it difficult to follow in the rush of other success.

With 13 other children he came with his parents to this country, at 9 years of age, from Mannheim, Germany, the place of his birth. The family settled in New York, the boy attended public school and later the College of the City of New York.

In his youth he decided to devote his life to idealistic enterprises. He joined the "Union of Higher Life," the members of which were pledged to spread a system of ethical culture based on works of practical philanthropy.

Completing the course in law at Columbia university, he became a member of a firm of attorneys when 21 years old. Four years later he was married. Soon afterward came financial disappointments, and he had to devote most of his time for several years to find the means to provide for his family.

With the hope of making his future income moderately secure that he might resume his idealistic avocations he plunged into law and then into business. At 43 he became president of the Central Realty Bond & Trust Co., and six years later of the Henry Morgenthau Co. He developed into a leading real estate operator in New York, was one of the first to introduce corporate ownership in the realty field, accumulating a fortune. In 1905 came the warnings of the financial panic of 1907. Taking stock of his condition, Morgenthau suddenly realized that he was immersed in business and was still far from his ideal. It took five years for him to withdraw from the marts of trade, so extensive were his activities.

From that time he made his ideal his ambition of life. He became diligent in civil and national affairs President Wilson appointed him ambassador to Turkey and he was invited to join the Turkish cabinet. When the World war started he represented this and nine other countries in Turkey and later protected American and others detained there.

He still is active in many public enterprises and is one of the country's leaders in philanthropic and altruistic work.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, who celebrates his 53rd birthday anniversary today, has been Director-General of the Pan-American Union since 1921. Previously he had served as chief of the Latin-American Division of the State Department and before that had been a professor in the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Rowe is one of the best informed and most experienced of his countrymen on all questions pertaining to political science and actual governmental conditions in the nations of the Americas. Even before leaving the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, of which he had been a member since 1896, he had served the government in many capacities. He had much to do with shaping the organic law and methods of administration in Porto Rico and Cuba. In 1916 he was secretary of the commission named to settle the boundary and other issues with Mexico. During the war he served as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, handling especially financial matters which concerned the Latin American countries.

Stories That Recall Others

Her Idea of Knighthood.

Mother had told Betty, aged four, the story of Sir Walter Raleigh and Queen Elizabeth, and how the gallant knight had spread his coat for the queen to walk upon when they had come to the mud.

A few days later the vegetable man, whose name is Raleigh, brought some vegetables to the door. His coat had a tiny bit of mud on it, and Betty says: "Are you the one that let the queen walk on your coat?"

Allowance Restored.

A certain young business man feeling the need of economy, decided that a good place to begin to reduce expenses would be to cut the allowance handed to the wife each pay day. She was not pleased, but said nothing, depending on strategy to bring him to terms.

He liked a bountiful table and soon began to miss certain luxuries. He expostulated with his wife but she simply told him that the cost of living was so high and the allowance so small it was difficult to make ends meet.

Soon some of his friends began inquiring about his health, telling him he was getting thin and looking bad. He began to look worried but insisted he felt all right. One day shortly after arriving at the office he found he had forgotten an important paper and had to return home hurriedly for it. On entering the house very appetizing odors assailed his nostrils. He walked rapidly to the kitchen and there found his wife and son enjoying a bountiful breakfast. There was a little explaining with the result that the allowance was restored and the worried expression soon left his face.

"Charlie," said a mother to her son, who had been naughty, "you must be a better boy or you will never go to heaven."

"And suppose I am real good and go there," said Charles, "will I have to keep right on being good afterward?"—Chicago News.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

About Bears

"Hello, what's this?" asked Little Jack Rabbit, looking at a foot-print in the soft earth, as he hopped up the Shady Forest Trail. "Guess the Farmer's boy has been walking here in his bare feet."

"Guess again," shouted a voice just like that quick as the bills on the first of the month and down from a tree fluttered Professor Jim Crow, his Wisdom Book under his wing and a pair of gold rimmed spectacles on his nose.

Whose foot print is it?

"Whose foot-print is it?" asked the little bunny, stooping over to look more closely.

"The Big Brown Bear's, of course," replied the wise old blackbird.

"I should have known it," sighed the little rabbit. "It's much too large to be the Farmer Boy's."

"It wouldn't have been when the Big Brown Bear was two months old," answered Professor Crow. "In fact, it would have been too small. When the Big Brown Bear was two months old he was no larger than you. Did you know that?"

"No, I didn't," answered the truthful little bunny. "Maybe I'm dreadfully ignorant."

"Well, let me teach you something," replied the Professor, and opening his Wisdom, he began:

"The Big Brown Bear puts his whole foot on the ground, while all members of the Dog and Cat families walk wholly on their toes."

"Dearest me," sighed the bunny boy, "please read some more from your Wisdom Book."

"Oh, I can remember without looking," answered Professor Jim Crow, closing his book with a snap. "When the Big Brown Bear was born in the middle of the winter he was no larger than Mr. Sharptooth Rat. It was 40 days before he could open his eyes, and two months before he could scramble out of his den. As I said before, at that time he was no larger than you, little rabbit."

"Gracious me, how he has grown since then," laughed the bunny boy. "Did he have any sisters or brothers?"

"Yes, he had a twin sister, all black."

"What!" exclaimed the surprised little rabbit, "was she a black bear?"

"She certainly was," answered Professor Jim Crow. "As black as my swallow tail feather coat. It's not strange at all. It often happens. Black bears are brown bears and brown bears are black bears. Sometimes the brown ones are called Cinnamon Bears. But they are all of the same family. Yes sir. They all have long, shaggy fur, round ears and big paws, armed with long claws."

"The Big Brown Bear is very kind to me," said the little rabbit. "I'm not afraid of him."

"No, why should you be? Bears harm no one unless they are attacked," answered Professor Jim Crow, and with a flap of his wings, away he flew, back to his little bungaloo,—I beg pardon, his little Pine Tree bungalow.

And in the next story you shall hear what the Big Brown Bear has to say for himself.

POETRY—

SEPTEMBER

Now comes the mild September
In rainbow gown and cap,
And she scatters as she passes
The treasures of her lap.

How blush the apples when they see
The twinkle of her feet;
She bears a basket in her arms
Of barley, corn and wheat.

By night she glides in silver mists,
By day she walks on wool;
She passes by the empty barn
And lo the lofts are full.

Soft eyed September, hail to thee
Of all the months most boon,
Of flaming leaf and lovesome star.
And mellow harvest noon.
—W. D. GOUGH in Ottawa Citizen.

SEPTIENTIA LUNAE

The wisdom of the world said unto me:
"Go forth and run, the race is to the brave"
Perchance some honor tarrieth for thee."
"As tarrieth," I said "for sure, the grace."
For I had pondered on a rune of roses,
Which to her votaries the moon discloses.

The wisdom of the world said: "There are bays:
Go forth and run, for victory is good,
After the stress of the laborious days."
"Yet," said I, shall I be the worms' sweet food,"
As I went musing on a rune of roses,
Which in her hour, the pale, soft moon discloses.

Then said my voices: "Wherefore strive or run,
On dusty highways ever, a vain race!
The long night cometh, starless, void of sun,
What light shall serve thee like her golden face?"
For I had pondered on a rune of roses,
And knew some secrets which the moon discloses.

"Yea," said I "for her eyes are pure and sweet
As lilies, and the fragrance of her hair
Is many laurels and it is not meet
To run for shadows when the prize is here";
And I went riding in that rune of roses
Which to her votaries the moon discloses.

FAT

Says French Beauty Specialist

HOW TO BE SLENDER AND HEALTHY

"Among the hundreds of women I treat," says Madame Elaine, well known beauty specialist of Paris and New York, "90% of them could take off 10 years from their appearance by reducing. most of them are good looking and young and could be very attractive if "FAT" had not changed them into middle-aged matronly looking women.

"Some women do not realize that even a slight double chin is a sign of age. they are trying to make themselves believe that their large hips and busts are only curves but outsiders whose eyes are more critical call it UGLY ROLLS OF FAT—I know just how fat people feel. I once myself weighed over 180 pounds and although only a young woman looked like 40. For years I tried everything to reduce without success—Starved myself to death, walked and exercised only to find my weight increasing—I was in a most desperate mood when my physician advised me to try SANGRINA, the discovery of a French scientist. I used it 3 weeks and lost 16 pounds—I have never regained weight and my health is splendid.

"I have advised SANGRINA to every fat man and woman I could reach and have known them to obtain most astonishing results—SANGRINA is a small tablet to be taken three times a day—does not contain any harmful drugs and reduces you even though everything else has failed. It is the easiest, safest and most up-to-date way to be slender and healthy. SANGRINA is endorsed by physicians, nurses, clinics, etc., etc. and all reliable and leading drug stores sell it. BE SURE TO ASK FOR and GET SANGRINA as it is sold on a guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded." (Look for the words "VERITABLES TABLETTES" San-gri-na. French Scientific Preparation). WEST SIDE RESIDENTS ORGANIZE SOCIETY FOR COMMUNITY WORK

With 54 charter members the West End Community Society was organized Tuesday evening at the Elizabeth street school building by residents of the West Side. The new society which has three aims, civic improvement in the community, the holding of monthly forums and the holding of social gatherings from time to time, is an outgrowth of the community celebration held on the Fourth of July by the residents of the West Side.

With 75 present the meeting opened at 8 o'clock with community singing followed by an interesting talk on New England Week by John J. O'Rourke, secretary of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce. Mr. O'Rourke pointed out how New England has exceptionally fine facilities for manufacturing, better than the facilities afforded by other sections of the country and he gave a number of statistics pertaining to Norwich manufacturing enterprises.

Following vocal solos by Fred Maples, accompanied by Frederick Geer, Judge Nelson J. Ayling spoke on The Community Spirit. Judge Ayling explained what the community spirit really is and gave a number of community illustrations. He complimented the people on the West Side on the excellent and modern school building they have and said he will be glad to see the time come when all sections of the town will have buildings equally well equipped.

Judge Ayling's talk was followed by a talk given by Walter F. Lester, president of the town school board. During his remarks President Lester asked for the cooperation of the people of the West Side in securing modern buildings for other sections of the town. He complimented the people of the West Side in making use of the Elizabeth street building for the holding of community gatherings.

Paul A. Brown, who acted as chairman of the meeting, outlined the purposes of the proposed organization. He called attention to the fact that the primary purpose of the organization is civic improvement in the community. A second aim, he explained, is the holding of forums once a month at which recognized authorities on various subjects of general interest will be heard. A third aim, Mr. Brown explained, is the holding of social gatherings for the people of the community.

The announcement of the purposes of the proposed organization was very enthusiastically received by the entire assemblage. Following the reading of the constitution 54 signed up as charter members. Officers were elected as follows:

President, Paul A. Brown; first vice president, Maurice Bergstresser; second vice president, C. E. Carpenter; third vice president, Mrs. Lena Pukalus; secretary and treasurer, Frank D. Davis; assistant secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Blanche Griffith.

Board of control, John McWilliams, Samuel Slosberg and Mrs. Ffank I. Royce.

Lookout committee, John B. Stanton, H. E. Fenton and Miss Coughlin.

An intensive drive is being inaugurated to secure every resident of the West Side as a member of the new organization before the next regular meeting which will be held in the school building, the second Tuesday evening in October.

TOWN SCHOOL BOARD APPROVES BUILDING PLANS

The town school board at a meeting held Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock discussed the plans for the new school building to be erected on East Main street and practically decided on the plans for the building. Bids for the construction of the building will be asked for and according to a decision reached at the meeting Tuesday the bids will be opened on October 7th when the contract will be awarded. It is expected that work on the new building will be started immediately after the letting of the contract.

The new building will be 100 feet long by 55 feet wide with two floors and a basement. In the basement will be located the boiler room, fuel room, motor room and blower room for providing ventilation throughout the structure. There will also be two play rooms in the basement, one for boys and the other for girls. The play rooms to be used at recess during stormy weather. There will also be a large sized community room which can be used for election purposes for the East Side district. At either end of the building will be located two main toilet rooms.

The main entrance from the street will be located in the center of the building. Immediately to the right of the entrance there will be a large kindergarten room fully equipped with modern appliances. The school office and supply room will be at the left of the main entrance. A corridor will run the whole length of the building. Besides the kindergarten room there will be two class rooms and the main auditorium on the ground floor. A partition with sliding doors between the corridor and the main auditorium will allow the use of both together giving a seating capacity of about 250 people. The auditorium will be so arranged that if necessary it can be converted into two standard sized class rooms.

There will be a main central corridor with three standard sized class rooms on the second floor. This will provide for eight full sized class rooms in the building, besides the kindergarten room and the main auditorium. The main auditorium will have two entrances, one through the main entrance to the school and the other through a separate entrance at the side of the building.

The plans which are by Chandler and Palmer call for fire-proof construction throughout with floors of re-inforced concrete and wooden top floors in the class rooms. WILL NOT STOP AUTO RACING AT SYRACUSE

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Automobile racing at the New York state fair will not be discontinued as a result of the fatal accident yesterday to "Jimmy" Murphy, internationally known racing driver, it was officially announced tonight by the state fair commission.

Investigation of the affair has been closed, so far as the commission is concerned, it was said, and automobile racing will be allowed to continue in the future as the final day feature of the fair. The crash in which Murphy was involved was characterized by Commissioner John H. Cahill, in charge of racing at the fair, as one of the unfortunate events liable to occur at any time during such sports, and the commission feels that no blame of responsibility can be placed.

To abandon automobile racing, Commissioner Cahill pointed out, would also make necessary discontinuance of the Grand Circuit racing which features the first five days of the fair, for that sport also claimed the life of a driver during the recent meet here when Thomas G. Hinds was killed at almost exactly the same spot on the track where Murphy met his death yesterday.

MR. M'ELWYN WINS FEATURE EVENT AT TOLEDO

Toledo, O., Sept. 16.—Mr. McElyn, driven by Ben White, won a straight heat victory in the fifteenth renewal of the Matron stake for three-year-old trotters—foals of 1921, feature event of the Grand Circuit program here on Tuesday and carried away the major portion of the prize money, the event having a value of $6.000.

Mr. McElwyn was a heavy favorite and didn't have any trouble trotting away from Guy Richard, Eric Guy and Colonel Bosworth. Tommy Murphy's Rachael Dillon was drawn in this event on account of lameness.

The Toledo Times pace went to Russell Ongale, McDonald up. Russell Ongale won the first two heats but was nosed out in the third heat by Elverso, with Morrison in the sulky. Oscawan, driven by Tom Ackerman, easily captured the 2.11 trot in straight heats. The one upset of the day was the victory of Tommy Murphy in the 2.05 trot. He won the event with Clyde the Great by taking the first and third heats. Guy Lightning, the favorite, took the second heat.

TWO VETERANS RETURN TO YALE FOOTBALL FIELD

New Haven, Sept. 16.—Two new arrivals were added to the Yale football squad this afternoon when the men reported at Pratt field for their second day of work. They were Dick Luman, veteran end for two years, and Al Lindley, a halfback on the scrubs last year, better known as stroke of the Yale crew in the Olympics last July Lindley will again go out for halfback on the scrubs this year. Luman took his old place at right end on the varsity for part of the afternoon's signal drill.

E. L. Richards, who was captain of the team 40 years ago, was one of the interested spectators at the field.

Tod Wight, who was a punt on the team three years ago, and who did not play last year because of injuries, will not return to college this year.

Today's work consisted of starts, passing and falling on the ball and breaking through.

ACADEMY FOOTBALL WORK DEVOTED TO LINE PRACTICE

Coach Artken had his squad of Academy football candidates working hard Tuesday afternoon on the the fundamentals of line work. The squad was divided into groups of three and the greater part of the afternoon's work was devoted to blocking and breaking through. Later in the afternoon the squad was divided into teams and there was light signal work, Jimmy Williams working at quarterback for one team while "Pheno" Tombari handled the other squad.

It is, of course, too early to pick a real first team but there are several who show decided promise both on the line and in the backfield. The line this year will be as heavy as the average high school and the backfield will be exceptionally fast as there are a number of candidates out who show a world of speed although not heavy enough for the old fashioned line-bucking plays. There is a noticeable increase in the enthusiasm of the squad and everyone appears anxious and willing to work, something that has not been true of the teams for the past few years.

BARNES PUTS BRADY OUT OF TOURNEY IN SPECTACULAR EXTRA-HOLE MATCH

French Lick, Ind., Sept. 16.—(By the A. P.)—Ending a day of brilliant golf in which nearly all of the 32 contenders shot par or better over the difficult French Lick championship course, Jim Barnes and Mike Brady, of New York, furnished a sun-down climax by playing a match that went three extra holes before Barnes finally won. Brady was prevented from remaining in the national professional championship by a piece of mud which stopped his putt on the lip of the cup for a half in birdie three.

Most of the favorites in the sixteen matches survived the 36-hole grind although a few upsets lent interest to the contest.

Gene Sarazen, defending his title, had a stiff contest with the veteran, Fred McLeod, of Washington, but he finally came through a winner, 5 to 4.

The British open champion, Walter Hagen, of New York, had no trouble defeating Tom Harmon, of the same city, 6 and 5. The western open champion, Bill Mehlhorn, of St. Louis, fell a victim, 4 and 3, to Francis Gallett, of New York. Jock Hutchison, formerly British open champion, was eliminated 4 and 3 by Eddie Towne, of Philadelphia.

Bob Cruickshank, of New York, defeated Willie Ogg, of Worcester, Mass., 7 and 5. Cruickshank set a record of 32 for the first nine. Hagen had the next easiest victory at 6 and 4.

The best golf of the day was played by Henry Cuici, of New York, in defeating Charles Hoffner, Philadelphia, 4 and 2. Cuici shot a 67 in the morning round but nevertheless he was one down at the end of 18 holes for his opponent had chalked up a 66. The New Yorker scored 1 under par on the first nine afternoon round and thereby gained a lead of 2 up, although Hoffner was shooting perfect golf. Cuici soon clinched his victory after turning into the home stretch by shooting two under par for the seven holes. He had top way on this line.

In tomorrow's 36-hole matches, William Macfarlane, of New York, last year Jones, Farrell, of the same city, who defeated Neil Christian of Yakima, Washington, 2 and 1. Hagen will cross clubs with Al Watrous, of Grand Rapids, who had to play better than par to overcome George Aubach of Boston, 3 and 1. Gallett will meet A. Espinosa of Chicago who was never headed by Art Hall, of Detroit, winning 4 and 3. Cruickshank has as his opponent, Ray Derr, of Philadelphia, who defeated Harry Hampton, of Canton, Ohio, 2 up.

In the lower half Cuici will meet Dan Williams of New York, while Sarazen has for an opponent Larry Nabholtz, of Lima, Ohio. The latter has so played the most even match of the day until he finally overcame Jack Forrester, of New York, 2 up. Barnes must defend his position against Towne, while the remaining match is between French and Mortie Dutra, who has had much trouble today in eliminating Leo Diegel, of Washington.

CUBS ADVANCE TO FOURTH PLACE BY DOUBLE VICTORY

Boston, Sept. 16.—Chicago went into fourth place by winning both games from Boston today. The scores were 5 and 4 to 2, the second game going 12 innings. McNamara's home run, Grigsby, Harriett's bunt, Cotter's triple and a single by Adams gave the visitors two runs in the twelfth. Ramsdell's fielding was spectacular. Scores:

PIRATES GET EVEN BREAK WITH PHILLIES IN DOUBLE

Philadelphia, Sept. 16. — Pittsburgh could only get an even break in the doubleheader with Philadelphia today dropping the first game 6 to 5, but slugging their way to a 13 to 7 victory in the second. One big inning, in which the Phillies solved Cooper's delivery for 7 hits and six runs, cost the Pirates the first game. Schmidt hit a home run with the bases full in the seventh inning of this game and made victory certain. Glenn Wright had a great day at bat, getting eight straight hits in the two contests. Score:

WHITE SOX WIN EASY GAME FROM RED SOX

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Earl Sheely's three-base smash with the bases filled in the first inning gave Chicago a commanding lead over Boston, and the locals won a free hitting game, 8 to 4. Bib Falk led the attack for the locals with four hits, including a double, in four trips to the plate.

The Chicago players wore black crepe on their left arms in memory of their manager, Frank Chance. The score:

Not Satisfied With Result

To the Sporting Public:

Now that the Married Men-Single Men series of the East Side are over and the Single Men are being heralded as champions and their heads have swollen so that some have had to discard their hats I would like to make a statement in regard to last Sunday's game. Everyone that happened to be present and loves clean honest and fair baseball will no doubt agree with me that we were openly robbed at many different times when things were close by poor decisions given by the umpire who no doubt meant well enough but at the same time kept us from winning the game which we should and would have won had he been a wee bit more careful. We don't mean to cry or crab now that its all over but would like another opportunity to prove that we really can defeat the same team that are now crowing over their wonderful feat of last Sunday.

No doubt Manager Pedace and his athletes will have one grand laugh when they see this but to prove that we are not merely looking for sympathy we have scraped together ($100) one hundred dollars in cold cash and any part of it says that we can beat the Single Men in another game, we had really taken the past series as a joke so that everyone could have a good time but at last Sunday's game the Single Men proved themselves a bunch of poor sports and we dare them to give us a game either for fun if they can't scrape up any long green or as I said before any part of one hundred dollars. We are willing to concede to them the championship of the East Side and all that goes with it but we want another game either for fun, money, or marbles.

Hoping that this will knock them off their high horse.

I remain

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Fordham Baseball Coach

Score is 1 to 0 in favor of the team in the field. Runners on first and third. Runner on first attempts to steal second.

Who should cover second base to take the throw from the catcher?

That all depends on the kind of a hitter at the bat. If he is a left handed hitter and the pitcher is giving him a slow ball or a curved ball, the shortstop should cover it. If a right handed hitter and the pitcher is serving him with a slow ball, or a curve, the second baseman should cover it. Infielders should always study hitters and remember in what direction they usually hit. Then if they know what kind of a ball is being pitched, they will cover any hit by the batter a greater proportion of the time.

AMERICAN TEAM BEATS BRITISH POLO CHALLENGERS

International Field, Westbury, Sept. 16.—(By The A. P.)—America successfully defended the International challenge cup, emblem of polo supremacy, today by defeating Great Britain, 14 to 5, in the second and deciding match of the series.

The Prince of Wales was among the crowd of 30,000 that saw the United States ride to a triumph as decisive as in the first match last Saturday. The new British lineup, with Lacey again the outstanding star, put up a stubborn fight but were outclassed by the Yankees' superior hitting and team work. GIANTS LOSE TWO POINTS IN DOUBLE HEADER SPLIT

New York, Sept. 16. — Cincinnati held the New York National league pace setters to an even break in a double - header here today. The Giants won the first game 5 to 1, and Cincinnati took the second 3 to 1.

New York was outhit in the first game, but McQuillan kept the eleven Cincinnati hits well scattered. Bressler's double and a sacrifice enabled Cincinnati to escape a shutout in the ninth. Mays was effective in every inning but the third, when the Giants bunched four hits and a base on balls for four runs.

Cincinnati won the second game with a batch of three runs scored off Barnes in the third, the result of Daubert's triple and three singles. Donohue held New York to one hit until the seventh, when Kelly opened on him with a home run and Terry and Wilson followed with singles. May then was called in and stopped the Giants rally. Scores:

Old Time Baseball Fan Dead

Boston, Sept. 16.—Arthur ("Hi Hi") Dixwell, an oldtime baseball enthusiast who cheered Boston teams to victory in the temple cup series at Baltimore three decades ago, in the world series at Pittsburgh in 1903 and in later years died today. His cry "Hi Hi" was famous and had echoed across many fields. He was about 65 years old.

SUB BASE BASEBALL SEASON PROVED DISAPPOINTING IN SOME RESPECTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 16.—Losing the City title and with it the Eastern states service title, the Submarine Base diamond wallopers had anything but a successful season this past year even though the gobs boast of eleven victories out of eighteen attempts upon the diamond of endeavor. The most important series and games were lost and unlike other years, when the baseball season was always a winning one, the sailors will have to make the season of 1924 as unsuccessful.

It is believed that the Base won every city series with a local team, but one and then it took five games to decide the victor. Yet this year, the Base was considered to have a fairly good team and yet lost the annual series to a local independent team, the Fort Trumbull Stars by a 4 to 3 score. The series with the Newport Torpedo Station was also lost and the victory for the Newport gobs gave them the Eastern Service championship, which is coveted each year by the naval teams in this section of the country.

And then, Tony West, exhibited some baffling and tantalizing curves against the Sub Base batters who faced him in the final game of the series with the Norwich State Hospital. Naturally if the sailors did nothing but viewed the ball as they went by them, they could gain very few hits off West's delivery. He was complete master of the gobs and he made them bite the dust to the tune of 9 to 3. It is doubtful if West's return from Baltimore had not been as favorable to the Riverview cause as it was, that the termination of the Sub Base Riverview series would have been given another aspect. This final victory for the Riverview was convincing and gave them the rubber game.

The game lost to the St. Mary's A. C. in Stamford was a heart breaker and lost the gobs the right to take the series. The Fort Wright nine failed to give the gobs the opposition this team is usually capable of doing, and the two games went to the gobs, the first by a one run margin while the next was simply a slaughter.

The men in blue were especially strong when the invading teams from New Haven visited the Base for scalps. Of the four Elm City nines to oppose the Base, all attacks were repulsed with exception of one. The Hudson A. C. was the rather fortunate team to come out on top, while all of the nines preceding it from New Haven were forced to bow to a more superior foe.

Like the general run of baseball teams even those in the majors, the Submarine Base had its winning streak and its slump. But unlike that characteristic of good baseball nines, the Base had a slump near the close of the season that opened its record for controversy as to the significance of it among the other records of the Sub Base teams that are complied yearly. The last season slump lost them four games, and even though an early season winning streak that lasted for seven straight contests was complied, yet the four near the close of the gob's season lost them more on the diamond in the way of prestige and winning series than all the game previous to that losing streak put together.

It turned an almost certain good season into one of the most disastrous ever experienced by a Base team, which most generally turns out exceptionally good nines.

Players of ability like Eddie Burns, Lockewood, Davis and Posick who put Baseball to the front for the past several years and kept it there were most certainly missed this year. The team as a whole lacked the fighting characteristics that were in the possession of the above named players. There seemed to be no real incentive to win this year, and it must be added that athletics as far as baseball is concerned this year was on a decline at the government reservation this year.

Maybe the real reason for the poor showing of the Base on the diamond this year may be traced directly to the shortage of men at the Base. Very few transfers were made this year, which enriched the Base teams materially. The beginning of football practice now again brings another question to the front, will the loss of the great Fielding at half back, who has been missing at the Base since nearly a year and a half ago have any effect on the success of the team this season. The presence of Fielding in the Sub Base lineup has given confidence to the players at hte Base and its supporters. His loss is bound to be felt.

Those who stood out most prominently during the past campaign were Hawes at second, Moore, Harrell and Orsi. Hawes' play was without a doubt the best of any other member of the Base team. His play in the field was especially good, and much of the Base success is directly due to his honest efforts. He was a dangerous and timely hitter, and gave the Base several games because of his stickwork. Although Orsi led the entire Submarine Base hitters with an average of .403 for the season, he failed to come through when hits were needed most. In fact in the first seven games, Orsi connected safely but once. However his hitting in the final games brought his average up considerably higher and he was able to forge ahead of the other regular players to head the list in the batting averages.

On the field Orsi was rather unreliable and had the Base supporters on anxious seats when balls were hit to him. When it came to fielding, Mangold in centerfield led in this respect with 47 put outs and five assists with but a single error marked up against him. While the hitting of the Base team reached the total of .309, the fielding was not so good and errors were numerous all season. It was here again that a marked contrast in fielding teams is shown, for the Base teams in previous seasons fielded in a fine and flawless manner.

When a team can send such teams like Georgetown and Boston College teams down to defeat as the Base did last season, it can not be denied a team that it was a successful season indeed. In fact last season was the best enjoyed by the gobs in all its history of baseball, and it is doubtful if this success will be attained again.

The records printed below are official being complied from the score book of the officiel scorer:

RUM-RUNNER'S CREW AT NEW LONDON HAVE CASES AGAIN CONTINUED

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Sept. 16—Capt. Philip [illegible] and seven members of the crew of the tugboat Underwriter, seized in Long Island Sound Labor Day by a crew of the United States Department [illegible] as a rum-runner, presented for continuance before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson, at the customs house here this afternoon charged with transporting liquor and proceeding upon a foreign voyage without filing manifest or obtaining clearance papers. The case was not disposed of, however, for the accused were again held for continuance for another month for the further investigation. The lighter now moored at the United States Coast Guard pier, was seized when she was detected leaving the fleet of rum-supply ships off "Rum Row." MAY USE GERMAN DIRIBIBLE FOR NORTH POLE FLIGHT

Washington, Sept. 16—Arrival of the German dirigible ZR-3 in the United States may clear the way for revival of the project for a north polar flight by an American airship, it was said today at the White House.

The statement was in response to an inquiry and while it was indicated that no definite plans had been formulated, delivery of the Zeppelin in the United States would tend to overcome some of the objections to the original plan of the navy department and which caused the project to be called off.

The plan for the flight of the ex-dirigible Shenandoah across the pole was cancelled because of President Coolidge's feeling that it was unwise to risk the ship in such a venture when it was certain that she could not be replaced if she was lost on the northern journey.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS FIRM.

New York, Sept. 16.—Stock prices displayed a firm undertone in today's market, which was again characterized by extreme dullness. There was a continued absence of public participation with professional traders apparently marking time pending further developments having a bearing on the political and economical situation.

One of the few outstanding features was the buoyancy of the making issues, several of which established new peak prices for the year. General Baking was run up 12 points to 154 when profit taking sales appeared in volume and carried it down to 146. Cushman climbed nearly eighty points to 60 1-2, closing near the top. Loose Wiles Biscuit closed unchanged at 69 3-4 after having sold at 71 3-8. Fleischmann showed a net gain of one point at 72 1-2.

Standard Industrials, such as U. S. Steel common, Baldwin, American Can, American Sugar Refining and Industrial improved fractionally. Studebaker common, 40 to a new top during a temporary rally in the automotive issues.

Oil shares continued to sag in reflection of unfavorable trade conditions although the losses were held to fractions. Mexican Seaboard broke two points at the opening but recovered later. Reports of increased tire sales brought fresh buying into the rubber issues. U. S. Rubber common and first preferred closing 1 and 1 1-2 points higher, respectively, while Kelly-Springfield 6 per cent preferred showed a net gain of 1 point at 55 and the common moved up 1-2 to 71. A gain of 9 points in Fisk Rubber First Preferred resulted in a reduction of some of the early gains in that group. Although Ajax and Goodrich Preferred closed a point or two higher.

Rails showed mixed changes but were unimportant on the close. Great Northern and Northern Preferred advanced two points to a new top at 71 and the common showed a net gain of 2 1-2 at 78 1-2 while Lehigh Valley, Delaware & Hudson, New York, Ontario and Western and Rutland Preferred closed a point or more higher, the last named touching a record top of 56 3-8. The St. Paul issues were heavy, the preferred dropping 3 1-4 to 21.

Other strong spots included General Electric, Western Union, Kelsey Wheel, American Chicle, American Locomotive, Union Tank Car and Virginia Railway and Power, up 1 to 3 points. Crucible Steel, which yesterday ran up 11 on unfavorable rumors, rallied 1 1-4.

Money on call was easier tone at 3 per cent, although large sums were available below that figure in the "outside" market. Offerings of time funds were more abundant and there was a tendency to reduce the [illegible] rates. Time money maturities were quoted at 2 1-2 to 2 3-4 instead of 2 3-4 to 3 and a similar reduction in the longer dates was characterized the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling ruled about a cent lower around $4.46 and French francs are about 4 points to around 5.33 cents. South American exchanges were a shade lower on the week's gains in the Chilean and Argentine issues.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Sept. 16.—Active buying of Liberty bonds, credited both directly and indirectly to the resumption of the treasury's sinking fund operations, imparted a firmer tone in today's bond market. Approximately half the total transactions of $14.-000,000 was made up of sales in the U. S. government list.

Although closing prices of Liberty bonds were generally below the highest levels of the day, substantial net gains were recorded by most issues. Trading centered principally in the second 4 1-4s, with a good demand also noted for the third and fourth 4 1-4s.

Scattered selling of certain railroad and industrial liens late in the day gave a spotty appearance to the domestic corporation list, although a firm undertone prevailed. Fractional losses were recorded by St. Paul, Seaboard, Chicago & Alton Goodyear Pipe and Eastern Cuba Sugar issues.

Prospective developments in railroad consolidations strengthened Rock Island, "Katy," Chicago & Eastern Illinois and International-Great Northern obligations. The latter road's adjustment 6s reached a new 1924 top price on reports that virtually all objections to its inclusion in the Missouri Pacific system had been withdrawn.

Foreign bonds were firm with most of the French issues displaying moderate improvement.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Something of a jolt to friends of higher prices for wheat resulted today from the fact that unofficial Canadian crop estimates, which were expected to be bullish turned out to be bearish instead. The wheat market closed unsettled, 1-4 to 7-8 net lower, December $1.33 1-2 to 1.35 5-8 and May 1.40 1-8 to 1-4, with corn 1-8 to 3-8 off; oats 1-4 to 1-2c down and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to 12c gain.

Although it had been predicted that the new Canadian crop figures would indicate a yield of only 250.-000,000 bushels for the three prairie provinces as against a government forecast of 267,000,000 bushels, the new private estimate totaled 295,000,-000 bushels. As a result, the market opened here under considerable selling pressure, and underwent a material setback. On the downturn in price, buying increased, and rallies ensued. The rallies though failed to hold well, when buyers attempted to realize profits.

Demand for wheat appeared to come largely from houses with seaboard connections, but was confined to downturns. On the other hand, a fresh estimate of wheat acreage in Argentina totaled 1,000,000 acres smaller than had generally been expected.

Sympathy with wheat eased down corn and oats, but wet weather adverse to rapid maturity of the crop acted as an offset in part. It was said, too, that vessel room for 1,500,-000 bushels of oats had been chartered at New York.

Export buying lifted rye to new tops for the season.

Provisions averaged higher, helped by an upturn in hogs and a decrease in stocks of lard.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Sept. 16.—Responding to rumors of a pending merger in the baking industry, transactions in the shares of the baking companies enlivened an otherwise dull curb market today. United Bakeries corporation gained nearly 7 points, closing at 100 and Ward Baking corporation, Class B, on a heavy turnover, advanced about 2 points to a closing quotation of 32 3-4.

Gillette Safety Razor lost 10 1-2 points on the day, the decline being attributed to dissatisfaction with the proportions of the split-up of the stock. The new issue, admitted to trading today on a "when issued" basis, was dealt in moderately, between 52 1-2 and the closing price of 51. Duz corporation "when issued" gained 1 1-4 to 27.

The oils generally displayed a firm undertone but transactions were light. Prairie Oil & Gas lost 2 points on the day, so did Cumberland Pipe. Motors and radios were inactive, with slight price changes.

BREAKS ALL RECORDS IN PLACING PURE-BRED BULLS

The New London County farm and home bureau placed 112 pure-bred bulls in one year's campaign. This breaks all purebred bull campaign records for the United States. Only two other counties have ever reached the 100 mark, one of these a California county placing 104 and the other, Blue Earth County, Minnesota, placing 106. The results of this campaign will be large and lasting benefits to the farmers because more milk will be made from the same feed and labor than ever before, while the consumer will benefit through the assurance of an adequate supply of good milk which can be obtained from nearby farmers.

The purebred bull campaign was organized with county and town committees. The county committee consisted of Myron Hoxie chairman, Lebanon; H. L. Whitman, Waterford; Milton H. Beckwith, Yantic; Sidney Hall, Preston Plains, and Irving Main, North Stonington.

This committee outlined the work to be done and acted in an advisory capacity in directing the work done through out the year. Various members of the town committees and other farmers also gave invaluable aid in working in different communities through out the county. Without the whole hearted support and co-operation of these men the campaign could not have been a success.

All the work was done through the New London County Farm bureau and the Extension Service of the Connecticut Agricultural College. Walter T. Clark of Norwich, county agent, was in direct charge of the work. The purebred bull campaign was adopted as the major project of the farm bureau for the year after a careful study of the farming industry in New London county had indicated that the greatest farm problem was the breeding and milking of better dairy cows.

A survey of the dairy farms in the county before the campaign was started located 168 purebred bulls and 324 scrub bulls. More scrub bulls were later located, meaning that the farmers were supporting 350 to 400 of the poverty breeders. It was found that most of the milk produced in the county was sold as whole milk, some of the northern and eastern dairymen shipping to Providence and Boston while those in Colchester and a few in Lebanon were shipping to New Haven. Most dairy farmers, however, were members of no organized selling agency and sold either locally or in Norwich and New London. About 2 per cent of the cattle in the county were purchased from nearby states, while 80 per cent were grown on local farms. The states from which cows are purchased have lower producing cows that the average in Connecticut, while the sections of the county growing most of the surplus cattle showed the largest percentage of scrub bulls and the lowest milk production per cow. The result was that milk production in the county was barely holding its own, and showing a slight decrease per cow. It was also true that many bull calves from purebred cows were being sold to the butcher while farmers were keeping scrubs from which heifer calves were grown to replace old and wornout cows.

While the majority of the farmers in New London County are Yankees, many of the new farmers, who are mostly Jews, Poles and Italians, were rather poorly versed in English and did not understand the difference between scrub and registered stock. Many of these were city reared, and sections in which they predominated had a very rapid farm turn-over because many of these city farmers found it impossible to make a decent living because of lack of farm experience.

The work as planned was largely a campaign of education. Even the better farmers who buy a bull only once in two or three years cannot study this question sufficiently to realize the true value of purebred bulls from heavy milking cows while many men were using scrub bulls because it had never been proved to them that purebreds were much more profitable. Part of the first work was the write-up of some of the leading farms in the county by Walter Stemmons, editor of the publications of the Connecticut Agricultural College. The new London Day and the Norwich Bulletin cooperated to the fullest extent in printing these articles and in other forms of publicity. Letters were sent out at regular intervals to 1,100 dairy farmers with arguments designed to prove the value of better breeding and occasional stories were published in the Farm Bureau News with the same object in view. New England Farms printed a special purebred edition in February and distributed these free of charge to the entire dairy mailing list in the county. Meetings were also arranged where slides or moving pictures were shown and lectures provided who discussed the advantage of using purebred bulls instead of scrubs. In all of this educational work the importance of procuring bulls from high the object of this work was to increase producing strains was stressed as crease milk production of big dam was known. The lowest limits of production were to be for Holstein 12,-000 pounds per year, Ayrshire 11,000 pounds per year, Guernsey 10,000 pounds per year, Jersey 9,000 pounds per year. Most of the bulls placed were from cows considerably better than 9,000 to 12,000 pound producers, which would mean a very rapid improvement in the quality of the cows milked in New London county.

In order to facilitate the purchasing of bulls by the farmers, available animals were located throughout the state, the breeding and production behind these animals carefully studied, and those considered good enough for use listed as recommended bulls. These lists were furnished to members of the town committees and to farmers who wanted to buy. In most of the work done in western counties special arrangements with banks for financing the purchase of bulls and similar arrangements were made. It was believed, however, that Connecticut farmers had sufficient initiative and self-reliance to buy the bulls which they wanted without so much personal service, and that this was true is proved by the fact that all records previously made in purebred bull campaigns were broken in New London county.

The placing of bulls started rather slowly as the basis of the entire campaign was one of education. The placements increased rather rapidly as the work progressed, particularly toward the end of the year. The workers found it quite easy to sell most of the available local purebreds, but since there were few breeders in the county this supply was soon exhausted. There was no county organization of breeders of purebred dairy cattle and no members of state organizations, such as had been so helpful in campaign in other sections. More than half the bulls in fact had to be secured from outside the country and quite a number came in from other states. A few were brought in in trucks and carried direct to the farmer, but almost all were brought in the regular manner. The demand for old bulls with exceptionally good daughters could not be filled. Farmers in New London county as elsewhere usually will not keep a bull after he is 3 or 4 years old so butcher them before their value is known.

Holsteins led in the number of bulls placed. Of these 50 were put out, while 25 Guernseys, 12 Jerseys and 14 Ayrshires and 2 Milking Shorthorns were also sold. Many scrub bull owners have not yet been visited and there are some towns in which no work has been done. These men and towns have not purposely been neglected but the county agent has found it impossible to cover the entire county in one year and carry on his other work as well. The two bulls from the highest producing animals which replaced scrubs during the campaign were a Holstein bull, purchased by Smith Brothers of Yantic, from a cow with production 19,200 pounds of milk as a two year old, and Hugh MacKenzie of Waterford, Jersey bull from a cow with a milk production of 16,800 pounds and over 1,000 pounds of butter in one year. Such bulls will undoubtedly mean tremendous increases in milk production for their owners. Experts have estimated that the extra milk production of the county brought about through the use of these bulls will eventually bring the farmers $1,000,000 per year more in milk sales without increasing the number of cows. A little more grain must be purchased but the same pastures, the same barns and the same amounts of hay and silage will be fed.

The Road to No-where

THERE is a road that leads from home, over the hills to No-where. It beckons. It lures. It entices the thoughtless to seek those things which distance enchants. The glamour of distance, the lure of unknown values often entice one to buy goods that come from distant lands even though they are inferior to our own.

THAT IS THE ROAD TO NO-WHERE.

But even as the wanderer returns, weary and disillusioned, so does one return to the KNOWN values of the goods that are made at home. One recognizes then their high quality—their unsurpassed values.

When the skill and ingenuity of our own industries create goods that rank equal to the best in the world, we reap a two-fold benefit by buying their goods. We receive greater values in the goods we buy and we share in the general prosperity that our investments create in the communtiy.

The dollars that are invested in goods made elsewhere are just so many dollars taken away from the community. They lower the demand for goods and slow up production. They jeopardize the employment of our own workers, resulting in decreased earning capacity of our people.

Those who feature IMPORTED goods curtail production at home and lower the purchasing power upon which their own prosperity rests.

In 1923, more than twenty-one million dollars worth of wool fabrics were imported into the United States. Twenty million dollars taken away from American workers and American trade!

THAT IS THE ROAD TO NO-WHERE.

The dollars that are invested in products made here are dollars retained to build up the economic security and welfare of New England and her people.

THE ROAD TO PROSPERITY: Patronize your home industries.

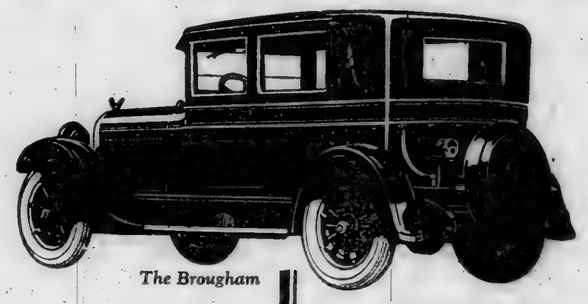
Unequaled Results With Unexampled Economy



The Brougham

Every one who drives the Chrysler Six is moved to wonder at the ease with which it rides and drives under all conditions. Unusually low center of gravity and scientific weight distribution enable it to hold the road with the tenacity of a two-ton car; a new practice in spring suspension eliminates side-sway, even when making a turn at 50 miles an hour. Chrysler-Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes contribute vastly to these driving and riding qualities and add an extra degree of safety. Special design six-ply, high-speed balloon tires are standard.

The Chrysler Six
Pronounced as though spelled, Crysler

It is true that the Chrysler Six performs in a manner that has centered the attention of America on this car. Yet the wonder of its accomplishments becomes all the more wonderful by reason of the economy with which these results are obtained.

You get better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—in itself an achievement for a car that can travel over 70 miles an hour. But this is not the whole economy story.

The oil-filter automatically cleanses all the oil in the crankcase every 25 miles; the air-cleaner prevents the entry of dust and dirt through the carburetor; the crankshaft revolves in seven bearings instead of three or five, thus preventing destructive engine vibration.

These are some of the contributing factors to motoring results that are revolutionary—not only in themselves, but in the lower costs at which they are obtained.

You cannot grasp their full importance until you drive the Chrysler Six yourself.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan.

THE GAME WARDEN AND THE SPORTSMAN

Sometime ago a New Jersey game warden was ambushed and shot dead through the back. The crime was fastened on a gunner, who pleaded guilty and remarked that the warden had threatened to arrest him

For what?

Violating the law!

Game wardens are officers of the state, selected after a rigid and critical examination as to their qualifications, in most cases paid only a very nominal income, and sworn to do a duty that is none too pleasant.

In other walks of life officers usually have to do with humans because of their shortcomings with other humans. The game warden makes an arrest because a man armed with a gun commits his crime against a bird or an animal. He hunts out the season he exceeds his bag limit, he trespasses on forbidden property, he shoots at night, or does any one of a dozen things that are forbidden by statute. The crime committed is in reality a crime against a fellow sportsman, because it is the sportsmen who put the law on books and the game in the field and then engaged the services of a warden to see that these laws are obeyed.

Without game laws there would be no game, without the services of the warden game would live a precarious life and in time cease to exist.

The average game warden of today is a sincere sort of fellow, serious-minded in his work and generally willing to overlook an innocent mistake. His job is a thankless one, his work hours never cease once he has taken the oath of office, he can't satisfy everyone and he shouldn't try. The laws he is paid to enforce insure an equal right to every sportsman. They do not favor the rich and take away from the poor; they aim to give game a square deal. The average warden does not make an arrest except when necessary; he collects no part of the fees; he has no incentive to put obstacles in the way of the gunner who is properly conducting himself. The average warden moves about a great deal through his territory; he knows where the game is, he will impart this information gladly and freely if there's no reason why he should not.

The average warden is a sportsman and as such enjoys the thrill of a good clean shot as well as anyone else, but his duties seldom permit him a day in the field for real pleasure. The average warden is a gentleman through and through, ready and willing to render a worth-while service to the sportsman. The warden's duties are many and his knowledge must be varied. He must be able to name the principal game birds and animals in his country and give the open seasons for each; he must know how to issue licenses; the bag limit, the rights of search, sale of game, gunning at night, and every rule and regulation that covers hunting, fishing and trapping. He must investigate alleged violations of the state fish and game law, place game posters and signs, prosecute violators of the law, prevent the pollution of streams, assist in the collecting of fish for propagating purposes, and other duties that call for keen sighted vision, a cool head and a judicial mind.

Real sportsmen appreciate the work the wardens are doing — those who want to evade the law do not.

That's why we have game wardens.—Norwich Fish and Game Association.

BEGINNING WORK ON RAISING DAM AT STONY BROOK RESERVOIR

Work has already been started by the contractor, Louis Petrossi of Hartford and the employes of the city water department under the direction of Superintendent John J. Corkery at Stony Brook reservoir where the dam is to be raised five feet which will increase the capacity of the reservoir about 112,000,000 gallons, making its total capacity about 500,000,000 gallons.

The cutting of trees and brush on the watershed to clear the space which the new flow of water will cover is in the hands of the water department men who are now at this work, but the Hartford contractor has about 20 men at work with a steam shovel, trucks and teams doing cutting and filling that is preliminary to the concrete work on the core wall.

With favorable fall and early winter weather it is anticipated that the greater part of the concrete work can be finished by the first of December and at any rate the raised dam will be completed in time to impound the spring rains.

The new core wall to be built is about 500 feet long on the main dam and 400 feet on the spillway. It will be 2 feet thick and 5 feet high and there will be rip rap to be built up on the water side of the dam and a dirt fill on the other side. Mr. Petrossi's contract which was for $31,450, includes also the building of a new bridge over the spillway and the new roadway to approach the dam.

SMARTEST FALL HATS AND WHERE TO FIND THEM

There is always keen interest to get a view of the new millinery models, to learn the very latest in shapes, trimmings, materials and combinations, therefore many shoppers were out Tuesday, for the first formal opening of the season.

In the main, the favored hats for Autumn, are small, although large models in tricorne shapes are conspicuous among the designs shown. Next of the offerings is the Spanish sailor and the Spanish notes is marked also in veils on the mantilla order. The Beau Brummel type is another favorite.

Hatter's plush ranks high in the modish models. Velvet holds its own and many smart designs continue the well liked section idea of ribbon piped sometimes with contrasting colors.

As to popular tints and shades, black appears strongest for early fall wear. A new hue is called crab apple, there is also an appealing tint in dull rose called palisanda, while various shades of suede—as well as everything in that material—are liked.

A particularly smart model displayed Tuesday was in tints of mauve shading from violet to plum. Velvet and moire ribbon were combined, resulting in a dress hat of great charm. The trimming was an effective cockade of the ribbon.

There are certain shades of green which are well liked, also of brown. A brown high-crowned design which attracted attention was in the hue called oakland, in felt, its trimming two love birds.

Selecting a hat while modes are newest and the models exclusive always gives pleasure to the woman of refined tastes.

Where handsome hats, rightly priced are to be found on display is told in The Bulletin's advertising columns this morning.

BISHOP FREEMAN WILL BE SPEAKER HERE

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Episcopal bishop of Washington, D. C., will be the speaker next Monday evening at the Wauregan house at the September membership meeting of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, which will be held with a dinner at 6.15. Bishop Freeman's topic will be The Business Man's Religion.

Dr. Freeman is a business man who became a bishop, a man of splendid personality and fine address. The chamber considers itself fortunate in securing such a high grade speaker for the opening meeting.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke has called the attention of the chamber members to a proposed change in the by-laws, which provides an opportunity for the board of directors to be more thoroughly representative of the community.

The proposed revision is being adopted in a large number of chambers of commerce and is believed to be a progressive step to take.

Article III, Section C is amended as follows:

"In all elections four directors shall be elected to serve for two years. Twice the number to be elected shall be nominated each year as there are directors to be elected. At the first meeting of the directors, following the regular election, the four newly elected directors and four elected directors who hold over, shall proceed to elect enough additional directors to make the total number 12. These directors shall be elected for a term of one or two years as the directors electing may decide.

Under this procedure there will be eight of the twelve directors elected by the membership through the directors will then have the power to choose four other directors to serve on the board with them, thus giving an opportunity to create a really representative group of business and professional men to direct the affairs of the chamber.

This matter is proposed for your consideration, and action will be taken on it at the membership meeting on September 22nd in accordance with the by-laws of the chamber.

CONNECTICUT'S EXPORT TRADE GAINS IN THREE MONTHS

Connecticut's export trade for the second quarter of 1924 grew $940,403 over the previous quarter, according to statistics just released by the Department of Commerce, totalling $9,486,791, and its relative position among the states of the Union jumped from twenty-ninth to twenty-fifth place, superseding Alabama, Iowa, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Hardware continued its leading position among commodities exported with values of $926,886 an increase over the preceding quarter of $121,106. Other increases were registered in shipments of electrical machinery and apparatus from $548,028 to $598,605; tools from $546,444 to $589,736; and ammunition and fireworks from $410,333 to $461,339.

Some other states following Connecticut in order were Alabama with figures reaching $7,690,343; Iowa, $7,384,861; Arkansas $6,252,963; Oklahoma, $6,218,134; Nevada, with but $103,370, brought up the rear of the fifty-two states and regions, included in the tabulation. Of the leading states, the first was New York, with $191,205,699 followed by Texas, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, California, Louisiana, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio and Massachusetts.

This is the second time in the history of government statistics, states Dr. Julius Klein, Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, under whose charge the figures were prepared, that an attempt has been made to show the relative position of the different states in the never ending struggle for export trade. It is planned to issue these figures quarterly.

WIFE SECURES DIVORCE FOR HUSBAND'S DESERTION

In the opening session of the September term of the superior court at New London Tuesday morning with Judge Leonard J. Nickerson presiding, a divorce from Thomas McCarthy of Hopkinton, R. I., was granted to Irene Wells McCarthy of North Stonington on the ground of desertion. Two witnesses besides the plaintiff were heard. The plaintiff was also granted allmony of $100, payable immediately, and the custody of two minor children, but the defendant is to be allowed to see them on the first Saturday of each month at the residence of the plaintiff.

The couple was married Dec. 1, 1908. Mrs. McCarthy alleged intolerable cruelty since Aug. 17, 1915 and desertion on Sept. 1, 1920.

Trial of another divorce case was taken up but was not concluded when court adjourned for the day. This was the suit of Ray C. James of Waterford against Sarah Kane James of Lyme. They were married July 24, 1918, and he alleged desertion Jan. 10, 1921.

He asked the custody of one of their sons, Robert. There is a daughter who is younger than the boy.

James claimed in his testimony that his wife left him on Jan. 10, 1921 "for no reason at all," took with her their son Robert, aged 5, and all of her personal effects and went home to her mother in Old Lyme. About a month later, he stated, a daughter was born to her, but he was not informed of the fact until several weeks later.

Letters and personal appeals to her to return to him bore no results, according to his testimony, and she told him she didn't wish to see him or hear from him again ever. The witness said that he wanted his son with him, and when he couldn't get him any other way, he went to Old Lyme, found the boy playing in the yard and took him to New London. Mrs. James retaliated by having her-husband arrested for intolerable cruelty as a reprisal move, but the charge was nolled in the Old Lyme town court. James was on the stand almost two hours and was subjected to a severe cross examination by Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, counsel for Mrs. James. Attorney Morris Lubchansky appeared for the plaintiff.

James testified that he had never been asked to contribute to the support of the daughter, but would have been glad to do so if request had been made.

That Mrs. Sarah Kane James, spent most of her time sitting in a rocking chair with a box of candy in her lap and a book in her hands, was the testimony offered by Mrs. Alice Daugherty of Waterford, mother of James.

CURING LEAKS AT ELIZABETH ST. SCHOOL

Contractor Patrick F. Sweeney has just completed the rebuilding of the parapet wall around the roof of the Elizabeth street school building. The bricks used in the construction of the building are more or less porous and it was found that they absorbed rain and moisture which found its way, during stormy weather, into the ceilings and rooms of some of the class rooms. Wherever this particular kind of brick has been used in constructing buildings similar conditions have been found to prevail. In order to stop the water from leaking into the building it was found necessary to rebuild the brick part of the top section of the building and to place a layer of asphalt between the bricks, thus making the wall absolutely leak proof. It is expected that there will be no further trouble from leaks at the school building.

Contractor Sweeney said Tuesday evening that he found the bricks used to be of unusual sturdy construction and that the cement used in laying the brick was as hard as concrete. He said that from an inspection of the building it was evident that the leaks were due to the fact that the rain absorbed the rain and that it found its way into the interior of the building in that way. The layer of asphalt between the walls will prevent the moisture from working through the wall.

Delegates to the State Convention in Hartford Last Night Listened With Approval to Congressman Patrick B. The Fairfield [illegible] delegation seemed dissatisfied [illegible] against Mr. Phillips for [illegible] view of the arguments of [illegible] that Mr. Morris would be [illegible] convention as a business [illegible] recognized ability and wide acquaintance. During the afternoon a [illegible] to said to have discussed [illegible] names contingently and [illegible] instance there was a declination [illegible] Mr. Thome, of Waterbury, and Archibald McNeil, Jr., of Bridgeport each refused to have his name considered.

For comptroller the only name mentioned tonight was that fo Representative Peter Fitz Henry of Waterbury. Among the names mentioned for presidential electors were those of Charles Troup of New Haven, Rollin [illegible] of Haddam, and Mrs. Donald [illegible] Mitchell of New London.

Warm Greeting for Spellacy

The delegates were very slow in taking their seats because of their handshaking. Thomas J. Spellacy, not a delegate this time, was warmly greeted as he stood for a time close to the platform. More women were among the delegates than at any previous convention and on the platform were Mrs. Hennig Jackson, associate with [illegible] as eastern manager of the democratic committee, Mrs. Harriet Dixon Welch, vice chairman of the state committee, Miss [illegible] Keeney of Greenwich and Mrs. R. [illegible]

Chairman E. M. Teomans [illegible] the gavel at 3.45 calling the convention to order and did the unusual thing in announcing that the convention would open with "America" led by Wilbur Wheeler, town clerk of [illegible] Two verses were sung by the audience standing. Congressman O'Sullivan was given a hearty round of cheers and hand-clapping when he was introduced as temporary chairman. He had also been heartily greeted a few minutes before by those on the platform, Hamilton Holt and a number of others having joined the group.

Mr. O'Sullivan spoke slowly but clearly in spite of a bad throat and the delegates listened intently. There was profound silence for a moment as he referred to the "passing of that rugged personality, beloved Tom Reilly."

Took Fling at the Klan

The delegates laughed heartily as the congressman described "the hide of the elephant dripping spots of oozing ail." He was warmly applauded and a delegates called "Atta boy" when he said his measure of a brother human being was the "golden tape of decent, compresenive charity." Cheers came and the audience stood after the congressman urged that no one "dare call himself a democrat" if he courted "the friendship of the Ku Klux Klan."

In his discussion of "intolerance" under the 18th amendment the chairman created a laugh on his suggestion of a 22nd amendment to "forbid the eating of corned beef and cabbage."

Will Modify Volstead Act

The congressman's declaration that modification of the Volstead act would eliminate "open and clandestine violation of the law" found a responsive chord among the delegates. Some delegates stood in their chairs and cheered when he mentioned "Al Smith the great governor of the Empire state" in a reference to a possible "colossal blunder" of the national convention in failing to nominate him but all the delegates stood and cheered a minute later when he mentioned John W. Davis.

The chairman's reference to state issues and preservation of the water courses for the benefit of the people was well received and he close amid a burst of applause, the audience again rising in tribute.

Secretary A. S. Lynch called upon the delegates in the first senatorial district to caucus for committee and the convention had a ten minutes recess.

After Secretary Lynch had announced the membership of convention committee and their place of meetings the convention recessed until 10 o'clock tomorrow on motion of Mr. Palmer of Oxford.

The resolutions committee met at Hotel Garde to listen to arguments in behalf of anti-klan and light wines and beer plans, and to hear the representatives of the Connecticut League of Women Voters present their platform of welfare measures.

The other committee met in the morning, the temporary chairman Mr. O'Sullivan will be made permanent chairman.

The forecast tonight was for a party platform declaratory against the Ku Klux Klan by name and with a plank for modification of the Volstead act.

The resolutions committee was made up by districts was as follows

District 1, Thomas C. McKone; 2, Charles A. Shea; 3, B. F. Chesey; 4, Edward G. Dolan; 5, Mrs. Ward Duffy; 6, W. F. Magnan; 7, William A. Seymour; 8, Thomas Cahill; 9, Mrs. J. M'MAHON TO DECIDE ACTION OF R. I. TEXTILE WORKERS

New York, Sept. 17.—Thomas F. McMahon, international president of the United Textile Workers of America, today was authorized by the executive board of the organization to determine what steps will be taken by Rhode Island textile workers regarding wage reductions.

Mr. McMahon was instructed to attend a meeting of the Rhode Island Textile Council in Pawtucket next Sunday, at which the workers' leaders are to consider the situation growing out of announced wage reductions and others that may develop.

"The organization's emergency board placed the question of what is to be done entirely in my hands," Mr. McMahon said at the conclusion of a long conference with the committee. "The board will abide by my decision."

The international president declined to discuss further the board's meeting and would make no statement concerning any contemplated steps on the part of the Rhode Island Textile Workers.

"I will make whatever statements I have to make to our members at Sunday's meeting," he said.

INCREASE IN WHOLESALE PRICE OF 404 COMMODITIES

Washington, Sept. 17.—Whole prices of 404 commodities continued their upward swing in August, due chiefly to the continued increase in prices of farm products and foods, figures made public today by the bureau of labor statistics of the labor department showed an advance in the weighted index from 147 for July to 149.7 for August.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Unemployment in Germany.

Berlin, Sept. 17.—The number of unemployed in Germany, of which 540,000 are drawing doles, according to the latest statistics compiled by the ministry of labor. Hope is expressed in official quarters that, with the revival of industrial activities, the present unemployment figures will decline rapidly.

Dealing With Hawaiian Strikers.

Honolulu, T. H., Sept. 17 (By the A. P.)—Further extension of the area patrolled by the Hawaii National Guard in the Filipino plantation workers' strike, was threatened today when Governor Wallace R. Farrington, ordered Major W. O. Anderson of the guard to Hilo to investigate the strike situation on the Island of Hawaii.

JUDGE LANDIS ADDRESSED THE LEGION CONVENTION

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 17.—(By the A. P.)—Decision to hold the 1925 convention in Omaha and an ovation for Former Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, marked the third day's session of the American Legion's sixth annual convention here today.

Interrupted frequently by wild outbursts of applause, Judge Landis spoke extemporaneously, scorning the topic that had been assigned to him, that on the Constitution, as this was Constitution day, at the convention.

"Why, God bless you," he said, "take the Constitution of the United States in the Legion? Had it not been for what the organization represented by this outfit did, there would not be any Constitution of the United States."

From a bitter denunciation of those who have spread "vicanous propaganda" about the Legion, he turned to the problems of getting the electorate of the country to the polls, and recommended that any man failing as second to vote should be cast into jail.

Besides selecting the 1925 meeting place and hearing Judge Landis, the convention accepted the committee report promising the 1926 convention to Philadelphia and agreed to entertain an invitation from France for the 1928 convention in Paris.

Greetings from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and the British Legion, and an address by George L. Berry, representing the American Federation of Labor, completed the day's business session.

Mr. Berry, himself a delegate from Tennessee, promised the Legion the "whole-hearted support of the American Federation of Labor" for reduction of illiteracy, spread of Americanism, child welfare, and an unadulterated affection and love for country."

WARBURG'S VIEWS OF THE PROPOSED LOAN TO GERMANY

New York, Sept. 17.—International bankers will support the proposed loan to Germany because it is safe, in the opinion of Paul M. Warburg, chairman of the board of the International Acceptance Bank, Inc. He returned on the Homeric today after a two months' study of Europe's financial situation.

Much of the loan's success depends upon the French attitude toward the Ruhr, Mr. Warburg said. Europe, he believed, has faith in Premier Herriot, but the sooner the evacuation is completed and the more binding France's assurances in this regard, the better for the prospects of the loan and the progress of the entire world.

"It is difficult to conceive of any better security than the German people, provided, of course, they are certain to be left undisturbed in their work," the banker asserted.

"The campaign against the loan carried on by certain English papers is most unfortunate. I saw most of the leading bankers in London and they were quite clear in their views that while, temporarily, certain British industries might be adversely affected by a revival of German industry such as might follow from the successful launching of the German loan, the ultimate consequences to be expected from Germany's economic and financial resuscitation, namely, the rehabilitation and stabilization of Europe, would prove of much vaster importance."

ARREST FOR $50,000 JEWEL ROBBERY IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, Sept. 17.—The first arrest in the $50,000 jewel robbery in the home of Miss Edith Bobe, fashionable modiste, late Monday night, came tonight when detectives arrested a man who said he was Montague Pike, 29, a civil engineer, on a charge of extortion. According to detectives he offered to tell Miss Irene Flaherty, secretary to Miss Bobe, where the missing jewels could be found provided she would pay $400 for the information.

Miss Flaherty was said to have received a telephone call from a man who offered to reveal the disposition of the stolen jewelry for $400. Detectives in the next room tried to trace the call but before they could do so the man rang off. Later in the day he called again and acting on instructions given her by the detectives Miss Flaherty agreed to meet him at a corner near the Bobe house. She did so and walked along with him while detectives across the street watched her hand him a roll of bills. They arrested him as he turned to walk away.

When he was arrested he was carrying a brief case containing papers pertaining to engineering work.

REDUCTION IN VALUE OF THE 1924 CROP OF CORN

Chicago, Sept. 17.—As much as 6 1-4 cents a bushel was clipped today from the value of the 1924 crop of corn. The principal future deliveries, December and May, representing the bulk of the new corn still awaiting maturity which has been abnormally delayed this season by persistent cold and rain, were given a respective maximum setback of 6 cents and 6 1-4 cents as compared with 24 hours before. On the other hand, a much larger production of corn appeared likely than has recently been expected.

With high temperatures and bright skies chasing away fear of frost, it quickly became apparent that demand for corn had lost its recent urgent character, and that sellers were in a big majority. The proverbial fickle nature of the corn market was fully illustrated, and although at one time a moderate rally took place, fresh weakness developed, and the close was at the lowest figures of the day.

Committee Work On Disarmament

Regional Accords Between States Are Essential Feature of the Draft Protocol.

Geneva, Sept. 17.—(By The A. P.)—Regional accords between states will continue to form one of the essential features of the draft protcol written by Dr. Edouard Benes, if the action taken today by the sub-committee on disarmament is approved by the full commission and the assembly. Some of the keenest intellects of the world struggled all day with this question of supplementary alliances, which have always made the English fearful, and others, too, on the ground that they would only engender counter-alliances and tend to destroy that peace which the League of Nations is striving to make lasting.

The agreement reached today authorizes these special accords, but makes it perfectly clear that they will only operate when an aggressor state has declined to accept an arbitral sentence, and the word goes forth that all the signatories must come forward with their punitive sanctions.

Furthermore, these supplementary accords will not only be registered, but will remain open for the signature of all the nations members of the league which desire to adhere to them.

Another important point discussed today was that touched upon by Paragraph eight of Article XV of the covenant, as to whether the question of a conflict arising is entirely domestic, or international, in character. The French thesis is that when the council is unanimous in declaring any question internal in nature the members of the league must accept this judgment, and no nation will have the right to go to war because of any conflict based on it.

Dr. Benes tonight was confident that all details would be worked out and that a preliminary plan could actually be arranged for the convocation of the disarmament conference.

France's offer to found an institute of intelectual co-operation at Paris has created a discussion which has gone far beyond the limits anybody had expected. Many of the delegates seem to fear that such an institute would gradually develop into an entirely French organization, embracing French ideas and dominated by the French thought.

In order to prevent any misunderstanding the French today proposed that the institute should not only be under the complete direction of the League of Nations, but that a special commission of five persons of different nationalities should be appointed to direct the institute under the supervision of the League of Nations committee on international co-operation.

BABY IN COURT USED A LIP STICK AND POWDER PUFF

New York, Sept. 17.—The application of a lip stick and a powder puff by a two-and-half year old baby while in the courtroom, as well as the charges of impropriety made against each other by her parents, caused Supreme Court Justice Levy today to indicate he would order the child taken from the custody of both the father, Courtland H. Young, the magazine publisher, and the mother, Dorothea Campbell Young, former Follies girl. He announced that the baby would be sent to a school, where neither would have supervision over her.

The child is Rosebud Young, for whose possession her father instituted habeas corpus proceedings, in which he accused the mother of being unfit morally to rear the little one. Mrs. Young took the witness stand today and denied specifically all allegations of immorality made by her husband, she told the court that Young was addicted to drink and that when intoxicated he was so abusive that she had to leave him and go to her mother.

Following her testimony, Justice Levy said he thought the child should be placed where she would not be contaminated by association with either parent. He added:

"Yesterday I saw this little girl go to a lady's bag, open it, take out a lip stick, apply it to her lips, then draw forth a powder puff and a mirror and use the former. I am not making a pronunciation against lip sticks or power puffs, but when it comes to such things in the hands of a child of her years—"

The justice did not finish the sentence, but added that he would adjourn the case until next Saturday in order to decide to which school to send the girl.

LULL IN THE FIGHTING IN VICINITY OF SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Sept. 18.—(By the A. P.)—Two days and a night of continuous stubborn resistance by the Chekiang soldiers defending Shanghai against the onslaught of troops from Kiangsu province were followed late last night by a lull in the fighting. Despite the heavy attack, the positions of the two armies were reported virtually unchanged.

Early this morning, reinforcements were being rushed from the Chekiang headquarters at Lungwha, six miles south of here, to relieve the worn out men at the front, while on the battle line everything possible was being done to strengthen the defenders' lines.

Shortly after the firing ceased, the leaders in the different sectors—at Liuho, on the coast northwest of the city, at Hwangtu, on the Shanghai-Nanking railway to the west, and at Kiating, between the other two points—were called to headquarters at Lungwha for a conference. At this hour (3 a. m.) the conference was still in session.

SEC'Y WILBUR'S VIEW OF RECALL TO WASHINGTON

Laramie, Wyo., Sept. 17.—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, here today en route from California to Washington at the urgent summons of President Coolidge, said he had consulted commandants of navy yards and the head of the fleet on the Pacific and that he supposed "the president wants to talk to me about this."

Secretary Wilbur said that closing of the naval budget for the year is imminent and that one of his reasons for going to California was to learn what economies could be brought about on the west coast.

When shown a news despatch from Washington containing the statement of President Coolidge regarding his recall to Washington, the secretary merely smiled.

Terrific Explosion In Fireworks Factory

Factory at Fishkill, N. Y., Was Wrecked — Three Persons Seriously Injured.

Fishkill, N. Y., Sept. 17—A terrific explosion in the fire works factory of Joseph Chiarella here today injured three persons, one of them probably fatally, wrecked the factory and did much property damage within a 25 mile radius.

A spark, resulting from the accidental striking of a scoop being used by Louis Fabiano, an employee in filling shells with powder, is believed to have caused the explosion. The powder with which Fabiano was working blew up, igniting more than 1,000 pounds of powder stored nearby.

Fabiano was blown through a wooden wall and landed 300 feet away in an orchard. Splinters penetrated his body and at the hospital in Beacon where he was taken it was said he had slight chance of recovery.

The others injured were Chiarella, owner of the plant, and Louis Ragno, another employe. Both were badly burned and bruised, but are expected to recover.

Walls collapsed, windows were smashed and plaster fell in hundreds of houses in Beacon and Fishkill. The shock was felt across the Hudson river, in Orange county, where minor property damage was reported.

The total damage to the plant and to the buildings of the vicinity will exceed $100,000 it was estimated.

HOLY NAME CONVENTION TO OPEN IN WASHINGTON TODAY

Cardinal William O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, papal legate to the national convention of the Holy Name Society, reached Washington today to be on hand for the opening tomorrow of the celebrations which will continue through Sunday, when the delegations will be addressed by President Coolidge.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the reception and the housing of six thousand delegates and four thousand visitors, and, the Catholic university here has been completely given over to furnish meeting places and rectption accommodations during the meeting.

Special arrangements have been made for the stay here of Cardinal O'Connell, who will represent the Pope's person and as such will require special treatment. It is pointed out that this is the first time an American has filled such a post, which hitherto had generally been reserved for Italian prelates on special arrangements from Rome.

Cardinal O'Connell said today that his selection had been made to convey to the American organization the Pope's satisfaction with its ideals and efforts.

TORN NOTE MAY PROVE CLUE TO MURDER OF GIRL

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 17.—The apparently significant discovery of a torn note in the crumbling foundation of an old smoke house of Revolutionary times located about 100 feet from the spot where the body of 15-year-old Elizabeth Johnson, farmer's daughter, was found Sunday, has caused Middlesex county authorities to swing, temporarily, at least, from the theory that jealousy was the motive for the crime to the speculation that there was a suicide pact with the missing farm hand as the second person.

Portions of the note, written with an indelible pencil on brown Manila paper, are not discernible. Signature was made with the initials "H. S." the same as those of Harvey Selhaver, the farm worker who was discharged by the dead girl's father just the week before the girl disappeared.

The letter began, "My Dear Precious Darling," and in the paragraph said:

"I know, my precious darling, I could not live without you and I think you could not go on without me. If we cannot live together in life, let us part together in death. This is the only way I can see clear."

TEN THOUSAND JEWS ARE STRANDED IN FOREIGN PORTS

New York, Sept. 17.—Ten thousand Jews, bearing American consular visas and tickets calling for transatlantic transportation, are stranded in Cuban, German, English, Dutch and Rumanian ports, an emergency committee headed by Louis Marshall and Dr. Stephen S. Wise asserted today in appealing for a $500,000 fund for the relief of the refugees.

These people are the victims of the United States immigration laws, the committee said, and in some cases have been held in foreign ports for more than a year. Penniless after their long detention, they are facing starvation, the announcement continued.

The emergency committee is seeking information on immigration conditions in Palestine, Mexico, the South American republics, Australia and South Africa, in hope that a home may be found for the refugees.

Mr. Marshall explained that the $500,000 would be devoted to caring for the sufferers and that none of it would be used "directly or indirectly to secure admission of these refugees into the United States."

$25,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT AGAINST PITCHER SHAWKEY

St. Louis, Sept. 17—A $25,000 breach of promise suit against J. Robert Shawkey, pitcher of the New York Yankees, was filed here today by Mrs. Eulalia B. Thompson of Kansas City who alleged he proposed marriage to her while the New York team was playing here June 7. The team is here today for a series with the Browns.

Shawkey denied he had ever proposed to Mrs. Thompson and said she had just been divorced in June. He declared she was not in St. Louis when the alleged proposal was made and said he had seen her only three times since 1912 when as a member of the Philadelphia team he met her while his club was training in Texas.

Dr. Angelo L. Soresi, scientist and surgeon who was charged by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with mistreating six dogs on which he had performed experiments in blood transfusion and cancer cure, was dismissed in police court in New York by Magistrate Marsh.

APPLICATION GRANTED FOR NEW NAT'L BANK IN PUTNAM

Comptroller of the Currency Dawes Has Approved the Petition For Organization of The Citizens National Bank—The New Institution is to Take Over, at Full Value, the Banking House and Certain Other Assets of the Defunct First National Bank—Proceeds Are to Be Made Available to Depositors of the Insolvent Bank in the Form of Deposits in the New Bank.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Comptroller Dawes of the Currency today approved an application to organize the Citizens' National Bank of Putnam, Conn., which will absorb and table the place of the insolvent First National bank of Putnam.

The First National was closed as the result of alleged operations of its cashier, G. Harold Gilpatric, and the organizers of the new bank propose to work out details of a plan that will save its depositors as much as possible.

As a condition to the issuance of the charter for the new bank, Mr. Dawes announced that it had been agreed between himself and the organizers that they shall purchase the banking house of the First National and certain other assets at full value. The proceeds of this purpose will be made available to the depositors of the defunct bank in the form of deposits in the new institution.

"The organizers of the bank and representatives of the comptroller's office," said a formal statement by Mr. Dawes, "will immediately proceed to work out the details of this transaction so that a charter may be issued and funds made available at the earliest possible moment. Before the final appraisal of the assets and completion of the details, it is impossible to say how large an amount may be made available for depositors, but it is confidently believed that it will be a sum sufficient to bring substantial and almost immediate relief to the community. The organizers of this bank are residents of Putnam of high standing, who have no connection with the old institution and possess the confidence of the community.

ALL STOCKHOLDERS WILL NOT BE ABLE TO MEET ASSESSMENT

Putnam, Sept. 17.—Keynote of news dispatches from Washington was that Comptroller Dawes had approved an application to organize the Citizens' National bank, which will absorb and take the place of the defunct First National bank, came as welcome news to Putnam citizens, many of whom since August 7 have had their funds tied up in the wrecked institution.

The approval of the plans for the new bank, will have the effect of a call to be made by the comptroller for a 100 per cent. assessment upon the stockholders of the old institution. Normally, such an assessment would total $150,000 but it is known that not all of the stockholders will not be able to meet the assessment. This is due to the fact, it has been pointed out, in the case of Gilpatric who owned 200 shares of stock. His assessment would total $100,000. It is estimated by bank officials here that the total assessment will be between $100,000 and $125,000.

Gilpatric now is able to spend part of his time out of doors, but he a flower and vine shaded porch is able to keep away from the gaze of the public. He is regaining his strength rapidly but still is in a greatly weakened condition. He has not been told that he is permanently blind and often speaks of the time when he will regain his eyesight.

EXPERTS FORECAST AERIAL WARFARE DEVELOPMENTS

Philadelphia, Sept. 17.—New developments in aerial warfare that render certain world war methods of strategy obsolete were described today by government experts before a gathering of scientists here in honor of the centenary of the Franklin Institute.

The end of transportation of great armies overseas, bombing of cities by unmanned automatically operated airplanes, a new aerial camera that nullifies camouflage," wiping out of a battleship with a single air bomb, and the possible paralyzing of an entire nation by a combination of new chemical discoveries were among the new weapons of war discussed.

The session, presided over by Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, had as speakers Major General Patrick, chief of the army air service, Major General Squier, signal corps expert, and Dr. Joseph S. Ames, of Johns Hopkins university, member of the government advisory council of aeronautics.

Referring to the manless air-plane, General Squier asked, "Who shall say what limits to impose upon new ideas of attack if war should come again?"

"Just as we now give a harmless anaesthetic to an individual for a surgical operation he said, so we may be able in future to put a whole nation to sleep for forty-eight hours by a combination of new chemical discoveries with radio-controlled manless airplanes."

General Patrick, stating that the army already possessed an "automatic pilot" that flies airplanes without anyone aboard, expressed the belief that their control by radio was only a matter of brief development and that "whole flocks" of such planes, controlled by a man in a distant airplane, would in future operate against hostile cities, attacking at the will of the remote pilot.

BOY BANK MESSENGER ABSCONDER ACQUITTED

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Willie Dalton, the boy bank messenger, who fled from the Northern Trust Company bank in 1921 with $772,000 in liberty bonds, was acquitted by a jury today. It was his third trial, two juries having disagreed.

Dalton's attorneys insisted before the jury that Dalton had no intent to steal that he was "intoxicated" by the sight of so much money and due to an emotional impulse fled with the bonds. Indirectly they declared that if Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb were given the benefit of doubt on account of their age—19 years—and spared from the gallows, Dalton should receive consideration because of his youth. All the bonds except one for $500, were recovered when Dalton was apprehended at Heyworth, Ills., the defense brought out.

Assistant State's Attorney William F. McLaughlin, in closing argument insisted that an acquittal would amount to a legal license to boys of tender years to steal."

DEDICATION OF WARRENVILLE TOWN BUILDING SEPT. 27

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Warrenville, Sept. 17.—The people of the town of Ashford, also former residents of the town and many others interested are looking forward to the dedication of the new town building at Warrenville, next week Saturday, the 27th—the splendid structure which was recently turned over to his native town by Charles Clark Knowlton, as a permanent memorial to his father, the late Jonathan W. Knowlton, and in honor of the Knowlton name, especially those distinguished heroes of Revolutionary days, sons of Ashford, Col. Thomas Knowlton and Lieut. Daniel Knowlton.

The building was formally accepted by the town in a special meeting held at Baker's hall on the afternoon of August 25, attended by over 100 voters, two-thirds of them men, and including also many women active in civic affairs. The acceptance vote was passed unanimously, amid hearty applause. A resolution was adopted expressing deep gratitude to the doner, with appreciation of the spirit of filial and patriotic devotion which moved him to the memorial gift.

Fred C. Chism, of the board of selectmen, who was chosen moderator of the meeting, was authorized to appoint a committee of three to arrange for a suitable dedication. Mr. Chism announced as such committee Orin Durkee, Rev. William Dunn and Allen B. Lincoln. The committee has fixed upon Saturday, the 27th of September as the date, with afternoon and evening programmes, and the women of the town will serve a bounteous collation at the supper hour. The programmes will include speaking, musical features, and exercises of special significance for the occasion.

The details of the programme, names of speakers, etc., will soon be announced. The afternoon programme will begin at 2.30 with a concert by the Babcock Corner band, under the lead of A. E. Lyman of Hartford.

LOUIS MONGOVRO SHOOTS HIMSELF AT HIS HOME IN NEW LONLON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 17.—Evidently displeased because of his wife, Josephine, having absented herself from home two days while she visited relatives, Louis Mongovro, about 45, committed suicide this evening by sending a bullet into his brain, at his home, 43 Cutler street. Mongovro was a laborer and besides his wife is survived by several children. Death was almost instantaneous for when a physician arrived a few minutes after Mongovro had sent the bullet through his skull and the door of the bedroom where he had locked himself was forced. Mongovro was lifeless.

Mongovro returned from work about 6 o'clock and his wife, who had returned home a short time before had prepared supper for him. Shortly after 6.30 o'clock, Mongovro requested his wife to also partake of the meal, but she declined, stating that she was not hungry. Mongovro requested his wife a second time to join him, but she again declined. Mongovro then rose from the table and with a "good-bye" he went to the bedroom on the floor above and he locked the door. Taking a .38-calibre revolver from its hiding place, Mongovro placed the muzzle to his left temple and pulled the trigger, the bullet imbedding itself in the brain. Mrs. Mongovro heard the shot and rushing to the room found the door locked. She called for aid to John Grimes, residing at No. 45 and the latter communicated with the police. Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, Traffic Officer John Courtney and Patrolman Edward Daniels were dispatched to the house, but before they arrived, Dr. Alfred Labensky, who had been summoned, appeared. Dr. Labensky forced the door and lying in a pool of blood and with an ugly hole in the side of his head, Mongovro was dead. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman, after obtaining the facts, permitted Mongovro's body to be removed to an undertaking establishment.

Robert Cogill, John R. McGovern and Fabrio Conway, three youthful vagrants roaming about the country and with no particular place of abode were taken into custody at Stratford this forenoon as suspicious characters. Following their apprehension it was revealed that the youths had committed a burglary at that place and at Waterford, where Monday night they burglarized the Red Top gasoline station, of which Richard Smith is proprietor. The trio were brought back to Centerbrook where they are being held by the state police.

The gasoline station was burglarized Monday night when a window was forced and plunder obtained of the estimated value of $100. Considerable of the loot was found on the person of the young crooks when they were taken into custody. This evening Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton, Waterford, issued a warrant for the arrest of the three youths, charging them with burglary.

Bertha said she worked and saved, while her husband worked and drank what he earned. The trouble came when she refused to hand over money to him. The wife said she was willing to work, but she drew the limit of patience when her husband drank liquor. Judge Prince fined the accused $25 and then suspended the execution of the sentence, that the pair might effect a reconciliation.

Seth Armitage who has a poultry farm at Palmer town, was charged with having operated his automobile on Montauk avenue past a trolley car that had stopped to discharge passengers. Armitage denied that he was guilty of having disregarded the laws and with his attorney forced his way to a decision of not guilty. Conductor Mortimer Nott was very positive as to what he saw. He testified that the car Armitage was driving, or at least one that endangered the safety of trolley passengers was a Buick sedan. Motorman Morris Wilkinson, on the front end of the trolley car, did not see all that Mr. Nott claimed he witnessed from the rear, because Wilkinson estimated the speed at 20 miles an hour and he did not ascertain the register number of the passing automobile. Mr. Armitage proved that he did not own a sedan, and that he never drove one. He produced his automobile registration as issued by the state to prove what he said. Mr. Armitage represented that he was on Montauk avenue to see "a bit of a football game" and said he did not get into a speed of more than ten miles an hour. The court would not convict on the testimony offered.

The bones were exhumed and transferred by Erwin Collins to the old cemetery at the Center; also the old headstones of trap rock with cherubs carved upon them were reset.

Sun Dials.

The sun dial is first mentioned in the Book of Isaiah 38:8, and may have been formed after the plan of a famous sun dial of India in the form of a series of steps. The remains of such a sun dial have been found amid the ruins of Pompeii. The modern sun dial only differs from the primitive ones, in that it is more accurately placed and more carefully made.

Alma Rubens takes the part of the girl and Conrad Nagel plays the wealthy, jazzloving city youth for the love of whom the heroine goes almost one step beyond the limit to get fine clothes to make herself attractive. Wyndham Standing takes the part of a self-made man and is his villainy in helping the heroine cultivate herself that eventually nearly ruins her happiness.

John Lynch, the author has crammed into this drama every [illegible] of modern city life, from the luxurious to the sordid, and back again. The picture is the first in which radio is employed along with an aeroplane as a means to build up the dramatic climax.

The story deals with the love of a Canadian girl and a tremendously wealthy New York youth who meets in her native environment. She follows him to New York and there discovers immediately that her lack of culture and raiment are insurmountable obstacles to her marriage to the man. In attempting to overcome these obstacles she falls into a trap laid for her. Her happiness and that of the hero is wrecked—for a time. They are extricated from their difficulties in a climax as intensely dramatic and satisfying as the most satiated picture audience could demand.

BEECHAM'S PILLS Sweeten the Stomach

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Rain and its effect on motor vehicle operation furnished news incidents in this territory Wednesday, as is apt to be the case on rainy days. By early afternoon three wrecked cars were at the Danielson garage, where they had been towed after coming to grief on hills cut on the Providence highway. All these wrecked machines had lost a wheel apiece and suffered other damage. Happily, no one was more than slightly injured in any of the accidents.

In the early morning a Ford coupe bearing a Rhode Island license rolled over, going down Dark Lantern hill and lost a rear wheel. The steering wheel also was torn off, the windshield broken and the fenders damaged. During the forenoon a Buick coupe, also with a Rhode Island license went out of control and smashed a wheel coming down Mail's hill at South Killingly. In the afternoon a New Jersey car lost a rear wheel when it skidded on Hall's hill.

All three cars figuring in these accidents were registered from states other than Connecticut. It is indicative of the fact that the drivers were not familiar with the hills as has been the case in more than 80 per cent of the accidents that have happened upon them since the Providence road was opened to travel about two years ago. The hills are dangerous to drivers who do not know them. However, few people meet with difficulty in operating cars down these hills who know of them and about them.

Violation of motor vehicle laws brought Howard F. Moore, of Williamsburg, Mass., and Chester T. Nuttall of Fall River before Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis, presiding in the town court Wednesday morning, in the absence of Judge W. Fenner Woodward, who has been ill the past few days.

Moore was charged with operating a motor truck carrying a load in excess of the maximum allowed for that size of vehicle in Connecticut. The truck, having an allowed maximum carrying capacity of a ton and a half, had a four ton cargo. The manager of the concern, who was riding the truck, said that in Massachusetts it was the custom to load a truck with all that it could carry. Asked if Massachusetts did not have a law limiting loads on trucks he said "I believe it does."

Moore was fined $100 and costs, a total of $112.49, which his employer paid.

Nuttall, an employe of the state motor vehicle department of Massachusetts, was arrested and ordered into court by State Officer Gardner of the Danielson barracks for driving a motor car at an excessive rate of speed. Officer Gardener had a little chase after Nuttall before overhauling him. Judge Francis fined Nuttall $25 and costs, remitting $10 of the fine, so that the assessment paid $25.49.

Nuttall was driving so fast when the officer's attention was attracted to him that the speed was regarded as dangerous, weather conditions and other possibility of accident in the borough being considered.

Over at the Windham County fair grounds, in Brooklyn, considerable work has been done to improve the property against the coming of the annual fall exhibit. The exhibition hall and the grandstand have been newly painted, done this time in gray instead of the dull red that has characterized the structures for years past. Similar painting has been done on other buildings on the property, including the judges' stand. The board fence that ran along the northern boundary of the grounds has been torn down and is replaced by a new fence, this one of netted wire, through which the small boy can see if the usual string of automobiles parked along its route does not cut off his view, as very likely will be the case.

The improvements make the fairgrounds more attractive.

Of special satisfaction to people hereabouts is the knowledge that the state highway department has plans for building a concrete roadway northward from the borough line at Morin avenue to connect with the concrete roadway recently completed out of Putnam to a point about a mile north of Attawaugan.

Between Morin avenue and Elmville the new road will replace the oldest piece of macadam in the town of Killingly. This macadam has been in use nearly 30 years, and though the subject of constant repair has become uneven and rough and during the late winter and early spring periods of the year has developed a habit of breaking down under traffic heavier than it was ever built to bear. There has been a demand for several years that it be replaced and that demand is now in prospect of being realized, as part of the big project of building an all-concrete highway from Putnam to New Haven, via Danielson, Plainfield and New London.

With a special program of entertainment and diversion the Community club at Goodyear was formally opened, Wednesday evening, for the fall and winter season.

Promoter Frank Barber said Wednesday that the first boxing exhibition of the winter season will be staged at the Casino arena the latter part of this month.

Several [illegible] interest are in the calendar for consideration at the session of the superior court to be held in Putnam Friday.

School street, between Academy and Cottage streets, and the yard at the School street school have come into popularity as parking places since new parking regulations in more central sections have become enforced.

Howard E. Hansen of Hartford was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Wednesday.

J. Carl Witter is acting as starter of the races at the Woodstock fair and will serve in the same capacity at the Brooklyn fair.

Wednesday's steady rain contributed to making up the water shortage, amounting for the season to about three inches in this vicinity. Bodies of water in this territory are unusually low for this time of year.

Persons who keep close watch of prices claim that charges for fruits, vegetables and eggs and roadside stands through the country districts are apt to be higher than in the retail stores at home.

The first rehearsal of the Treble Clef club since the summer recess was held Wednesday evening, at the Tables, on Morin avenue. Henry N. Cass is the director of this club, which has had two successful seasons.

Scores of people in this section were disappointed Wednesday because of the rain spoiling their plans to attend the fair at Woodstock.

Roller skating will again be furnishing diversion for many within the next few days, according to the plans now being considered.

More carloads of pipe for the mains to be put in by the Crystal Water company between Elmville and Judd avenue were being unloaded and taken to distribution points Wednesday.

It is stated that a petition will be handed the selectmen requesting that a clause be inserted in the warning for the annual town meeting asking that the work of laying curbing in Reynolds street between Main and Broad streets be undertaken forthwith. This curbing has been on hand a year, but has not been placed because of delay in cutting down certain shade trees in the section mentioned.

Ancient Shawis will be the subject of an address to be given by Mrs. Abrams of Spencer, Mass., at a meeting of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., at the home of Mrs. L. S. Ingalls this (Thursday) afternoon.

Applicants to be made voters in Killingly will be at the selectmen's office Saturday to have their qualifications examined. An all-day session is planned by the officials.

PUTNAM

The September criminal term of the Windham County Superior Court was indefinitely continued by Judge George E. Hinman, Wednesday morning, after several matters had been disposed of.

Samuel Smith, proprietor of the City Hotel, charged with violation of the liquor law, pleaded guilty to owning and keeping with intent to sell and was fined $100 and costs.

State's Attorney Charles E. Searls said that he didn't see any need of saying much about the case and that under the circumstances he would recommend a fine of $100.

Judge Hinman stated that in adopting the recommendation of the state's attorney he was doing it on account of what he believed to be a creditable effort of the accused in the enforcement of law in a recent case tried before the court. "If there has been any miscarriage of justice in that case it is not on my conscience or yours," said Judge Hinman.

"I hope," said the court, "that you will recognize the leniency that is being shown you and that you will try to bring about an improvement in what is believed to be a bad situation in Putnam, so I depart from my general practice in imposing a jail sentence and adopt the recommendation of the state's attorney and sentence you to pay a fine of $100 and costs."

Dewey Woodson of Brooklyn pleaded guilty to driving his automobile while his license was suspended. Public Defender Attorney Charles L. Torrey, stated to the court that Woodson was driving his car from home to a place where repairs were to be made on its when apprehended. He was fined $100 in a justice court and and took an appeal. Deputy Sheriff Ayer said he knew Woodson as a hard working young fellow, whose money went to the support of his mother. A fine of $50 and costs was imposed.

On recommendation of Probation Officer Peter A. Gardner, Edward Augur, of Putnam, convicted some time ago of an assault on a girl and Henry Breault, charged with statutory burglary, were discharged from probation as they had observed the terms of probation and their probationary period had expired.

Judge Hinman asked State's Attorney Searls if he received regular reports from probation officers and when the State's Attorney said he did not, Judge Hinman suggested that such reports be furnished the court at regular intervals. He said that he understood that in one or two probation cases those on probation had not been doing right and had been before other courts. Judge Hinman asked that such cases be called to the attention of the court.

Daniel Brennan of Willimantic, a probation case, was presented by Probation Officer Latham, who told the court that during the term of probation Brennan had twice been arrested for intoxication. It was stated that Brennan worked regularly and supported his mother and it was said that he was not quite normal. Judge Hinman said he would give Brennan one more chance but that if he was in court again anywhere he would be brought in and sent to jail, on the case hanging over him in the superior court.

The disposition of the case against Samuel Smith was of peculiar interest in Putnam as it was Smith's second offense he having served a short jail sentence on the former occasion. There was also interest in the statement of Judge Hinman relative to the case of Patrolman Ryan who was acquitted by a jury after Smith had testified that the policeman went to Providence with him to transport beer back to the City Hotel as it was assumed that it was to the Ryan case that the judge alluded when he said that it was not on his conscience or that of Smith if there had been a miscarriage of justice. It was apparent that it was due to his testimony in the Ryan case that Smith owed the leniency shown him.

To just what the court alluded when he said that a bad situation exists in Putnam is not known. It is assumed to relate to the traffic in liquor in some of its aspects.

Statements in the press that, through the defalcations and mismanagement of the affairs of the First National Bank by Cashier G. Harold Gilpatric losses to that institution will total $1,000,000, has greatly disturbed the citizens of Putnam, also those in close touch with the liquidation of the affairs of the bank. A statement emanating from one familiar with the present affairs of the bank is a denial that any such amount has been lost. It is emphatically stated that nothing has occurred to change the statement given out by H. H. McKee, a Washington banker who came to Putnam as unofficial representative of the comptroller of the currency, that the shortage is $700,000. While some additional claims have been discovered, these are offset by discoveries of salvage from Gilpatric's estate.

From the same source comes a denial of the statement that has appeared in print that Gilpatric has refused to assist the receiver. On the other hand it is stated that he giving the receiver such assistance as he is able at this time and that he has furnished information that has been most helpful in straightening out the affairs of the bank.

Those interested in the liquidation of the bank regret these exaggerated and unfounded statements, as they say thy tend to embarrass them in the liquidation.

So far no authentic statement has been made that the amount which will eventually be paid the depositors will probably be scaled 25 per cent. It was stated by Mr. McKee at the meeting of the stockholders that he believed depositors would be paid in full, but he added to this that it was possible that the depositors might suffer a slight loss but that it was not believed that they would.

While there is still doubt in some quarters that Gilpatric's estate will realize the $250,000 that has been claimed Attorney Morse who gave out the statement, still maintains that this amount will be realized.

Henry M. Daws, U. S. comptroller of the currency, caused to be published in a Putnam newspaper, Wednesday, a notice of assessment and requisition upon the shareholders of the First National Bank of Putnam of $150,000 to be paid by them ratably on or before the 20th day of October 1924. The notice demands payment of $100 upon each and every share of the capital stock held by the owner at the time of the bank's failure.

It was noted in Putnam that Barlow Diamond and his brother, Joseph Diamond, convicted of murder in New York, have been consulting with relatives to determine whether or not they would petition for a new trial. It was Barlow Diamond that held up Gardner Sumner, a Woodstock farmer, at the point of a gun, when Mr. Sumner found them stealing his apples two years ago.

Word received from Alexander Varbedian, who left Putnam Monday for New York stated that he was sailing Wednesday on the Cunard Line steamship, Aquitania. He will visit relatives in Syria before his return.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Maryott, have gone to Cartunk, Me., for a month where Mr. Maryott will enjoy the hunting season. Mrs. Lille Leach accompanied them as far as Brunswick, Me.

Miss Mary Carpenter has been appointed head of the physical training department of the Martha Washington Seminary, Washington, D. C., and will leave the latter part of the month.

Announcements have been received of the marriage in New York, September 11th, of Miss Bessie Carpenter, formerly of Putnam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sabin S. Carpenter of Woodstock Valley and Roger C. Berwin of Philadelphia. Miss Carpenter is a graduate of Putnam High school and of the state normal school at Willimantic. Following her graduation there she taught in the schools of Hartford.

Mr. Berwin is Philadelphia representative of the Russel & Irwin Manufacturing company of New Britain. They are on an automobile tour to Canada, after which they will live in Philadelphia.

Miss Mary E. Wagner and her brother, Robert Wagner, who have been spending the summer with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Maashal Kenyon, have eturned to their home in Ann Arbor, Mich., where their father, Charles Wagner, is professor of romance languages in Ann Arbor University.

Why Men With Strong Nerve Force Dominate Others—

And Fill the Important Positions in Life

Weak Nerve Force is often the sole cause of chronic ill health and lack of success in your undertakings.

How to tell if you are suffering from exhausted Nerve Force and what to do, explained by a physician for the benefit of readers.

Are you falling backwards or going ahead in life? If others pass you, it may be due to lack of sufficient nerve force in your nerve and brain cells to give you the physical power to forge ahead and the mental strength to think the thoughts that win.

A man, who keeps his nerve and brain cells filled with plenty of nerve force, makes his ever-mastering presence felt the moment he enters a room.

Countless numbers of men, who started in life with youthful strength and vigor, determined to win, find themselves today on the verge of a physical and nervous breakdown, simply because they did not keep their nerve and brain cells filled with nerve force. In the mad race for success, they have allowed long hours, worry and overwork to drain from their nerve and brain cells that wonderful life giving fluid called "Nerve Force." Without plenty of nerve force, you lose your magnetism, force and courage, you feel your own weakness and others know that you are weak. The moment you enter an office to apply for a position, or try to sell goods, or put through a business deal of any kind, the man opposite you instinctively feels and knows that you are a weak character, and you are therefore doomed to failure, while the strong, courageous forceful, magnetic man, with plenty of nerve force in his nerve and brain cells, successfully faces and overcomes every obstacle and difficulty and goes on to great success in life, while you may sit, a nervous wreckling, bemoaning your fate.

Medical science and chemistry have proven that nerve force is a distinct substance, similar to your blood. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result, all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back, one person thinks he has kidney trouble; another may think his spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck, leads another to think he is going to have paresis, and from the disagreeable fulness or pressure in the front of his head, another feels he is going to die from high blood pressure. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. Some people are born with a very small amount of nerve force, because the nerve force has been squandered by the lives led by their ancestors. Others use up their nerve force faster than the body can make it, but in every case your nerve force is your capital in life, and when it is gone, your capital is gone, the same as if you had lost or squandered your capital in business. When you lack nerve force, there is only one thing that is going to help you, and that is more nerve force. In such cases it is worse than foolish to waste your time taking mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. Organic iron, contained in Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of the nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve force directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Millions of people are using Nuxated Iron. From the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund your money. If you are weak, nervous or rundown, get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force, and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY.

In connection with the fixing of October 9, the anniversary of the Chicago fire, as Fire Prevention day, President Coolidge calls attention to the fact that "although gratifying efforts are being made to lengthen the lives of our citizens and to conserve our diminishing store of natural resources, the nation's annual fire loss in life and property due to fire continues to surpass that of any other country."

Such a reminder is sufficient to create an interest in the matter of fire prevention and to arouse those who are likely to suffer from the effects of a fire to the exercise of greater care. Fires that cause such great destruction are not deliberately started. There is a certain proportion of them incendiary, and some of them where the match is applied by a pyromaniac or those looking for revenge or profit where human lives are threatened as the result of their act. In the past year there were nearly 15,000 lives lost by fire in this country while the property loss totalled something like a half billion dollars.

The answer to this situation is that if there continues to be as much indifference to the prevention of fires it can be expected that this toll of life and this national ashpile will continue to grow larger each year to the great discredit of the people of this country.

The fire losses of this country exceed those of other countries because of the failure to participate in the preventive measures. Carelessness runs wild. Without giving heed to the inevitable consequences the very things that are certain to kindle fires are done over and over again. The danger and loss are passed over as of small importance. There isn't the disposition to bother about such matters, and it isn't until property is going up in smoke that there is thought of what might have been done to prevent it.

Every effort that will serve to direct greater attention to the subject of fire prevention is advanced in behalf of an excellent cause. There is no danger that our great American waste will be too suddenly checked.

PURSE FOR THE FLIERS.

Since Dayton is the home of one of the members of the aviators who has been flying around the world, there was bound to be a bigger demonstration on the arrival of the fliers in that city. Dayton was bound to give them a big reception. It is an up-to-date community and there can be no surprise that it has also collected a purse of $7500 for presentation to the fliers. It is a pleasing thing to do.

Just how much basis there is for the claim that this was done for the purpose of reimbursing the men for the expenses to which they have been on their trip remains to be seen. It is, however, said to be the reason for it since the airmen have lost some of their receipts and the government in meeting their expense accounts expects them to show their receipts for money expended.

The idea of having the men account for what they have spent and show receipts can be regarded as only good business. It does away with all the talk about graft and getting money from the government for which they are not entitled. If the airmen have been so unfortunate as to lose some of their receipts it doesn't appear that they cannot get others, and even men with no expenses showing up at certain known stopping places it is not conceivable that Uncle Sam would refuse to accept their word under such circumstances.

There is no disposition to believe that the government would insist upon the airmen circling the globe at their own expense. Reimbursement if their receipts have been lost might not be as quickly obtained as under other circumstances, but proper meeting of their expense account is to be expected. They have endured hardships and perils in gaining honors for themselves and their country and they will not be expected to finance the trip because of a bit of misfortune.

Dayton's gift, however, can be regarded as the expression of an appreciative community and a recognition of their accomplishments which was well employed on the occasion of their visitation to that city.

STORE DOOR DELIVERY.

Among the questions that came before the advisory board of the Atlantic states shippers' organization this week at New York was that of store door delivery by railroads. This is an additional service which is open to development by the railroads. On some of the lines experiments are already being made along these lines with less than carload freight, the goods being picked up at the door and carried to the loading stations, while goods destined for such points are delivered upon receipt. The auto truck is thus doing the work that was partially done by freight trains and horse drawn trucks in the past.

The store door delivery has been stimulated by the auto truck. There are those shippers who have disclosed that it was advisable for them to move their goods over long distances by their own trucks in order to facilitate delivery. It meant additional expense but it overcame delays.

The question has therefore been properly raised that if it is possible for autos to better the freight delivery service why cannot that additional service be performed by the railroads maintaining the trucks to move the goods the entire distance instead of part way.

It doesn't appear that this is an extension of service which the railroads have sought. Rather is it something which they are being forced into through the development of the trucks.

The endorsement of the door delivery idea by the shippers' advisory board as the unanimous expression of 250 members indicates with what favor it is regarded by those who would be expected to benefit by it. If it could be understood that all or a large proportion of the shippers sought this service, with the additional cost involved, there seems little question but what the carriers would be agreeable to providing it. If only a small proportion of the shippers would support it the investment in the establishment of such a service would not be warranted. The endorsement of the idea places the matter in such a light that an understanding regarding it ought not to be difficult to obtain. And yet those communities where trucking facilities are satisfactory cannot be expected to favor it.

MINE DISASTERS.

When mine explosions occur there is no telling how great is the destruction of life, but it is only by the greatest good fortune that those who are within escape.

Constant and persistent are the efforts being made to increase the safety of the mine workers. Long years of study have been put forward for the purpose of removing the causes of explosions and the prevention of falling roofs. The investigations have long since disclosed the dangers of the underground workings where gas collects, where air currents have to be provided and where the peril of bringing an open light in contact with the gases is no secret.

Those who go down into mines must be aware of the precautions they are expected to observe for their own safety, and those companies engaged in the business of mining cannot fail to be aware of their protections which they are expected to provide for their employes.

What caused the explosion at Sublet, Wyo., may be disclosed by an investigation and it may never be known. It was only a little more than a year ago that an explosion in a mine in that same district caused the death of almost as many as were entombed at Sublet. If such disasters are the result of inadequate safety provisions, a disregard of the requirements or the failure to observe the rules they should be clearly set forth. It is unfortunate that such conditions cannot be discovered before so many are [illegible] give up their lives.

FLYING TO THE POLE.

Getting to the north pole has been accomplished only by those who have gone there by dog sledges. There has been much talk and some effort to get there or cross the pole by some form of flying machine or balloon, but as yet no one has succeeded in such an undertaking.

Just what a bearing the coming flight of the ZR-3 will have upon a flight to the pole remains to be seen. In his recent attempt to accompany the American aviators while crossing the north Atlantic, Locatelli, the Italian aviator, experienced a decided change of views. He had planned to fly by airplane to the pole and was getting some experience in that part of the world. After he was forced down off Greenland and his plane was destroyed by his order, it was his opinion that it would be unwise to attempt such a flight by airplane, but that if the trip to the pole was made in the air it should be by dirigible. Locatelli's opinion as an expert was not awaited, but it comes at a time the logic of it is the more easily understood in view of the handicaps which the American aviators experienced during their stay in the north, and the difficulties which the ice of the north placed in their way.

The ZR-3 will not cross Greenland but from the position which it was indicated the ship Patoka would take during the flight, 300 miles south of Greenland, it is scheduled for a northern route. Distance is probably the test on which decision would be based concerning a flight to the pole, but it is remembered that the idea of sending the Shenandoah there has been seriously considered and sufficient additional experience may be gained in the meanwhile to warrant such a trip next year. Clearly the dirigible offers the best means of getting to such a point in the air.

GETTING ADVICE

"Cool this morning, isn't it?" remarked the stranger as he entered the drug store. "I suppose it was the rain that did it: It'll be hot enough in a few days probably. My wife and I've been planning on taking a trip, but just as soon's we get ready to start it up and turns cold and we put it off."

"That's the way," said the druggist. "Now, you take my advice and make believe that you're not going anywhere and the old weather'll turn out something grand. As soon's you find it's nice and warm you can jump into your duds and pack your suitcase and make a quick getaway before the mercury has a chance to tumble."

"Good idea," agreed the customer. "I'm more particular about the cold because I've got a mean crick in my back, sort of lumbago, that gives me the very dickens. Ever had it?

"Ever had it," repeated the druggist. "You bet I've had it!"

"What do you do for it?"

"Liniment's a dandy thing," declared the druggist. "And then a good old-fashioned porous plaster does the business like a charm. You ought to take some doses of Perkins' oil, too internally, you know, because a thing like that comes from something, you see, and the idea is to get at the root of the matter."

"Sounds reasonable," said the customer. "How do you take the stuff?"

"You measure out about a tablespoonful," said the druggest. "And then you put that in a half glass of water. Then you shake it up until the oil makes the water look streaked. Of course you know the oil won't mix with the water but it will look as if it were going to."

"Makes me think of an old saying," declared the customer. "'Oil and water—woman and a secret.' Pretty good, eh? Well, then how do you take it?"

"Why, you take a teaspoonful every three hours until better," said the druggist. "Shall I bring you out a bottle?"

"You might let me see it," said the customer cautiously. "Ha! Nice big bottle isn't it? That looks as though it might last a lifetime."

"Oh, well," said the durggest. "It makes a very good thing to have in the medicine chest because you never know when lumbago is going to strike you. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Just a minute, madam."

"The lady has been very impatient," laughed the customer in a low voice. "Funny how women want to be waited on at once, isn't it?

"Well, she's gone, now," said the druggest dolefully. "She never can wait because she's got a sick child.

"You'd think she'd have things sent," said the customer. "You were telling me about the liniment."

"Not the liniment," corrected the druggest. "The oil that you take internally was what I was saying is good. Now, the liniment is an entirely different thing. That of course has to be rubbed on very thoroughly and to that end it would be a good idea to have someone else do it."

"Not my wife," laughed the customer. "She's too thorough! I'll do my own rubbing, thanks."

"Did you wish something, sir?" the druggist asked a man who had just come in. "Excuse me a moment."

"I wanted the things on this list," said the newcomer. "Can you wait on me now?"

"I'm in a hurry," said the customer. "He will be free in a moment. Maybe you can come back later?"

"Indeed, no," said the newcomer. "I'm in a hurry myself."

"I'm sorry to lose him," sighed the druggist gloomily. "He has a wife who thinks she has all the ailments in the list. Now, he'll go over to that cut-rate store and never come back here. My wife calls it the 'cut-throat' store and it's a pretty good name, since he'll finish me if he gets any more of my patrons."

"I didn't know there was one in the neighborhood," said the customer in surprise. "I don't see how it escaped me. How much will the bill be if I get the plaster and the oil and the liniment?"

"Three dollars," said the druggist promptly. "I'll send them to your house, if you wish, as they make a pretty big parcel."

"No thank you," said the customer gratefully. "I think I'll take ten 2-cent stamps and nothing else today. I can get those things for less than $3 over at the cut-rate store, you know. You don't sell stamps? Well, never mind, maybe I can get them there, too. Good morning."—Exchange.

Field Failed in His Home Town

After giving the boy a "fair trial," the proprietor of the country store in little Conway, Mass., told Marshall Field's father that the lad "could not learn the business."

Such a decision was a hard blow to the young fellow because he wanted to be a merchant, and now he had to go back to the farm. He was a quiet, thoughtful boy, but did not care for books, had no desire to learn to be a farmer or a professional man, and, in fact, had but one ambition—to be a merchant.

Son of a farmer who was only moderately well-to-do, he had to help in the field while attending the public school and later the Conway Academy.

While assisting his father after leaving the store, he decided to try once more to be a tradesman and at 17 went to Pittsfield, where he obtained work as clerk in a drygoods establishment.

Reserved and observant, thorough in mastering the business, he rapidly developed and after four years in Pittsfield went to Chicago. There he started as a salesman for Cooley, Wadsworth & Co., dry goods merchants.

Three years later the firm became Cooley, Farwell & Co., and Field now 25, became a junior partner. In the trying times of the Civil war the firm was changed to Farwell, Field & Co., and the organization continued to grow. At the close of the war another re-organization was necessary and the concern became Field, Palmer & Leiter, and two years later, Field, Leiter & Co.

By tightening the credit system and installing modern merchandising methods, Field built the business to a recognized success. Then the Chicago fire destroyed everything, with a loss of $3,500,000, fully insured. Many of the insurance companies failed, and the firm could collect only $2,500,000. Field rented a street car barn at the edge of the city and continued business.

When Leiter retired, the firm became Marshall Field & Co. Field sent buyers to Europe, started mills to supply goods for his concern, introduced other ideas and built up the largest dry goods business in the world. He became a multimillionaire, and was noted for his many benevolences.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Written By Fannie (Crosby) Van Alstine.

Mr. Editor: In issue of The Bulletin Sept. 16th, you published a poem entitled Prairie Flower, author unknown. The poem, or rather song, was written by Fannie Van Alystine —nee Crosby, famous hymn writer, in her childhood days. Set to music it was well known to writer considerably more than half a century ago. Fannie Crosby, as she was better known—blind from childhood— author of over 7,000 (most of them) well known hymns, died in Bridgeport, this state, at the age of 95.

In my time the song was known as Rosalie the Prairie Flower, and so published.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Claude A. Swanson, who has been appointed as head of the speakers' bureau of the democratic national committee, is the senior United States senator from Virginia. He first entered the senate in 1911 to fill out the term of John W. Daniel. Later he was chosen by the legislature for a full term, and has since been re-elected twice, thus maintaining the southern tradition as to tenure of office and the theory that it pays to retain the man who has accumulated experience. His early career was not one of affluence, or of easy conquest of an education, and he worked for what he got. He graduated from Randolph-Macon college, and the law school of the University of Virginia, and then settled down to practice law in the town of Chatham, until he was elected to the Fifty-third Congress. He served creditably during six succeeding congresses. In 1906 he temporarily ceased being a lawmaker, and until 1910 was governor of Virginia. Then he returned to Washington as a senator.

DUCK SHOOTING AND SPORTSMANSHIP

Duck shooting calls for the keenest kind of sportsmanship. Duck hunters must have red blood in their veins and stout hearts, be able to enjoy discomforts, laugh at the weather and put up with things that would convince the tenderfoot that duck hunting is no pastime for the spineless man.

When conditions are right for ducking they are usually wrong for any other hunting. When once the duck hunter is bitten by the germ, the inoculation is complete and his sporting star hangs high forever after. American sportsmen enjoy all that goes with a day outdoors. That's why more men are converted to battery and blind, and right here comes the thought that more guns must of necessity take their toll of more game. Duck shooting is genuine sport, but with it comes the imposition of an obligation. This sport will continue only in the ratio that each sportsman does his share to aid that continuance. Granted that you obey the law—this is important, why shouldn't you. But saying "Amen" to the set of rules stretched out in the code book will not produce more game. For every duck you shoot another must be raised. Nature is willing to do its share, but we've got to furnish the means by which nature can function. If we take we must put. This goes for you, Mister Duck Shooter, and no exceptions. Nature cannot balance production when the odds are weighing down the other scale.

Time was when marsh land was within a short ride of the city, when the farmer only needed to slip down to the edge of his field for a fairway shot at wildfowl. That time was, as things are clocked off in this day, that time has gone, and gone forever. Marsh lands are being drained; the farmer talks in terms of bygone days when he points to the old ducking grounds; the autoist glides over the smooth roads to miles and hours away, and the birds themselves are hard put to find a nesting and feeding ground.

The individual gunner has a hard time to find a place and then it's usually a matter of a long launch ride with a guide hire to settle for. The ducking clubs of the more influential type are becoming more numerous and restricting hunting!

Every gunner should belong to a club—every gunner has an individual responsibility which comes collectively to the club. Nothing for nothing gets you to the same place you're starting from. Your obligation as an individual and as a club is to pay these dues set aside sufficient funds to breed wildfowl. Your club should arrange to raise at least twenty-five ducks per year per member. Follow here suggestions on propagation and feeding:

First, buy ducks for breeding and get them from different places. This is better than raising from eggs. One drake to three ducks on a small pond. Wild birds will come to pair with them.

Do not burn the marsh in the dry season. Seeds carried over winter in the fruiting heads of bayonet grass or tule furnish valuable food. Burning the marsh destroys mats and tangles of dead vegetation that form shelter for breeding ducks, insuring successful hiding of their nests and later protecting the young until they are strong enough to venture out in the open. Prevent, if possible, the mowing of areas along river banks and overflow land for wild hay. In many instances a club can for a reasonable consideration induce the owner to permit this hay to stand. When mowing is necessary, it should be done after the middle of July. In any case the vegetation bordering the channels should be left untouched. Comparatively few ducks locate their nests more than a hundred feet away from the water's edge. Ducks have their natural enemies, and these vermin must be kept in control. Among the worst offenders are the crow, magpit, duck hawk, fox and coyote.

Feeding habits—The gadwall feeds either on dry land or in shallow water near the edges of ponds, lakes and streams. The baldpate feeds similarly to the gadwall but favors less seeds. The widgeon likes to feed on salt water on the short bottom grass. The green-winged teal feeds largely upon the seeds of pond weeds, bulrushes, and other aquatic plants, also insects, small crustaceans and snails. The pintail obtains its food from under the surface of the water and from the bottom in shallow water. The mallard and black duck are marsh feeders.

Wild duck food—Among the kinds of food favored by wild fowl are the following: Musk grasses, duck weeds, frogbit, thalia, water-elm, swamp privet, coontail, wild rice, and wild celery.

Wild rice thrives best on a mud bottom. It is not adapted to stagnant water. The seed can be sown thickly and should be planted in the fall. Wild celery grows best on muddy bottoms in from three to six feet of water. Do not sow too thickly. When not likely to be covered by mud, the best time to sow is in the fall. Most pond weeds require fresh water. Mud bottom is preferable. Eel grass for salt water, widgeon grass, sago, pond weed and wild celery from brackish water; the pond weeds and water cresses for fresh water with a slight current, and the pond weeds, banana water lily, musk grasses, water weeds and coontail for fresh water that is usually quiet. Along the margin of fresh water where there is no marsh, plant wild millet.

Calling—For non-diving ducks use the mallard call, for diving or deep-water birds, use the bluebill. In the first type may be classed mallard, widgeon, teal, gray spoonbill, and black. For deep-water duck, redhead, broadbill, bluebill, whistlers, and butterballs. Don't call too loud.

But there's yet another call—the call for sportsmanship. Make this a test for living power and action. Set yourself to the finer ideals of your outdoor environment; put yourself in tune with nature; put something in nature; don't expect to take it all away.

Good sportsmanship comes from the heart. The consciousness of having a day's fun in battery or blind, a game bag bulging or empty, means nothing unless you've done something to deserve what you get. It's not the game that counts nearly so much as the knowledge that you've spanned the workday of the sun clean in mind, happy in thought and purified in your soul. Play the game fair with the wild creatures, do the right thing by the coming generation, and by the other sportsmen who will follow you tomorrow, and you in turn will trail their heels at a later day.

With these thoughts actively operating duck shooting will continue as a pre-eminent pastime, wildfow will be plentiful, good men will be made better men and better citizens, there'll be laughter in the heart of every American duck hunter.—Norwich Fish and Game Association.

Love's blindness is not incurable. Otherwise there would be no breach of promise suits.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

The Good Natured Bear

"Hello," shouted the Big Brown Bear as the little rabbit hopped from the last story into this one, "what was Professor Jim Crow saying about me."

"Oh, lots of things," answered the bunny boy, with a laugh.

"Nothing disagreeable, I hope," grunted the good-natured animal, sitting down on a stump and taking his corncob pipe from his pocket. "Nothing unpleasant, I trust," and lighting it, he smoked in silence for a minute or three,—just long enough for the little rabbit to remember what Professor Jim Crow had really said.

"He told me after you were born it took you forty days to open your eyes," answered the bunny boy. "And and,—oh, yes: that you were a little tiny thing, no bigger than a rat, and even when two months old only as big as me."

"Well, that wise old black bird knows more about me than I do," replied the old bear, puffing a ring of smoke in to the air. "What else did he say?"

"Dearest me," sighed the little rabbit, scratching his ear with his left hind foot, "let me think."

"Did he say I had a long tail," asked the Big Brown Bear, with a chuckle.

"He didn't mention it," answered the bunny boy.

"Well, it isn't much to talk about," answered the good-natured animal. "Some people think I have none at all, it's so short."

"I never gave it a thought," answered the little bunny.

"Don't wonder," again chuckled the old bear, rising to his feet and turning his back to the little rabbit, "it's an excuse, not a tail," and again he chuckled till the corncob pipe nearly fell from his mouth. "But don't let any one make you believe I'm ill-natured. I'm the most harmless fellow in all the Shady Forest."

"I don't know," laughed the bunny boy. "Have you got a lollypop?"

"Let me see. Maybe I'll find one or three.." replied the Big Brown Bear, thrusting his right paw into his coat pocket. "Here's a pretty pink one," and he handed it to the happy little rabbit. "Now you suck while I smoke. Maybe a birdie will sing to us. Just keep quiet."

All of a sudden, a little Wood Thrush began. The first notes seemed to say: "Come to me, come to me."

"Where are you?" asked the little rabbit peering about.

"Oh, he's only singing," laughed the Big Brown Bear. "Better sit here and finish your lollypop."

"Come to me, come to me," again sang the Wood Thrush, and the next minute the bunny boy caught a glimpse of the pretty singer, dressed in a cinnamon-brown feather coat, white underneath with large oval black spots on his breast and sides.

"There he is," shouted the bunny boy jumping to his feet.

Frightened by this sudden movement, the little Wood Thrush gave a cry of alarm, "Pit, pit!" and flew away, leaving the bunny boy to finish his lollypop.

"Guess it's time for us to be going home," said the Big Brown Bear knocking the ashes from his pipe. So off they went, he and the little rabbit, into the next story, which you may read, dear little reader, when father brings home the paper.

POETRY

THE UNDISCOVERED COUNTRY

Heaven is full of stars tonight; the earth
Lies hushed, as she shall lie some day, perhaps,
When life and death no longer trouble her—
No voice, no cry in the whole countryside.
The empty road rambles through field and thicket.
And by the road are prints of hoof and foot:
Along the surface of this lonely planet,
Now naked to the hunger of the stars,
Man and beast, on the old pilgrimage,
They passed together here—not long ago.

What was it they were looking for I wonder,
Or if, themselves, they knew? Where were they going?
Footsteps—always footsteps going somewhere—
What country is it that they all are seeking,
Who up and down the world by night or day
Move with such patience, always to one end?
Not the least sound. Not the least leaf disturbs
The immemorial majesty of heaven
Footprints—only footprints going somewhere.

Wherever they were going, the are gone
—John Hall Wheelock in Yale Review.

THE FUTURE

What may we take into the vast forever?
That marble door
Admits no fruit of all our long endeavor,
No fame-wreathed crown we wore,
No garnered lore.
What can we bear beyond the unknown portal?
No gold, no gains
Of all our toiling; in the life immortal
No hoarded wealth remains,
Nor gilds, nor stains.

Naked from out that far abyss behind us
We entered here:
No word came with our coming, to remind us
What wondrous world was near.
No hope, no fear.

Into the silent, starless night before us
Naked we glide:
No hand has mapped the constellations o'er us,
No comrade at our side,
No chart, no guide.

Yet fearless toward that midnight, black and hollow,
Our footsteps fare;
The beckoning of a Father's hand we follow—
His love alone is there.
No curse, no care.

—Edward Rowland Sill.

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It.

In the year of 1893, I was attacked by Muscular and Subacute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bed-ridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and subacute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism, to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

STATE WATER SUPPLY IS REPORTED ADEQUATE

Despite the extended drouth which held the state in its grip during July and the greater part of August, Connecticut's water supply is in excellent condition. The heavy rainfalls of the spring were offset by the long period of dryness and the heavy rains of late August and early September have not yet served to relieve the deficiency for the year which at the end of August was 2.15 inches short of the average rainfall for that period of the year. Even during the dryest part of the drouth however, the Connecticut reservoirs were in the best of condition.

July's rainfall was short of its usual total by 3.66 inches, leaving the total deficiency for the year at the end of that month 2.61 inches. Sudden downpours near the end of August gave the month a precipitation of 5.16 inches or 0.16 inches above the average for that month, making the year's rainfall 2.50 inches short. Consequently, the reservoirs of the state could not rein but fall off to a level somewhat below their usual height for this time of year.

Due to the fact that the reservoirs have suffered fallings off in their levels, which vary from two to seven feet, nearly all of the companies have been forced to draw on the reserve supply which they hold ready for such occasions. So great is the reserve held in store by the various companies in this state, however, that the drouth has had no effect whatsoever as far as the public is concerned. In none of the cities in which inquiries were made has it been found necessary to restrict the public in the amount of water consumed for drinking and cooking purposes. Far-sighted managers have, however, issued their usual summer warnings against extravagant use of water for sprinkling purposes.

Bridgeport, because of its tremendous reserve, emerged from the dry period, in a bit better condition to survive a dry period of two or three times the length of the one which took place this summer. Other places along the shore front are in equally good condition. The towns of the Naugatuck valley were hardest hit but all report that their supply is not endangered. The Stamford Water Co., reports that it is in a position to stand without danger a drouth of 12 months' duration.

NEARING FINISH OF WORK ON NEW LAUREL HILL HIGHWAY

With about ten more days of favorable weather, Street Commissioner John C. Donovan said Wednesday night that he expected to have the new concrete road on Laurel Hill avenue finished in that time as far as the city line which is the limit of the work.

When the present job is finished it will have covered Laurel Hill avenue from near Walnut street southerly to the city line, a distance of about 3,500 feet, on which the work of laying a concrete highway was begun on the first Monday in July. The present job links in with the work which was done last year and provides a fine concrete highway for the full length of Laurel Hill avenue from the bridge to where the city line crosses Laurel Hill avenue just below Bentley avenue. What was a most discreditable approach to the city has been converted into a fine modern road for travel that comes over the Military Highway to and from this city. At the present time the work is complete and the street is in use from the Walnut street end to below the old Norman chapel, while from that point up over Cranska's hill and as far as the city line the concrete has been laid on the easterly half of the street and there is one-way traffic over this stretch. At this point the road is 18 feet wide but nearer from the Laurel Hill schoolhouse to the city the width is 28 feet, with the trolley track in the center of the street and 11 feet on each side of the track.

The work is one of the biggest improvements that is on the city's street programme this year and is done under a special appropriation of $47,000, which is to include Laurel Hill avenue and work on West Main street in the Central Wharf section.

SKEET ALLEN TELLS COURT HE TESTIFIED FALSELY

Thomas J. (Skeet) Allen of Westerly who is serving a 20-year sentence for his part in the sensational prison van escape of several years ago, admitted Tuesday to Judge J. Jerome Hahn of the Providence county superior court that he had testified falsely to help a pal, Daniel Leavens, who also was involved in the affair. At the time of Leavens' trial Allen declared that he and not Leavens, had fired the shot that wounded Deputy Sheriff G. Ralph Tillinghast.

Allen, who already had received his sentence, told the court that he thought his testimony might be a factor in getting his fellow prisoner off with a lighter sentence. Allen and Leavens are the only two now serving time of nine prisoners who figured in the escape after Deputy Sheriffs Tillinghast and Colvin had been overpowered by the convicts, who were being returned to prison after their appearance in court.

Allen has about two more years to serve before he will be eligible for parole. Tuesday he appeared before the court and gave personal recognizance in the sum of $15,000 on charges of assault with intent to kill and escape. This action was to make him eligible for parole.

Judge Hahn called upon Deputy Sheriff Colvin to substantiate Allen's statement that it was Leavens who fired the shot. Colvin testified that the Westerly man was telling the truth.

MRS. J. M. KING'S NEPHEW SHOT BY PLAYMATE

The sad news of the death of her nephew, William Heinekamp, 7 years old, came here Wednesday to Mrs. John M. King, of 96 Washington street and she left in the evening for Baltimore, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Heinekamp, the boy's grandmother.

The little boy died in the hospital in Baltimore Wednesday morning at 8.30 o'clock from effects of a gunshot wound received Saturday at the hands of a playmate of about his own age. The accident happened at Pikesville, Maryland, where William was visiting at the home of his grandfather, Dr. Cook. A butler by the name of Carter who was employed by the doctor had been hunting during the day and when he returned left his gun where his son got hold of it. The little Carter boy, not knowing that the gun was loaded, held the gun up to "Billy" Heinekamp's back, saying "I'll shoot you," and pulled the trigger. The gun was discharged and "Billy" was so badly wounded that his life could not be saved although he was at once rushed to the hospital in Baltimore.

Mrs. Heinekamp and Mrs. King had a cottage at Pleasant View this summer and had "Billy" with them for a good part of the time. Mrs. Heinekamp had been visiting in Baltimore since the summer and had only just returned to her home here last week.

POLICE ANSWER CALL TO NORTH MAIN STREET

At 10.30 o'clock Wednesday night Captain D. J. Twomey at police headquarters received a telephone call asking him to send the police to No. 54 North Main street at once as there was some trouble there. The man who sent in the call for help declined to give his name and wouldn't state the nature of the trouble. He was insistent, however, that the police go to the house at once.

A squad of officers was despatched to the North Main street house. There they found a drunken party and two women and a man, all colored, were arrested and locked up at police headquarters, on charges of maintaining a disorderly house. The women were Emma Lavianno, 37, and Emma Sherwin, 55. Allen L. Brown, 50, was the man arrested.

This is the second time within a month that the police have been called to the house. The last visit was on August 30.

TRAVELOGUE IS GIVEN BY THREE ROTARIANS

The large numer that attended the weekly luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club at the Wauregan hotel on Wednesday noon were treated to a delightful European travelogue by three members of the club, Charles A. Saxton, Joseph C. Worth and F. Russell Smith, who have recently returned from trips abroad. The meeting was scheduled as the Globe Trotters' meeting and this trio of tourists was in full charge of the program. Hugh B. Campbell, president, presided at the business session and Eben Learned was the song leader.

Charles A. Saxton was the first of the trio to relate his experiences and impressions gained on his tour of the British Isles and the continent. During the course of his talk he told of his visit to London, Paris, the battlefields of France, his trip into Switzerland and Austria. He spoke of the great devastation the Germans had wrought on France and how it would be many years before that section of France was rebuilt. He spoke of how Switzerland impressed him by its civic pride and cleanliness.

F. Russell Smith, who returned from the War World war as a lieutenant in the ambulance corps and who went to Paris to attend a reunion of his company, told of his visit to the familiar scenes of 1917, where now is peace but when he was last there it was a literal hell. He told of visits to towns where his company was entrenched during the war and in one place he went into the very dugout where seven years ago he and his company were billeted. He said that here he found the bunk where he had snatched a few precious hours of sleep while the battle raged around him. He saw the same table that his buddies had used to play cards on. All was there but the familiar faces of comrades and the deafening roar of merciless battle. Mr. Smith also spoke of the various receptions given the visiting Americans, at one of which Marshal Joffre was present. Incidentally it was brought out that a recent picture in a metropolitan Sunday paper showed both Mr. Smith and Mr. Worth in company with Marshal Joffre.

Mr. Worth, who accompanied Mr. Smith to France, added materially to the account of the trip with some of the humorous incidents that occurred during their sojourn in Gay Paree.

It being Constitution week, as well as New England week, Herbert B. Cary, chairman of the program committee, read the Citizens Creed:

Since popular government is shaped in the first instance by the exercise of suffrage, it is one of my primary duties as a good American citizen to cast my ballot in all local, state and national elections and to urge my fellow-citizens to do the same.

Since ours is "a government of laws and not of men," and since an orderly government can exist only through laws justly administered and impartially enforced, I declare it to be my duty as a good citizen to serve as a juror whenever summoned, and to use my influence in every proper way to the end that lawyers, judges and jurors so conduct the administration of justice as to entitle the law and the courts to popular approval and support.

I believe that we Americans have been created the freest and the best government that was ever made just for all the people—and that it is my duty to uphold and defend this government at all times. I believe that just as the "Minute Man of the Revolution" was ready upon a moment's notice to defend his rights against foreign unsurpation, it is my duty as a patriotic American to be a "Minute Man of the Constitution," ready at all times to defend the long-established and cherished institutions of our government against attacks, either from within or without, and to do my part in preserving the blessings of liberty for which my revolutionary forefathers fought and died.

I believe that as a good American citizen I must maintain continuously a civic service in times of peace no less than in war; that patriotism must be a constituent part of my religion; that no prouder boast can emanate from my lips than truly to declare, "I am an American citizen," and that as an American citizen the Constitution of the United States ought to be as actual a part of my life and of my religion as the Sermon on the Mount.

There were reports from the golf and baseball committees. Dr. R. R. Agnew brought to the attention of the club the condition of a little girl who had one of her legs amputated and is in need of an artificial limb. One of the club members said that he would furnish the limb for the child.

President Campbell called attention to the meeting of the chamber of commerce on Monday evening at which Bishop James E. Freeman will speak on the topic, The Business Man's Religion.

The meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

GENERAL NURSING EXPENSE WAS $671,103 IN STATE

During the calendar year 1923 the 88 public health nursing services in Connecticut, employing 302 nurses doing general nursing, spent $671,103.48. Towns of the state appropriated $180,125 toward this amount, and $84,327.45 was paid by patients for the nursing service received. The remainder was raised by the sale of tuberculosis seals from community charity collections, by money from the Red Cross and from other sources such as membership campaigns and private charities.

The total of $671,103.48 does not include the amount paid for school nursing service. There are ninety-three nurses in the state doing full time school nursing, making in all 395 nurses employed in public health service.

The information has been gathered by the state department of health in connection with a census of public health nursing now being made which will include all sections of the United States. The department sent forms to 87 public health nursing associations and 31 to school nursing services. Many forms were returned with spaces left blank and questions unanswered, for which comparative sectional information was used. All information is to be tabulated by counties, and, when the national census is complete, by states.

SARAZEN IS DETHRONED AS NATIONAL PRO CHAMPION BY YOUTHFUL GOLFER

French Lick, Ind., Sept 17.—(By the A. P.)—There will be a new champion of the National professional golfers this year for Gene Sarazen, of New York, who has held this title for two years, was dethroned in the second round of match play in the championship contest at French Lick Springs course today by a young professional from Lima, Ohio, Larry Nabholtz, a sturdy golfer who outplayed the champion much of the way.

Another surprise of the day was the spectacular defeat of Bob Cruickshank of New York, once runner-up for the National open title to Bobby Jones. Cruickshank had shot splendid golf all during the tournament, and today had led his opponent, Ray Derr, of Philadelphia all the way, finally gaining an advantage of four up and five to play. It was then that the tall youht from the Quaker city finally asserted himself with brilliancy after having held on doggedly for 31 holes. Bobby continued to play par golf, but Derr reeled off a birdie four and four threes in a row, one of threes being an eagle and two birdies to square the match on the 36th green.

Going into the extra hole, both played well to the green and it looked like a half in par four until Bobbie evidently perturbed by the terrific change in his fortunes missed a short putt and the match.

This was the only match to reach the final green and one contest became so one-isided that it ended on the 27th green, when Jim Barnes of New York, formerly National open titleholder had gained a lead of ten up on Eddie Towne, of Ben Avon, Pa.

Walter Hagen, New York, British open champion, threatened for a time to furnish another surprise as Al Watrous held him even for 18 holes and was only two down at the entrance to the home stretch.

Hagen, however, began to reel off a string of fours that could not be overcome and he defeated the Grand Rapids players four and three. As a result of his victory, Hagen tomorrow will play John Farrell of New York. Who fought an uphill but successful match with Willie MacFarlane of New York, finally winning three and one in a burst of speed.

Derr, by defeating Cruickshank in 37 holes, won the right to contest the third round tomorrow with Al Espinosa, the sole Chicago contender remaining. Espinosa had little difficulty today in overcoming Francis Gallett, of New York, getting an early lead and winning four and three.

Nabholtz, as a result of his ability to eliminate the champion, brought himself face-to-face with another latin golfer, Henry Ciuci of New York, who succeeded in defeating Dan Williams of New York only by a fine display of golf in the final nine holes. Turning into the last lap one down, Ciuci unleased a brand of golf that was unbeatable, winning five of the next seven holes and gaining the match, four and two.

Barnes will play Emmett French of Youngstown, Ohio, who had considerable difficulty in disposing of Mortie Dutra, of Aberdeen, Wash. The Pacific coast golfer was 3 up at the end of the morning round and would have been at least square with French at the twenty seventh but for an accident that caused considerable discussion and evidently upset Dutra's game.

At the fourth hole Dutra had holed his putt for a par three and as French putted a half, Dutra's caddy, who was holding the flag, pulled up the metal receptacle from the hole as he tried to take out the pin. French's ball hit the protruding cap and kicked away. Under the rules this gave the hole to French, because his opponent's caddy had interferred with his ball. Both players believed that the ball would have gone down for a half, leaving the match square, but the accident made French one up and he was never headed thereafter, finallly winning three and one.

Large galleries took advantage of the beautiful weather to follow the matches between Hagen and Watrous, Cruickshank and Derr, and Sarazen and Nabholtz, getting a surprise from the latter two contests, when the favorites were overthrown.

Derr, in overhauling Cruickshank, shot a 67 on the last 18 holes, five strokes under par and equalling the match record for the course set by Henry Ciuci yesterday in his forenoon round with Charles Hoffner. Derr went out in 34, and owing to his spectacular finish came back in 33.

YANKEES' DOUBLE VICTORY TIES THEM WITH SENATORS

St. Louis, Sept. 17.—The New York Yankees took both games from the Browns here today, 7 to 2, and 8 to 7, thus tieing Washington again for the lead in the American league.

The second game was a heavy hitting contest, in which the visitors slugged five Brown pitchers for 15 hits, including doubles by Bush and Ruth, Pipp's triple and Ward's homer, with two men on bases in the third inning. Davis who was hurling for the Browns had pitched good ball up to that time.

The Browns collected 13 hits, including two doubles by Tobin, and Jacobson, and a home run by Jacobson in the seventh inning with two men on bases. "Bullet" Joe Bush who started on the mound for the Yankees was batted out of the box in the seventh and relieved by Herb Pennock, who held the locals safe for the rest of the game.

The first contest started as a pitching duel between Urban Shocker and Waite Hoyt. For five innings both sides went scoreless. Then the Yankees forced three runs over in the sixth while the Browns fell short one of this number in their half. The Yankees added two more in each of the eighth and ninth. The locals put their final run over in the last inning.

The Yankees play their final game of the season here tomorrow. Score:

JOHNSON WINS PITCHING BATTLE FROM SMITH

Cleveland, Sept. 17.— Washington made 2 straight from Cleveland today, Walter Johnson holding the Indians to seven hits and winning a pitching duel from Sherrod Smith 3 to 2. A wild throw by Cather Walters in the seventh inning to catch Ruel off first enabled Ruel to take third from where he scored the winning run on McNulty's single.

Washington scored two runs in the sixth on an infield single by Judge, bases on balls to Harris and Goslin, an error by Burns and a sacrifice fly by Bluege.

A single by Summa and a double by McNulty gave Cleveland a run in the first inning, while a single by Jamieson, bunts by Summa and McNulty and a force out gave the Indians their other in the third.

It was Johnson's thirteenth straight victory. He fanned six men, increasing his strikeout record for the season to 149 and his all-time record to 3,215.

Sam Rice, today hit in his 24th consecutive game, a season's record in the American league. Score:

ATHLETICS RALLY IN 9TH AND NOSE OUT TIGERS

Detroit, Sept. 17.—A ninth inning rally that drove Whitehill from the box and netted four runs before Dauss could stop it, gave Philadelphia a 9 to 8 victory over Detroit today. Ty Cobb, by making three hits, two of which were for three bases, brought his total number of safeties for the season to 197. He needs only three more in the nine games remaining to be played to beat the record he holds jointly with Willie Keeler of having made 200 or more hits in eight seasons. Score:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain New York Giants

Score 2 to 2. Ninth inning. First batter up for home team doubles.

What should the first and third baseman look for and how should they play their positions?

With the winning run on second base, under these conditions, the infield should have one play in mind, and that is to prevent the runner on second advancing to third on a bunt. Very nearly every batter will bunt in a case of this kind, so it's up to the first baseman and third baseman to play in towards home, the first baseman if the batter is a right hand hitter for then the third baseman should cover his bag in order to make the play. You see if the third baseman and first baseman are playing in and the bunt is to first. The third baseman cannot get back to the bag in time to catch the runner coming from second. If ball is bunted to the third baseman and the first baseman is also playing in towards home, and cannot get the runner coming from second, he should peg the ball to first base, the second baseman covering that bag.

CHAPMAN TECH TO BUILD TEAM AROUND VETERAN BACK

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Sept. 17.—The decision of R. Courbois to continue his schooling at Chapman Technical High school this season will probably help the local school considerably on the gridiron this coming fall. Courbois who is a dash man, and who holds what is believed to be an Eastern Connecticut record for the 100-yard dash, which he completed in 10 1-5 seconds is a quarterback and has reported to Coach Weaver at Tech for football. Courbois contemplated for a time to enter Norwich Academy, which is in his home. He commutes daily from Norwich, and the fact that Norwich failed to gain Courbois, who would have made himself quite useful in all departments of athletics, is Chapman Technical High's gain.

The second week of school has brought out a number of candidates for the eleven, that has exceeded the number which reported the first of the year. With the completion of work this week it will be the third that the Tech has been out in force The candidates are slow in reporting, and the chances for bucking up the line with new material seem to be as far off this week as in the first week of practice. Rangy players are scarce at Tech this season, and with the shifting of Captain Jimmy Martin from guard to center, has created three holes on each side of the line that will not be so easy to fill.

All the seasoned players have reported for practice, and those include mostly back field men on whom the entire success of this coming season will depend. But then back field men cannot do what linemen should do if there are not holes opened in the forward line of the opponents, the outcome of the game is bound to be affected by the non-consistency of line play. The back field at present consists of Courbois at quarterback, Hewitt at right half back, Brown at left half back and Kannenberg at full back. Outside of Captain Martin at center, the above named players are the only regulars.

The line which has not even lined up as yet, due to the shortage of husky men, found only Caruse and Captain Martin as the forwards. Caruso is an end and will probably see service in that position this year, for he played at end in one or two games last season. Scrimmage may start either Friday or Saturday morning, but it is possible that the Tech staff of coaches will hold off until next week Monday and work harded to build up a line this week.

The Boys Athletic Association, which is a club formed at the school of all letter men, met for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year. The requirements for those desiring to hold positions of executive authority are, an average of eighty points or over in scholastic standing; and the other requirement is a student must be either in the junior or senior year. Johnny Andrews, foorball player, Basketball forward and last year's tennis captain was chosen to the presidency of the association. Donald Crusie, vice president; Joseph Zaparaniok secretary and Joseph MacDonald assistant treasurer.

It became known today that Coach Weaver took a two months course in coaching at Vermont this summer. As part of the program required of all candidates, examination as to their physical fitness must be had. This examination was given at the Y. M. C. A. last night by Doctors Gibbs and Dawson. All those examined were found to be in the best of condition.

YALE GRIDERS PRACTICE ON RAIN-SOAKED FIELD

New Haven, Sept. 17.—The Yale football squad this afternoon went through a two-hour workout with soaked pigskin and sponge-like field. Usually on rainy days the squad practices in the Yale armony nearby but the coaches, recalling last year's Harvard game ,which was played in a steady downpour, sent the men out in the rain.

Following a period of tackling the dummy, three teams went through a signal drill. Cottle, of last year's eleven did the kicking for Captain Lovejoy's team while Dan Allen of the freshmen two years ago booted for the seconds.

On Lovejoy's team today were Bingham and Luman, ends Butterworth and Joss, tackles; Coene and Eckart, guards, Lovejoy, center; Wienecke, quarterback; Pond Cottle and Bench backs. Others besides Coena wearing varsity jerseys for the first time were Hickcock, Sewart, Wallace and Guernsey, linemen, and Barclay, a back.

The incoming freshmen have been invited to report next Monday.

Put Up or Shut Up

To Manager Cook of the Married Men:

I was quite delighted in reading the appealing letter that you had in yesterday's Bulletin for the benefit of the sporting public in which you appealed to them for their sympathy for you though it was a dirty deal that was handed you on last Sunday at the Duwell field by the umpire who you claim made such raw decisions that it kept your team from winning the game and the championship of the East Side. In having this letter printed you showed the public for themselves what a wonderful bunch of sports you and the rest of the married men on the East Side are. Instead of taking your medicine like men which you expect to be called the whole bunch of you are whining and crying like a two year old kid.

Everything was lovely last year when the Single Men were defeated and James V. led the goat through the streets of Norwich much to the amusement of you and your teammates, but its a different matter now that the worm has turned and the Married Men have lost, the poor old men were robbed and cheated and its up to the sporting public to sympathize with them and the single men should give them another chance.

If you had come right out and asked for another game without a lot of sorrowfull crying and the old bluff about playing for a one-hundred dollar side bet I am sure that you would have made more of a hit than you have.

As far as the one hundred dollars is concerned I don't doubt for a minute but that you have got it and also that you're going to hang onto it while you're alive and in your right senses, but to call pour bluff, if you can really lay that hundred in the hands of the sporting editor by tonight at 8 p. m. I will try hard to scrape up enough to cover it and play your team again next Sunday, not for fun or marbles but for the two hundred iron men.

If you really mean what you say meet me at the Bulletin office tonight and don't forget the hundred, but if yours is just another case of trying to get publicity kindly pick on someone else,

Signed
James V. Pedace.

GREB AND TUNNEY FIGHT TEN FAST ROUNDS TO A NEWSPAPER DRAW

Olympic Arena, Cleveland, Sept. 17—Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion, and Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, fought ten rounds on fairly even terms here tonight according to a majority of the newspaper experts at the ringside.

Tunney, punching more accurately and effectively, possibly was entitled to the shade in the opinion of the experts. Greb fought his characteristic battle, bounding around the ring like a rubber ball, and throwing punches from every angle. Tunney centered his attack on Greb's body, punching him with ripping right and left hooks at close quarters. He made Greb break ground half a dozen times with right smashes under the heart robbing the Pittsburger of his speed.

Although they fought a furious pace neither was damaged. Tunney left the ring with only a slight cut on the forehead as a result of coming in contact with Greb's head in the clinches.

This was their fourth engagement, Tunney having twice defeated Greb after losing to the middleweight titleholder the first time.

Greb scaled about 166 pounds while Tunney's weight was near 175.

In a fast six-round preliminary Frank Steilmack, of Cleveland defeated Jack Stewart, of Wheeling, W. Va., Steward was dropped for an 8 count in the third round with a left hook. They weighed 14 1-2 pounds.

The semi-windup resulted in a technical knockout for Al Zeiger, of Cleveland, a former protege of Johnny Kilbane over Bobby Renderlie, of Toledo in the fifth round of a scheduled six round go. Renderlie, substituting for Johnny Andrews, of Toledo was helpless on the ropes when the referee ended the contest.

Zeimer weighed 120 pounds while Renderlie scaled 120 1-2.

ROCHESTER TRIMS HILLIES IN SECOND GAME

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 17.—Rochester defeated Pittsfield 4 to 1 here this afternoon in an inter-league game in which Horne allowed only seven hits and fanned 11 men. Five Hillies faced Horne in the seventh, all getting on base through a double, two singles, a hit batsman, and a base on balls, but owing to poor base running nobody scored. Quellich of Rochester hit a home run and a single. Score by innings:

Horne and Meed; Snover and Starr.

SENATORS AND YANKS HAVE ELEVEN GAMES TO PLAY

New York, Sept. 17.—While rain kept all National league clubs idle today, the Yankees again went into a tie for first place in the American with Washington by taking two games from St. Louis while the Senators won one from Cleveland. Detroit lost to Philadelphia and is six games behind.

Odds are even in the battle down the stretch between the two leaders in the American. Each has 11 contests to play, all away from home. The Yankees have an edge in experience in a grueling finish but the Senators are fired with an ambition to win the first pennant for Walter Johnson and the National capital. The veteran twirler won his 13th straight victory today.

As a result of the enforced idleness, the Giants continue to lead the Robins by one and one half games and Pittsburgh by two and one half.

Double headers will be played by the three contesting teams tomorrow. But Pittsburgh, whose postponed battle with Philadelphia today cannot be off, definitely lost the opportunity to pick up a half game on its rivals.

The standing of contending clubs follows:

National League	Won	Lost	P.C.	To Play
New York	87	56	.608	11
Brooklyn	86	58	.597	10
Pittsburgh	83	57	.593	13

Washington	56	59	.587	11
New York	84	59	.587	11

NEW LONDON ENTHUSIASTIC OVER BOWLING LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Sept. 17.—Like the duck took to water, the local bowling enthusiasts are taking to that old indoor game which is being revived here. The showing of the locals in the initial match of the Eastern Connecticut league season, gave local fans and devotees of the fallen timbers more cause for the obviousness of enthusiasm, never shown before locally Thursday evening, the locals pack their balls and embark for Taftville where the Belcher captained bowlers will play a return match with the Dugas tribe.

And when these two teams clash for the second time within a week, the fun will begin and there will be a supporting crowd of New Londoners to view it. Chip Dugas and his cohorts are out for a clean sweep to even matters, but will they do it is the cry at present. However the Taftville aggregation will have the advantage of bowling on their own alleys and with their own weapons literally speaking. The form the Taftville quintet exhibited was not of the best on Monday, but there is time to remedy their defects and mow the pins down with more venegance.

Taking the jump to the top position in the league standing it is the ambition of the Peerless Big Five to romp home with the second game of the series. They bid well to do it and Dugas will have to bowl as will his team to win from the Whaling City quintet when they trespass upon Taftville ground Thursday.

MERRIMAN WINS FEATURE EVENT AT TOLEDO TRACK

Toledo, O., Sept. 17.—Tommy Murphy's Merriman captured the Kiwanis club pace, the feature event of today's Grand Circuit program. The event produced some of the best harness racing seen here in several seasons and went to the limit, four heats, before it was decided. The Murphy pacer was the favorite.

Merriman broke in the first heat, which was captured by Marvin Childs. Murphy sent Merriman out in the lead in the second heat and won easily. In the third heat Jimmy McKerron, with Nat Ray driving, sprung a surprise by staging a fine stretch drive and beating out the two previous heats winners. The fourth heat went to Merriman, who crossed the wire a winner over Jimmy McKerron by a nose.

Walter Cox took the Toledo Blade trot with Fair May, but had to go four heats to do it. Miss Belwin, with Vail in the sulky, won the 2:08 pace in straight heats. The 2:09 trot was postponed until Thursday.

MOOSUP TEAM TAKES THREE STRAIGHT FROM WILLIMANTIC

Willimantic, Sept. 17—The Moosup bowling team in taking three straight games from the local five here tonight tied up for first place in the Eastern Connecticut bowling league with the Peerless team of New London. The matches were close with the exception of the last string. Moosup winning the first string by a margin of six pins and annexing the second by the smallest possible leeway of one pin. In the third string Salisbury and McKenzie of Moosup ran wild and their work boosted the team string to 541.

WESTERLY

An automobile party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Goodgeon, Miss Flora M. Merriott, Mr. and Mrs. John O. Mills of Westerly and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nash of Pawcatuck left Westerly this (Thursday) morning for Niagara Falls, N. Y., and an extended tour through Canadian provinces before returning to Westerly.

At the weekly drill of Battery E, 243rd Coast Artillery corps, in the state armory on Dixon street Tuesday evening, three new enlistments were secured. A very successful drill of infantry tactics and school of the soldier of the Battery in command of Captain. John Dateon was held. Arrangements were perfected for a banquet with dance to follow to be held in the armory Thursday, September 25th, when each battery man would have the privilege of inviting a guest. It was contemplated to give invitations to military men who had assisted in the reorganization of the company.

During the third day of the superior court September term, for Washington County in Kingston Wednesday, counsel for Richard Brady of Richmond under indictment for shooting his wife moved for a continuance of the case to November. The request was granted by Judge Hugh B. Baker in order that Attorney Flynn of Providence, representing Brady, might have time to procure evidence and prepare his defense.

Brady Wednesday forenoon pleaded not guilty.

The indictment charges Brady with killing his wife, Delia Brady, with a Springfield army rifle, early in the evening of May 31, 1924, at their shack in the woods about two miles off the Carolina-Wyoming road.

According to information gained by Sheriff John R. Wilcox and Deputy Sheriff Phillips the night after the alleged murder, the fatal shooting followed an altercation between Brady and his wife after the former and his brother had return home from Hope Valley with groceries. On reaching the shack in the woods the two men found that Mrs. Brady had locked them out. After Brady's foster-child, a [illegible] old boy, had finally opened the door and let the men in the enraged husband seized a stick and began to beat his wife. Mrs. Brady ran outside and picked up an axe, while her husband reached for his Springfield rifle and shot her as she was attempting to enter the house.

Brady gave himself up to the sheriff at Kingston that same evening, claiming that the fatal shot had not been intended. After being adjudged possibly guilty of murder at a preliminary hearing in Westerly he has been in Providence county jail to await the present term of the superior court. Wednesday afternoon he was recommitted to jail.

Members of the utility commission present were Chairman William C. Bliss, Robert F. Rodman and Samuel E. Hudson. In opening the hearing Chairman Bliss stated that the commission had received a letter from Receiver Perkins of the Shore Line Electric road under date of Sept. 10th in reply to a letter from the commission of Sept. 4th that electric car service was to be discontinued altogether between Ashaway, Watch Hill and Pleasant View. Relative to the discontinuance of the Ashaway line, Receiver Perkins stated that the Rhode Island department of public roads had entered an agreement to take over a part of their right of way and on Sept. 10 agreement had been reached with the Westerly town council for the discontinuance of the Watch Hill service, so that operation ceased to Ashaway on Wednesday Sept. 17th and would be discontinued to Watch Hill on Saturday, Sept. 27th. Receiver Perkins stated that he would not be present at any hearing on trolley matters as he had no further interest. Judicial notice was taken by the commission as to the necessity and convenience of jitneys, as previous electric car operation had shown such to be the case.

Attorney Alonzo Williams for the United Electric Railway Co., of Providence objected to the consideration of the petition of James H. Lindley of Providence at that time, for a certificate for jitney between Providence and Westerly, because the route to be traversed was partially covered at the present time by his company and further extension was planned. He moved that the petition be continued one week.

Forrest Shepard, representing the N. Y., N. H., and H., R. R. and Wood River branch R. R. also urged the continuance of any petition if Hope Valley was considered. In answer to a question by Judge Turano Mr. Shepard said he was not interested in the Westerly and Watch Hill end of the proposed routes. The Lindley petition proposed a route from Exchange place in Providence out Broad street, Reservoir avenue to Washington village over Noose Neck Hill to Hope Valley and Hopkinton City and the new state Road to Westerly, which would not include Ashaway or Potter Hill. Attorneys for the Westerly rights were willing to have the Hope Valley end struck from their petitions and inasmuch as Mr. Lindley's attorney was unable to be present, he was willing that a week's continuance be given his application.

Speaking for the Westerly petitioners, Chairman Bliss said he thought their petitions should be considered as the commission had expedited the hearing, for it was known that Ashaway people would be without conveyance and the Utility commission was interested in determining the best fitted party to be given a certificate.

Mrs. Flora C. Mooney was sworn and stated that she was a Westerly voter, having lived all her life in Westerly with the exception of eleven months in Stamford, until the death of her first husband. She said that she would be able to put into service two 25 passenger Macks, one of which was at the state house at the time. That she owned real estate in Westerly to the value of more than $10,000 and had other means and cash. Her husband, Nick Mooney who operated four busses in Connecticut from Westerly to Norwich would be her assistant manager and she alone would finance the jitneys, paying her husband a salary, promising as good service as the patronage warranted. On cross examination, she said her husband was not a citizen of this country and in reply to Chairman Bliss said she planned to charge the same fare as the trolley lines had. The busses would be operated as frequently as the public demanded. If four busses were operated the investment would represent $40,000.

Newman F. Tuckerman said he planned to operate a new type of Reo bus of 21 passenger capacity; that he was a Reo sales and service agent in Westerly. He had not decided on his schedule and thought he would charge the same as the trolleys. Attorney Kingsley said Mr. Tuckerman had carried passengers to Bradford for the B. D. A., also had carried U. S. mails. A petition in his favor was presented signed by William H. Burdick of Ashaway for the Hopkinton Town council, L. A. Briggs of the Ashaway Woolen Co., C. W. Campbell, president of the Westerly town council, George B. Utter, a member of the Westerly town council, A Tait Hope of the Pawcatuck Woolen Co., of Potter Hill, Julian T. Crandall of the Ashaway Line and Twine Mc Co., Frank Hill of the Ashaway National Bank and his son Frank, of Ashaway. Mr. Tuckerman said that during the electric car strike, seven years ago, he had supplied transportation in place of the electric line also during severe snow storms and beside carrying passengers to Bradford for the mill people had a contract for transporting Westerly School children. His petition was filed Sept. 15th. Replying to Judge Turano, he stated that he had not considered it necessary to ask for a public utility certificate to take passengers to Bradford. Property in Westerly stood in his wife's name.

Arthur Gabrielle said he had voted in Westerly 12 years and planned to operate three busses two of which he had arranged to purchase from Receiver Perkins of the Shore Line Electric Co., for cash, as the road was in receivership. He planned a half hour schedule to Watch Hill, running two busses and one to Pleasant View and Weekapaug, the running time estimated at 20 minutes from Westerly. He was the owner of a store in Westerly and a fruit peddler and had $35,000 in funds available also had the backing of some one else. The Shore Line busses available had been operated 5,000 miles up to the present time.

For Mrs. Mooney, Attorney Flynn said her petition was the first filed and that she would have the assistance of her husband. He said that Tuckerman had taken liberties with the utility commission and questioned the financial ability of Gabrielle. In Mr. Tuckerman's behalf, Mr. Kingsley said the signers of the petition showed the support of interested people nad wished Town Solicitor Ferguson could report to the Westerly tax commissioners the amount of wealth represented as available. Judge Turano said that Tuckerman should have obtained a license for his B. D. A. business, questioned the good faith of Mrs. Mooney in her statement of financial independence and said that Gabrielle had the support of Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and the Westerly police commission. Solicitor Ferguson said that Gabrielle met the requirement of a successful operator of busses.

At the close of the hearing Chairman Bliss said that the Utility commission would take the matter under consideration and arrive at a decision either Wednesday night or Thursday morning and would notify the parties interested as to their decision.

Later, on the suggestion of Judge Turano the commissioners were told that the operation of Westerly busses in his opinion could be divided into three routes and each party be awarded a privilege. Solicitor Ferguson thought that two certificates would best care for the service, as in his opinion in the entire year the Ashaway patronage would total the least.

MARKET WAS STRONG

New York, Sept. 17—The stock market today awoke from the lethargy in which it has been enveloped in the last two weeks, prices bounding upward in impressive fashion under the leadership of the Standard Industrial shares which showed net gains of 2 to 6 points. There was little in the day's news to account for this sudden burst of bullish activity, the rapid accumulation being described in some quarters as belated recognition of the favorable news and trade developments of the last month.

Short interests, who have successfully ferreted out weak spots in some of the recent dull markets, found a scarcity in the flowing supply of standard industrials at current levels with the result that tney were forced to bid them up on each other in order to cover their commitments. Maintenance of the cruckiid steel dividend is reported to have been an expected blow to bear traders.

United States Steel common closed two points higher at 108 7-8, Crucible showed a net gain of 3 5-8 to 57 5-8 and the other independent steels moved up 1 to 2 points. While the weekly steel trade reviews reported little change in the situation, a number of carriers sent out queries for large tonnages of rails and other equipment during the day. Baldwin Locomotive moved up more than three points to 123 1-8 and American Can closed 3 3-8 higher at 129—after having touched 130.

Studebaker headed a list of 15 stocks which established new high records for the year, including Goodrich Rubber, Goodyear preferred and prior prefered, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, American Type Founders, Gimbel Brothers and United Drug.

While rails did not participate in the advance as extensively as the industrials new peak prices were attained by New York, Ontario and Western, Rutland preferred and Gulf, Mobile and Northern preferred.

Oils rallied with the rest of the list, despite a sharp reduction in mid-continent crue prices, the chief effect of which is expected to be restriction of drilling operations. Houston Oil touched 75 and then eased to 74 1-4, up 2 1-4 and a number of the other active oils improved fractionally.

Specialties recorded the largest gains, General Electric jumping 6 3-4 points to 264. Net gains of 3 to 6 points were recorded by American Tobacco issues, Colorado Fuel, United States cast iron pipe, Associated Dry Goods, Cuban-Dominican Sugar preferred, Federal Light and Traction, United Drug and Union sank car.

Bullish demonstrations in the baking issues were checked by an official denial of merger rumors. General Baking closing two points lower at 148.

Call money held steady at two per cent, with a large volume of "outside" loans being quoted below that figure. Time money rates were unchanged with trading quiet.

Further improvement took place in the foreign exchange markets. Demand sterling was again quoted at $4.47 and French francs held relatively steady around 5.35 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, Sept. 17—Bond prices turned upward today under the impetus of a rally in stocks and a renewed demand for liberty bonds and railroad liens. Prospects that the U. S. government soon would resume negotiations for funding the French debt strengthened liberties, which reached to highest levels in many than a month.

Foreign obligations were accumulated on the theory that they would be benefited by preparations for the sale of the German loan. French Republic and municipal liens displayed moderate improvement together with Belgian and other European issues.

In addition to renewed investment buying of high grade railroad bonds merger possibilities stimulated trading in the semi-speculative group. International-Great Northern Adjustment 6s achieved a new 1924 peak price. "Katy" Adjustment 6s and Missouri Pacific General 4s also moved up. Among the higher priced bonds, Pennsylvania General 5s were active.

Widening inquiry for rubber company liens featured trading in the industrial section, with Ajax, Kelly-Springfield and Goodyear issues in demand. Gains of a point or more were registered by Sinclair Consolidated Oil 7s, Wilson first 6s and American Agricultural Chemical 6s.

A nation-wide banking syndicate headed by the Chase Securities corporation has been awarded the American portion of the Canadian government's $200,000,000 financing. Public offering of the issue, consisting of $30,000,000 one year four per cent. notes will be made tomorrow at par."

CHICAGO GRAI NMARKET

Chicago, Sept. 17—Corn came tumbling down in price today as a result of greatly enlarged sales due to sudden warm weather that suggested relief from danger of frost. An extreme break of 6 1-4 cents a bushel took place. Wheat and oats dropped with corn. Closing quotations for corn were heavy, 3 5-8 to 6¼-4c net lower, December 1 1-2 to 2 1-4c decline, December $1.31 3-4 to 1.31 7-8, and May 1.38 to 1.38 1-8, with oats 7-8 to 1 3-8 down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 45 cents.

Sharpest declines and heaviest selling in the corn market were witnessed as trading drew to an end, with standing orders being automatically brought into play to close out risk of further losses or to realize whatever profits were yet possible for owners caught at a disadvantage. Failure of continued bad crop reports to induce big new buying of late had discouraged many holders who had been hanging on in the hope of further advances in price. This hope, however appeared to fade rapidly when chances dwindled that a premature widespread killing frost would be witnessed, and that huge irreparable damage to the crop would be done.

Notwithstanding that export purchasing of wheat today was said to aggregate 2,000,000 bushels, strength which had developed in wheat prices gave way when the corn market began to break. Estimates that world shortage of wheat amounted to 371,000,000 bushels as compared with last year were current but had only a temporary bullish effect. Meanwnile, domestic spring wheat arrivals were on a large scale, exceeding the receipts of a week ago, as well as those of a year back.

Oats showed considerable resistance to selling pressure, shipping demand being good.

Provisions were firm early, but were dragged down by grain weakness.

CURB MARKET

New York, Sept. 17—The sharp reduction in mid-continent crude prices had only a temporary depressing effect on today's curb market, which moved upward in sympathy with the bulk rally on the "big board."

Prairie O. & Gas, which initiated the latest price cut actually closed three points higher at 209 but most of the other active curb stocks showed only fractional improvement. Pipe Line issues made good recovery from recent weakness, Cumberland jumping ten points and several other showing net gains of one to 4.

Activity and strength of Ward Baking, class B, common caused nearly 2 1-2 points higher at 34 3-8, while the centers of the industrial list. Other strong spots were Durham, Gillette Safety Razor, Glen Alden Coal, Hudson Companies preferred, Nineteen Ten and Tower Radio, up one to 2 points activity of the last named being due to the declaration of an initial dividend of 50 cents. American Light and Traction dropped three points.

J. A. Randall, who was a recent visitor in Danbury, reports a fitting commemoration of Friday, Sept. 12, Defense Day, in that city. There was a parade, with several bands, and drum corps, a company of the state militia, a company of Danbury A. E. F., ex-service soldier boys, and one of Red Cross nurses. The procession was led by several members of G. A. R., one being color bearer, after the parade there was an address by Rev. Dr. Pierce of Washington, D. C., President Coolidge's pastor. The retirement of the brave commander-general, John J. Pershing, Sept. 12, was mentioned and three hearty cheers were given in his honor. As the sun was setting the large flag was lowered from the tall liberty pole at Danbury square, while the band played The Star Spangled Banner.

There is trouble ahead for the farmers this year in cutting corn. The recent furious wind storm left it terribly tangled on the ground and very difficult to handle. Some fields are so badly damaged as to necessitate feeding it green to the stock.

C. H. Koch, of Jackson Heights, L. I., and Westminster, died in New York suddenly very early Friday morning. Thursday of the preceding week Mr. Koch, who was spending a vacation with his wife and two younger children at his summer home in Westminster, was suddenly stricken and had the doctor in haste in the night. The doctor left him very much more comfortable and expected his patient to be back to normal health in a couple of days. But Sunday he had a relapse. A telegram summoned his older son from New York who arrived the next morning. Monday afternoon the sick man was taken to New York by train, he having insisted on being fully dressed and riding to the station as though well. Word received two days later reported Mr. Koch as very low. His death was a great shock to most in this region who had not known of his illness. He was generally liked and will be greatly missed.

Besides his wife he is survived by five children, Helen Evelyn and Frank, of New York, and Edgar and Alene of Jackson Heights, L. I.

MYSTIC

The practice of school children opening so many windows while riding in the trolley cars was frequently complained of last year and conditions are much the same this year. It would make it more comfortable for the general public, both as to the matter of regulating the supply of fresh air and seating capacity, if a special car were run to transport thes students.

The project of planting vines, shrubs and evergreen trees near the ledges and walls in the cut on Baptist Hill, which the Garden club has undertaken, is certain to receive the hearty support of all interested in the welfare of the village. The Village Improvement society for years has done splendid work in keeping the streets free of rubbish and removing each month accumulations of rubbish which might become unsightly if allowed to remain, and now that the Garden club has started a movement to beautify the village the result is bound to be far reaching and will increase civic pride. Persons wishing to help in this important work have been asked to hand their donations to Mrs. L. P. Allyn, Mrs. Frank W. Batty, or any contribution may be left at L. E. Kinney's store.

The rain of Wednesday disappointed local people who had made arrangements to attend North Stonington Grange fair.

Mrs. J. Edwin Thompson, who has been ill for about two weeks as the result of an attack of acute indigestion, has not been so well this week.

Mrs. William E. Allen of Providence, is the guest of her aunt Miss Elizabeth Burrows.

Frederic Denison has been a visitor in New York.

Mrs. L. C. Whitney has returned to her home in Brooklyn, N. Y. after spending the summer in the village.

Miss Harriet Main has gone to Webster, Mass. after to assist with Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Cheever.

Miss Ruby Jewell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Truman A. Jewell, is a student at the Academy of the Holy Family, Baltic, where she is taking a secretarial course.

Mrs. Chester E. Chapman is a patient at Lawrence hospital, where she underwent a minor operation Tuesday.

Mrs. W. T. Fish was [illegible] Hartford for a few days last week.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Kinney have returned to their home in Washington, D. C., after a visit here with relatives.

Miss Tillie Boylen of Melrose, Mass. has been the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Boylen.

Misses Ray and Lillian Balmer of Arlington Heights, Mass., are guests of their sister, Mrs. John G. Wheeler.

Mrs. Deborah W. Reed has returned to her home in Moorestown, N. J. after a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. George S. B. Leonard.

From a Cabinet source comes the report that Oskar Hergt, former Finance Minister of Germany, is to be given the Chancellorship by Herr Stresseman. The latter's leanings towards Hergt are known. In time, the report quoted, Herr Marx would become President of Germany, supplanting Friedrich Ebert.

EXHIBITS BETTER THAN EVER AT NORTH STONINGTON GRANGE FAIR

(Special to the Bulletin)

North Stonington, Sept. 17—It takes more than rain to dampen the spirits of the officers of the North Stonington Grange which is holding its 14th annual fair here at the fairgrounds. The downpour of rain was naturally discouraging but in spite of the wet weather and chilly wind the Grange officers, committees and judges, took an optimistic view of the situation and the day's programme was carried out as planned. The accommodating and genial secretary, John B. Perry, summed up the situation when he said "We are all disappointed in the weather but—it is only 365 days to the next fair. Let's hope we have fair weather tomorrow, the last day of the fair," he added.

The fair opened yesterday with an attendance of 500 or more, a fairly good opening day and despite the inclement weather today there were in the neighborhood of 200 people on the grounds.

The feature number of the program this afternoon was a splendid address on New England by Charles M. Gardner, high priest demeter, of Springfield, well known in Grange circles. Another attraction of the afternoon was an excellent juggling act by George Kaplan, vaudeville artist, who has been signed up to give two performances a day. It was intended to have Mr. Kaplan give his act on an outside platform but owing to the rain the act was given inside the large dining room where seats were provided for the audience. Swahn's Military Band of Norwich John M. Swahn leader, provided an excellent concert programme throughout the afternoon, from the bandstand in front of the main exhibition hall.

The exhibits this year, in most departments, are larger and better than those of last year which was considered a banner year. The wide variety and high quality of the exhibits have been very favorably commented upon by all who have seen them. The number of exhibitors in all departments is about 200. There are shown this year more cattle than were seen at the fair last year. In all there are about 50 head of cattle. There are three large pens of sheep and there is a fairly good pig exhibit. There are about 300 entries in the poultry show. Owing to a change in the entry rules the birds seen this year are of higher quality than in previous years.

In the large vegetable building, constructed several years ago, is seen one of the finest exhibits of farm produce in the history of the local grange. Considering the fact that the fair draws farm exhibits from a radius of only six or seven miles the vegetable show is truly remarkable. Few fairs can boast of better vegetable exhibits. For quality and variety it is surprising what a fine collection the Grange has secured for this year's fair.

The main exhibition hall is also well filled with excellent entries. On the ground floor there is an exhibition of windmills and wooden toys made by J. H. Chapman of Westerly. The New London County Farm Bureau has quite an extensive farm exhibit. This exhibit shows why the farmer should grow more alfalfa than either clover or timothy. Specimens of the three kinds of feed are labeled as follows: Timothy hay, 1 1-2 tons per acre, 90 pounds of digestible protein. Clover 2 tons per acre, 304 pounds of digestible protein: alfalfa, 3 1-2 tons per acre, 742 pounds of digestible protien. There is also shown soil testing equipment and a display of farm bulletins which can be secured through the farm bureau.

Articles made by Junior club girls while learning various stitches a home made fireless cooker and samples of cloth made from Connecticut grown wool are also shown.

MERCHANTS UNITE FOR FALL OPENING DAYS

Through the cooperation of the Retail Merchants Bureau of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, Norwich merchants dealing in millinery, men's and women's apparel, have arranged to have their fall opening on the same days, namely Friday and Saturday, September 19 and 20. The openings, this week, will have more than the usual interest for fashion-loving women as some of the stores will feature a style show during opening days, showing many of the newest modes in women's apparel on living models.

Movements of this kind serve a great public good. These seasonal openings have an exceptional interest for both men and women who desire to dress correctly and a great many women who desire to keep in close touch with the changing fashions make it a point to attend all the important openings. Prior to the time when joint openings were held this often necessitated several trips down town as the practice has sometimes to hold these openings at a time best suited to the convenience of the individual merchant.

In arranging for a joint opening the merchants had in mind the convenience of the shopping public. With the majority of the millinery shops and the stores featuring men's and women's apparel, holding their openings on the same days it will be possible for all those who desire to learn the tendency of the fall fashions to come down town on either of the two days selected for the joint opening and to visit all the openings, in which they are interested, in one trip.

Moreover, in selecting Saturday as one of the opening days the merchants had in mind the convenience of the out-of-town customers who make Norwich their shopping headquarters, as many of these people find it very inconvenient to visit the city on any other day than Saturday. It is expected that a great many out-of-town shoppers will take advantage of the opportunity to get their first glimpse of fall styles on Saturday.

EMBROIDERY ON HATS USED BY DESIGNERS

Silk and tinsel embroidery on hats is greatly liked this Fall.

Roman stripes in fancy ribbon have a great vogue and there are many novelties in strictly sports sets.

Crushed velvet in a smocked effect made one model very attractive. This rich hat had for adornment a knot of the stylish metallic flowers, on the edge of the brim.

Burnt peacock fancies are still strong as trimming especially on hats of black hatter's plush or velvet.

Metal cloth, lace and cords in tinsel and similar bright, glittering material appear on some of the very best designs.

Silver and blue continues a favorite combination. For that matter, while black, crab-apple and others of the newer shades seem to lead, there are handsome hats ready to match all the best liked tints.

A wide line of ready-to-wear designs will be found for early fall demands.

On one striking hat of black, the sole trimming is one of the effective painted quills, in red and black.

See all these and equally beautiful designs, offered by those merchants who advertise in The Bulletin this morning.

FORMER NORWICH CURATE IS NOW A MONSIGNOR

The Meriden Record says:

In recognition of his outstanding services to his church and country, the Rev. John Neale, LL. D., P. R., rector of St. Rose's church since 1914, has been elevated by Pope Pius XI to the rank of monsignor. He is thus made a domestic prelate to his holiness.

Henceforth his title will be the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Neale.

Msgr. Neale arrived in Meriden to assume charge of St. Rose's parish in January, 1914, and at once took his place among the leaders in the city. He was here but a short time, when elaborate changes were being made in the church, which was completely transformed into a most becoming structure, inside and out.

His noted patriotic zeal, together with a dynamic personality and rich oratorical power naturally made him a distinguished citizen.

He was born in Middletown, Conn., June 24, 1864, receiving his early education in the public schools and his preparatory instruction in St. Charles' college, from which he was graduated in 1883. He pursued his philosophical studies in St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, and in 1884 was granted the degree of Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts from that institution.

Next he entered St. Bonaventure's college, matriculating there to take his theological course. As he was still too young to be ordained, he devoted a year to study in St. John's Seminary at Brighton, Mass., and June 21, 1888, he was ordained to the priesthood by Archbishop Williams. St. Bonaventure's conferred upon him his degree of LL. D.

His first assignment was as assistant at St. Augustine's church in Bridgeport, he being given charge of the parochial school. Later he was transferred to St. Patrick's church, Norwich, where he was assistant and principal of the school. He remained there eleven years.

Assigned to the pastorate of the Church of the Immaculate Conception at Terryville, he faced the task of organizing the church and establishing its work on a sound basis. He remained in the parish for ten years, during which time the church membership increased from 300 to 800, and in addition 700 were transferred to another parish.

At Terryville, Dr. Neale built a well-appointed rectory, also erected a lyceum, which was a popular recreation center. In August 1910, Dr. Neale was given charge of St. Michael's church, Westerly, R. I. He remained there until January, 1914, and, although he had been in charge for less than four years, he greatly extended its work and largely increased the church property. He left it free of debt.

When he arrived as the new rector of St. Rose's in 1914, he was made a permanent pastor. His progressive leadership quickly was made apparent when the remodelling and enlarging of the church was projected. The complete work left the parish in possession of a church with an interior which is among the richest and finest of any in the diocese.

Many other improvements in the parish equipment and property have been made since Msgr. Neale assumed charge. He has established and personally financed an athletic field, open to boys of all creeds, providing a suitable place for various sporting activities in the proper seasons.

Another great monument to Msgr. Neale is St. Rose's Community building, the public recreation center, which was formally dedicated and placed in service in June, 1922. The structure, which is a splendid addition to Meriden, was financed by a public drive for $100,000 in which the rector received cordial support throughout the city.

Msgr. Neale has travelled all over the world, qualifying him to put his oratory and personal experiences in many countries into some highly interesting lectures on foreign lands. He has hunted and fished in many distant places, and has numerous mounted trophies of big game due to his skill in field and forest. He is an enthusiastic member of the Meriden Sportsmen's club.

BUDDINGTON TELLS COURT HE GUARDS RUM RUNNERS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, Sept. 17—The case of Leroy Buddington of Poquonnoc Bridge Groton, charge with carrying concealed weapons was continued in the police court today, to allow time for an examination of the mental condition of the accused. Buddington pleaded not guilty. He told the court a queer story to the effect that he was a special constable, appointed by the state to look after the oyster beds at Fishers Island. The other part of his business was to protect state rum runners and he often assisted in loading auto trucks with booze and acting as guard on the trips. He had no trouble in getting by the state police at Groton, New London, or Norwich for he had his badge and credentials. As he was liable to bump up against thugs at any time he had a license to carry a gun until January 1, 1825. He had another gun in his Studebaker car which he had wrecked in Groton. Buddington admitted having been an inmate of the Norwich State Hospital three years ago. He said that after three months they "kicked him out."

THE ELDREDGE HARDWARE COMPANY

WILL MAKE ARGUMENTS IN JAMES DIVORCE SUIT

Examination and cross examinations that went to great length and revealed the tangled matrimonial affairs of Ray C. James of Waterford and his wife Sarah Kane James of Old Lyme, filled all the day Wednesday in the superior court at New London in the divorce suit of the husband against his wife. He alleges desertion on Jan. 10, 1921 and wants the custody of his 5 year old son, Robert.

The evidence was concluded as court adjourned for the day and arguments are to be made today (Thursday) before Judge Leonard J. Mickerson.

It is concerning the treatment accorded this son by relatives of the plaintiff and defendant that much of the testimony has revolved itself. Mr. James and his mother, Mrs. Robert Daugherty, testified Tuesday as to an agreement that had been entered into by the husband and wife, whereby each would alternate having the boy for a two months period. Mrs. Daugherty testified that after the boy returned to her house after visiting with his mother in Lyme, he was from four to six pounds thinner than when he left to go to his mother, and that medical attention was often necessary for him.

Wednesday Mrs. Emily Kane, testified that while the boy had contracted the mumps while living with his mother and herself in Old Lyme, he had contracted pneumonia while living with the father and his relatives.

Dr. Elias K. Dewitt, James F. Bugbee and the mother of the defendant were on the stand Wednesday. A recess for luncheon was taken at 1 o'clock, at which time Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, counsel for the defendant had concluded his direct examination. Attorneys Morris B. Lubchansky and Russell H. Corcoran appear for the plaintiff.

Several cases on the docket for trial this week have been withdrawn, among them being the divorce action brought by Annabel Fox Brand of Waterford, and the action brought by Wilson against Lamb.

Several cases also went off the list, among them being those of Hopkins vs. Washburn, and Graham, et al. vs. Jansson, et al., both scheduled for Wednesday and Johnson vs. Wheeland Iacano, et al vs. Schofield, et al., assigned for Thursday.

MOTHER IS ACCUSED OF ABDUCTING HER SON

Mrs. Delia M. Verville, wife of William Verville of this city, was brought here from Arctic, R. I., Wednesday afternoon where she had been placed under arrest on the charge of abducting her 15 months old son and removing him from the state. The husband and wife have been living apart for some time and the warrants for the woman's arrest was made out on complaint of her husband who represented that Mrs. Verville had taken the child away in an automobile and had refused to let him see it when he went to Arctic.

After the warrant had been served on her and she had been brought here, Mrs. Verville denied that she had abducted the little boy, but said that her husband was with her on the trip when the child was taken to Rhode Island. She also said that he had been allowed to see the child at different times when he came to Arctic, but at other times he had been refused because of his quarrelsome and unfit condition through drink.

John Bannon of Arctic gave bonds of $500 for the appearance of Mrs. Verville in court this (Thursday) morning.

THE MINSTREL SERENADE IS COMING ATTRACTION

Arrangements are fast progressing for the production on "The Minstrel Serenade", which will be presented for two evenings and a matinee in October at the Broadway theatre, under the auspices of the Norwich Lions club.

A recent meeting of the members in charge of the arrangements was held with a very good representation of members present. Starting with a clear, concise outline of the work expected of each committee, General Chairman, President George A. Finn, outlined the various duties of each member. Elaborate plans are being laid for the production, including definite arrangements for the distribution of advance tickets by Secretary C. Edward Carpenter, ticket chairman. Definite plans are necessary for the successful presentation of so large a production.

Newspaper comments from different cities were read at the meeting which showed "The Minstrel Serenade" to be the most elaborate and costly play ever offered with amateurs. In fact the staging and equipment will be on a par with the best of professional attraction. Both newspapers and magazines have commented most favorably on the producers of this play, Harrington Adams, Inc., and the local committee is determined to make this the biggest success the theatre has ever seen.

MANCHURIAN ARMY IN FULL SWING IN DRIVE FOR PEKING

Peking Government is Rushing Troops North to Repel the Invasion—No General Retreat Has Resulted From the Revolt in the Chekiang Third Army—Leaders Declare Their Intention to Continue to Oppose the Kiangso Armies in Their Endeavor to Capture Shanghai—Severe Fighting is Reported to the Northwest of Shanghai.

(By The Associated Press)

Weakened by the repeated hammering of the Kiangsu forces, which are supported by the central government of Peking, a revolt of the third or home army and disaffection in other units, the Chekiang defense of Shanghai is on the verge of collapse.

General Lu Hung-Hsiang has offered to resign the Tunhunship of the province and is reported to have left his capital, Hang Chow, for Shanghai. The troops, part of the third army, stationed at Hang Chow, are reported to have thrown in their lot with Kiangsu while others have joined the Anhwe army which had invaded Chekiang near Szean south of Hangchow. Others to the Fukien army, under Sun Chuan-Fang.

Remnant of Wu Pei-Fu advanced into Chekiang from the south.

Kiangsu, has launched a new offensive at Luho, on the Yangtze river, driving towards Woosung, the possessing of which would give it the practical control of the port of Shanghai.

Refugees are again flocking into Shanghai and the foreign defense forces have taken precautions to protect the foreign settlements. The central government of Peking, the hands of which have been strengthened by the collapse of the Chekiang armies, has formally announced its intention of suppressing by force Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian leader, whose invasion of Chihli at Chaoyang and bombing of the Chihli garrison point at Shanhaikwan has been accepted as a challenge to fight. Wu Pei-Fu has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Peking armies with instructions to start an offensive against Chang.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the southern leader, who is concentrating his forces at Nanking in northern Kwangtung to support the Chekiang leader, is left in a dangerous position with his ally admitting his defeat.

MANCHURIAN ARMY IS ADVANCING ON PEKING

Peking, Sept. 18 (7.30 p. m.) (By the A. P.)—The drive for Peking by the Manchurian army of Chang Tso-Lin is in full swing and the Peking government is rushing troops northward to repel the invasion, it was announced officially this evening.

The official reports say Chang's soldiers opened fire at Chao Yang, on Monday, and that this act was accepted by the Peking government as a challenge to fight.

Garrison Commander Kuna, of Chao Yang, was instructed to defend himself but not to assume the offensive.

Eight battalions of the crack Third division of Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, commander of the Peking Army, were at Fengtai today, awaiting orders Fengtai is southeast of Peking.

General Wang Hui-Ching, commander of the parking garrison, has departed northward with his troops.

Within a week Feng Yuh-Siang, "The Christian General," one of Wu's chief aides, will have moved his army corps to the north. He intends to make a base at Jehom, about 100 miles northeast of Peking.

The Fifteenth mixed brigade from Taiminfu, in Chihli province, in which Peking is situated, will garrison the metropolitan area of the capital.

NO GENERAL RETREAT OF CHEKIANG FORCES

Shanghai, Sept. 19 (2.30 a. m. By the A. P.)—The expected general retreat of the Chekiang forces toward Shanghai, made almost inevitable by the revolt of the Chekiang Third army, had not developed up to 2 o'clock this (Friday) morning.

A special war council of Chekiang leaders at their Lungwha headquarters was still in session early this morning. A spokesman said it was their intention to continue the struggle against the Kiangsu armies seeking to capture Shanghai. They admit, however, that the revolt was a "great disaster."

SEVERE FIGHTING TO NORTHWEST OF SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Friday, Sept. 19 (By the A. P.)—Severe fighting began at Luho on the coast northwest of Shanghai after midnight. A large number of wounded are arriving at the Chinese hospitals.

REPUBLICAN OUTLOOK IS REPORTED TO COOLIDGE

Washington, Sept. 18.—Optimistic reports given President Coolidge today on the political outlook in the east and in New England were tempered by a message that Senator La Follette, independent candidate, had a fifty-fifty chance in the northwestern states.

John Barrett, chairman of the independent information committee, who brought the latter report, said, however, that a distinct trend among the independent voters toward the president had been evident for the last two months in the northwestern territory.

Representative Begg of Ohio, told Mr. Coolidge the republicans would carry New England solidly and New Jersey, with prospects also bright in New York. He has just returned from visits in these sections.

The committee plans to begin public hearings as soon as Secretary Mellon replies to a questionnaire submitted by the committee concerning surtaxes and its agents gather the data they will be instructed to find. Chairman Couzens estimated that from five to six weeks probably would be required for these preliminaries, but said the hearings would begin before the elections should the information required by the committee be available.

Defaulter Ruins Brokerage House

Trusted Partner Disappeared Following Heavy Losses in Speculation.

New York, Sept. 18—Defalcation of a trusted partner today threw the old established brokerage house of Day and Heaton into involuntary bankruptcy and resulted in its suspension from the New York Stock exchange of which it had been a member since 1871. Liabilities of $1,700,000 according to a semi-official estimate, exceeded assets by about $700,000.

Troubles of the firm were laid to the disappearance of George R. Christian who entered its employ as a clerk 28 years ago and was elevated to a partnership in 1919. Other partners said they had no knowledge of his whereabouts or the amount involved by his defalcation. An examination of the firm's financial position was begun by Alfred C. Coxe, Jr., who was appointed receiver after an involuntary petition in bankruptcy had been filed.

Christian, it was learned, left on his vacation a month ago. No irregularity in his accounts was discovered until last week, when other members of the firm began to investigate the disappearance of certain records. Yesterday the partners were understood to have received a letter, purporting to come from Christian and explaining that his action had rendered the firm insolvent.

Back of Mr. Christian's defalcation, it was openly asserted in brokerage circles tonight, lay a story of heavy losses encountered in stock market speculation. The missing broker, known to his associates as a "bear" operator, was said to have been an active short seller of stocks last spring, when the market was on the downgrade.

Extending these operations throughout the summer's advance, Mr. Christian was reported to have suffered losses on which he was pressed for settlement. His disappearance coincided with the peak of the upward movement which would have been disastrous to any broker who had consistently sold stocks short.

Three of the suspended firm's six partners held memberships of the New York stock exchange. They were William Weaver Heaton, William Wilson Heaton and Harry V. Day. Office partners, in addition to the missing member, were James H. Waterbury and F. W. Giffin. The three stock exchange seats, it was pointed out, would constitute almost $300,000 of the firm's estimated $1,000,000 assets.

DISPUTES THAT AIRPLANES WILL REPLACE BATTLESHIPS

Paris, Sept. 18.—The theory that airplanes will some day replace battleships in offensive and defensive war, is rejected today in a long article in Le Temps.

The article was prompted by a report from Washington that President Coolidge has no sympathy with efforts to increase the naval budget and feels it is better to spend money on aircraft than on capital ships. This report has been given much publicity in the French press.

Le Temps takes issue with President Coolidge's reported view and calls attention to the airplane's failure as a bombarding power against capital ships. It refers lengthily to the destruction by aircraft of the American warships New Jersey and Virginia off Capp Hatteras in September 1923.

"Despite the fact," declares the newspaper, "that these bombardments were conducted under particularly favorable conditions, the airplanes were not able to do effective bombing until they reached the low altitude of 900 metres."

In conclusion, the newspaper foreshadows a greatly increased development in the near future in naval airplanes and airpine carriers, not supplnting warships but assisting them and supplementing their effectiveness.

Mount Vernon, Ills., Sept. 18—The Rev. L. M. Hight, a minister at Ina, 12 miles south of here, was arrested today on a charge of poisoning his wife Ann, 44, died unexpectedly last Friday. At the inquest, it was said Mrs Hight died of ptomaine poisoning. The Rev. Hight told authorities he purchased a can of minced ham in a restaurant and his wife and two children were made ill from eating it. Owners of the restaurant testified at the inquest he did not purchase the canned meat there.

The minister is said to have declared he had made many enemies in Ina and vicinity by a war on bootleggers. Officers asserted they had been unable to verify this statement.

The minister himself had had the stomach of his wife removed for examination.

DISCUSSING DISAMAMENT PACT PROTOCOL AT GENEVA

Geneva, Sept. 18.—(By the A. P.)—The exact relation to be established between the protocol on arbitration and security and the international conference for the reduction of armaments, which will be convoked after the protocol has been set up and adopted, caused one of the most laborious discussions today since the opening of the present assembly of the league of nations.

Some of the delegates on the famous sub-commission of twelve stuck strongly to the position that the protocol in question should come into force only after execution of the decision which may be reached by the forthcoming conference on armaments. Others, on the other hand, argued tenaciously for hours that the protocol on arbitration and security, if ratified by a sufficient number of states, should go into force even before the armaments conference is convoked.

Eventually the delegates reached what is considered common ground, and there only remains tomorrow to attain complete agreement on the exact phraseology of the clause known as Article 9 in the original Benes draft, which was drawn up after consultation with the British and French delegations. According to the most reliable information available tonight this tentative agreement will probably take the form of making it clear that after a sufficient number of ratifications the entering into force of the protocol will be suspended pending the convocation of the armaments conference.

WANDERING WOMAN HAD HANDBAG CONTAINING $11,131

North Andover, Mass., Sept. 18:—Mrs. Hattie Woodhouse arrived at the home of relatives here tonight in charge of a police inspector of Youngstown, Ohio, where she had been found on a street in the foreign quarter carrying a handbag containing $11,311 in bills. She was taken here to the home of Mrs. William Dore, her sister. Mr. Dore Dore tomorrow will seek the guardianship of the woman from the Salem probate court. He was reluctant to discuss the case tonight but said that Mrs. Woodhouse was the widow of James Woodhouse, former overseer of Sutton's mills here and later lived in Worcester. He declared that Mrs. Woodhouse had no son or daughter. He declined to make any statement as to where the money came from, where Mrs. Woodhouse had lived since the death of her husband, or when the latter died.

It was said by the police that when it became known in Youngstown that the woman carried a large amount of money, several persons claimed relationship which they were unable to prove.

MORRIS AND BROOKS HEAD DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET

Other Nominations Made at Hartford Convention Were: For Secretary of State, John A. Markham; Treasurer, William S. Meany; Comptroller, James R. May of New London—Convention Was Harmonious and Nominations Were Made Without Contest—Volstead Act Modification and Anti-Klan Planks Were Cheered.

Hartford, Sept. 18—The democratic state ticket placed in the field for the election in November by the democratic state convention today was as follows:

For governor, Charles Gould Morris, of Newtown.

For lieutenant-governor, Harry L. Brooks, of New Haven.

For secretary of state, John A. Markham, of Hartford.

For treasurer, William S. Meany, of Greenwich.

For comptroller, James R. May, of New London.

Presidential electors, Rollin U. Tyler, Haddam; Philip Troup, New Haven; Ernest O. Wagner, Salisbury; Mary Mitchell, New London; Dora Eagan Waterbury; Mary C. Sumner, Hartford; John C. Cornell, Bridgeport.

The convention was harmonious and, each nominee was chosen without an opponent, a situation which later gave rise to exclamations of surprise from the several contests had been expected. All last night one group of delegates had sought to get opposition to another group consolidated that a supposedly pre-arranged ticket might be defeated. Just before the convention resumed word went about that contests would be avoided and when Mayor Albert N. Phillips, Jr., of Stamford, seconded the nomination of Mr. Morris for governor the fact was recognized that Mr. Phillips himself was not a candidate in spite of all sought exertions of his friends to make him one.

The other places on the ticket were seemingly spontaneously filled. After the convention adjourned it was said that early today the opposing groups had withdrawn their own candidates for places below governor in the interest of party harmony and that Messrs Brooks, Markham and May, were acceptable to all. The treasurership was left open and Mr. Meany's name was put forward by his town colleague in the convention.

The platform adopted embraces more subjects in the fewest words of any adopted by the party in years. The only change from the committee draft was on the anti-child labor plank, Mrs. Josepha Whitney winning a victory which was regarded as notable, by securing adoption of a declaration in behalf of a feral constitutional amendment in place of a legislative plank on the subject. Mrs. Whitney was congratulated on all sides afterwards on her triumph.

Party leaders and delegates after the convention ended pointed out that probably few of the delegates knew their standard bearer, that a majority of all the delegates probably do not personally know the nominees for other state officers, and out of the entire convention very few were acquainted with all the nominees collectively. Mr. Brooks ran on the party ticket for secretary of state three campaigns ago and of the others only Mr. May had been a campaigner having served in the state senate from New London some years ago.

Mr. Morris did not come to the convention. It is expected that he will be notified of his nomination early next week.

The convention remembered a stalwart democrat who for many years was an outstanding figure in the conventions—Thomas L. Reilly—by having Chairman P. B. O'Sullivan name a committee to draw up a tribute to his memory in the form of resolutions.

National Committeeman Homer S. Cummings and Thomas J. Spellacy long active in party deliberations on occasions like those of today took no part this time although present.

The planks which got applause were those mentioning the national ticket, election of public utilities commissioners, the 44-hour week for women, altering the system of representation, and the Volstead act modification, and cheers were added for the anti-Klan plank and the one calling for examination of books of the state treasurer and comptroller.

BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY THE AMERICAN LEGION

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 18.—(By the A. P.)—With rousing choruses of "ayes" the sixth national convention of the American Legion went on record vigorously here today for a navy second to none, an adequate army and other measures of national preparedness.

Passage of the universal service and sounder Americanism, schools and officers' training camps, the national guard and similar proposals also received the endorsement of the convention in a session of more than five hours.

Condemnation of two departments of the United States Veterans' Bureau and demand for immediate removal of Colonel C. R. Forbes on the indictment charging irregularities in his management of the bureau, was contained in other resolutions adopted.

On international matters the great bitterness of the convention session was shown, but when the issue was turned to one of confidence in National Commander John R. Quinn, who retires tomorrow, the latter received unanimous and rinsing support.

Most of the business of the convention was out of the way, and politics came to the fore as the delegates prepared for the election of officers tomorrow and adjournment of the convention, which will meet in Omaha next year.

When various district delegations went into caucus tonight, J. J. Dunn of the District of Columbia and John R. McQuigg of Ohio, were the names most frequently heard as candidates to succeed Commander Quinn.

ADDRESS BY LAFOLLETTE IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

New York, Sept. 18.—Facing an audience which filled Madison Square Garden, Senator Robert M. La Follette, independent presidential candidate, began active campaigning tonight with an address in which he combined a declaration of his political views with a denunciation of the two old parties.

When he appeared on the platform the candidate was given a prolonged demonstration and after he plunged into a discussion of campaign issues he was interrupted again and again by cheers and applause.

More than half of the men and women who heard Senator La Follette paid to gain admission to the hall, those in charge of the rally estimating that the innovation "netted a house" of $12,000. The receipts went into the campaign fund.

The Wisconsin senator was given a 15 minutes' ovation when he appeared on the platform.

As he started in reading his prepared address slowly there was a flurry of disorder in the far side of the hall. A man who had been noisy was ejected from the hall and the audience settled back to listen in peace.

Others seriously ill are Elsie Carrado, 8, the daughter of Mrs. Carrado, Mr. and Mrs. Frank De Amico, 29, and another woman, whose name could not be learned.

WILLIMANTIC

Should plans materialize Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, will soon have a new community and church. The project has been approved by The Federated Churches of Connecticut and a financial campaign is being launched to raise the necessary funds for the structure. Private subscriptions are already being received, according to an announcement made Thursday morning by President C. H. Beach of the college. The community house will be built first and the church will be of the type of the present church in the village. The community house and the church will be separate structures and non-sectarian although the latter building will probably be under Congregational supervision. It is not known as yet how the present church will be disposed of. Students of the college and residents of the village are rightly pleased at the prospects of a community house having felt its need for many years.

A wild night of joy riding and merrymaking, stimulated by drinking, was dearly paid for by four young men who were in Mansfield town court Monday morning, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. The driver of the Ford car, in which the party traveled had an additional charge against him of driving while under the influence of liquor. He entered a demurrer to that charge and with his companions pleaded guilty to the first two charges. The men were Frank Bishop of Tolland, Joseph Fara, Charles Peterson and Charles Miller of Willington. Investigations made by State Policemen Henry Heinold and Harrison Hulburt showed that the quartet had attempted to enter a house in Merrow, late Saturday night. Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews imposed a fine of $100 and costs on Fara, with a suspended sentence of 30 days in jail. Peterson, Bishop and Miller were each fined $7 and costs and Bishop and Miller settled. Peterson could not locate a friend in the world who would give the amount of his assessment to keep him out of jail and he was taken there to work it out.

In reply to alleged accusations made regarding him in the town of Mansfield, School Supervisor Wilson Greer writes the following:

Any recommendations which I have offered at any time to the Mansfield school committee have been made for the purpose of increasing the educational advantages of all the boys and girls of the town and for this purpose only. The best and equal educational opportunity for all, with special favors for none has been, and will continue to be, my aim and goal. And further—as supervisor of the Mansfield schools, it is, and has always been, my duty to work with and for the town school committee, whatever its personnel, and never my duty to attempt to influence the choice in any caucus of either new or old members. To this duty I have strictly adhered.

State Policeman Henry Heinold, who made the arrest, stated that Breault in his Ford car, passed seven other machines which were going over 30 miles an hour and that his escape from an accident was nothing short of miraculous.

Louis Marceau of Willimantic, the driver of a gasoline supply truck, was charged with operating his machine without lights and pleaded guilty. State Policeman Heinold also made this arrest. A fine of $10 and costs, imposed by Justice Faulkner, was paid.

JEWETT CITY

A meeting of the freemen of the borough was held at 8 p. m. Thursday evening in response to a petition by John A. Hourigan and fifteen others to see if the borough of Jewett City will vote to buy the interests, property and holdings of the Jewett City Water Company.

Warden Matthew Geary presided and C. M. Gray was clerk a motion was carried that the board of wardens and burgesses to be a committee to investigate, relative to the value and costs of purchase of the Jewett City Water Works and that $500 be appropriated, or any part of same to defray any necessary expense; the committee to report at a future meeting, before the contract with the company expires in June 1925. Forty-three persons were present at the meeting.

At the time of the raise in rates, and according to the figures of Walter Musgrave, the company's auditor, the revenue of the company for 1923 was $14,341.26. Under the proposed new schedule the revenue was raised to $21,417.52, an increase of $7,176.06. Judge John T. Barry, chairman of the freemen's committee, gave his opinion that the company could not ask for a sinking fund of $2,004.34, or the surplus $2,316.13. At that time the freemen voted to compromise for $17,500.

Along in the middle of the summer, the Jewett City Water Co., gave notice of a raise in rates, which, after a number of public meetings and conferences with the company's officials, was satisfactorily arbitrated. At that time the company gave notice that the water works would be offered for sale to the borough of Jewett City.

The water was turned on July 4th, 1895 and since that time a constant supply has been available with over 100 pounds pressure to the houses and hydrants.

Last year the borough paid the company $1,521.00, with the same estimates by the borough board for this year.

The adjusted and revised rates, show the estimated revenue, annually to the water company.

Total annual estimated revenue under revised water schedule $17,945.52.

Jewett City is unique in position, situated between two deserted villages, Packerville on the right hand, and Hopeville on the left. Packerville, though not entirely without activity, has but little business today, yet in times before the war, a booming mill and thrifty people were busy in the manufacture of cotton diaper of the finest grade.

The families of Packer, Leavens, Truesdale, Brown, Barber and Lillibridge are well remembered. The one time great mill, was built a little over 100 years ago, but it wore out, and eventually fell into disuse and decay. William Mason, a mere boy, came to Packerville about 60 years ago, and was given opportunity, in the little old stone blacksmith shop, to try out various ideas he had for improvement upon the cotton loom. As a result of his devices, it is said, that all the 52 looms within the old Packer mill, there were no two alike. Today the old shop is a crumbling ruin, choked with weeds and overgrown with vines. The mill is gone, yet, from the experiments of a boy at Packerville, the Mason loom was evolved.

As far as business is concerned, Hopeville is a deserted village and has been for years, with houses rotted away, the church and mills burned long years ago, and the people mostly dead or forgotten. Even in the bright light of noon, such settlements have a haunted atmosphere. Hopeville was built around a mill; when the mill was no longer operated the people moved away. There was once fifty families in Hopeville, that gave 200 operatives to the mill.

The close of the Civil war found the Lathrop interests with great quantities of their grade of goods in storage. Prices slumped, the bottom fell out of the woolen market, mortgages had to be met, fires came to destroy not only property but hopes. It was the beginning of the end, and the woolen industry of the thriving village was, almost overnight, ended forever. The great stone mill was rented to a concern to manufacture horse blankets, then like the wooden one on the dam, was burned. The tenants

Alma Rubens and Conrad Nagel appear together as stars for the first time in The Rejected Woman, shown at the Breed theater last night, and the producers, Distinctive Pictures Corporation, are to be congratulated on the superb performance of these favorites in John Lynch's powerful drama of modern-day life. The theme gives both Miss Rubens and Mr. Nagel acting opportunities such as they have never had; the role also gives Miss Rubens a chance to wear marvelous clothes, an always welcome opportunity for an actress of such beauty. In featured roles are the ever-able Wyndham Standing and Leonora Hughes, internationally celebrated dancer and beauty, with a supporting cast of distinguished actors.

The Rejected Woman may be termed a vital drama. It touches the depths of emotion, but it is never heavy. John Lynch, the author, and Albert Parker, the director saw to that. They have invested the piece with all of the jazz, jollity and beauty of modern life in New York's celebrated Park avenue set, but beneath this veneer is the theme of essential love.

Miss Rubens takes the part of Diane DuPrez, a Canadian girl, who follows to New York the man she loves, John Leslie, played by Mr. Nagel. There she soon realized that his world is brilliant with girls gorgeously gowned and accustomed to the luxuries of wealth. She is therefore encountered with the problem of foregoing her love or obtaining the requisites which permit her to meet John on his own level. Love being essential to the girl's life, she chooses the latter course, almost wrecking thereby the happiness she seeks. But she finds a way out in the end.

William Duncan in The Fast Express a Mack Sennett comedy and the Pathe news make up the remainder of the bill.

Palace Theater

Laughter prevailed at the Palace last night when the newest of Mack Sennett's inimitable productions, The Extra Girl, with Mabel Normand as the star, made its first local appearance. There isn't the slightest doubt that this clever comedy that is full of thrills and laughter is one of the best things the popular Mabe, has ever appeared in as the Palace enjoyed it immensely.

There is a delightful melodramatic tinge, with Mack Sennett showing what a master hand he is at putting wholesome, unrestrained fun into a picture there that rides along to big climaxes with a wonderful thrill. There is sufficient romance and adventure to The Extra Girl to make it a decided hit anywhere.

Miss Normand is the unsophisticated country girl, who leaves her small town atmosphere to bask in the sunlight of the famous Hollywood movie realm, only to find her dream of stardom blasted by a trick that her rival in love had played.

Miss Normand is at her best and moves through every foot of the way with unusual credit, causing high and merry laughter at the way she upsets things in the wardrobe department of the big picture studio.

A fine acting cast all the way gives the star admirable support. This picture is worth seeing and will remain until Saturday.

NEW RECORDS THIS WEEK

His father and mother, the king and queen, have already made records. This week the Prince of Wales talks on a record about Sportsmanship. His presence in America adds interest to a record that immortalizes the voice of this most popular Heir Apparent. On the reverse of the record the Band of H. M. Coldstream Guards play his "own song"—God Bless the Prince of Wales. The royalties from this record, incidentally, go to the British Legion fund.

The daintiness of Lucrezia Bori finds expression in two records by her this week from Argentine and Spanish sources. Milonguita (My Little Troubadour) is plaintively melodious, in the tango manner, with some lovely 'cello counterplay. Both songs, in fact, have delicate and elusive dance-rhythms. La Majo Discreto (The Gallant Lover) being a fine example of the "tonadilla," a popular Spanish dance song, quite different from the tango.

Cortot's two records are piano display numbers, a scherzo by Mendelssohn, and Bourree by Saint-Saens. They are swift and difficult, and superb examples of this master's skill at the hammer-like semi-staccato touch. The latter, for the left hand alone, is a magnificent piece of virtuosity.

A new record by Lambert Murphy, his first in some time, records one of the late Victor Herbert's very best pieces of harmonization. It is My Dream Girl, from the musical play of that name, a thing of intense and impassioned beauty. With it is paired Memory Lane, a popular waltz song.

The good work keeps up of recording and recalling some of the best popular songs of a generation ago. Not fragments, but complete records. This week Peerless Quartet takes up the burden with 'Mid the Green Fields of Virginia and The Girl I loved in Sunny Tennessee. Snatches of words and songs have run through our head for years and we welcome this opportunity to fill them out.

A sacred song played by a band is a resonant and inspiring thing. This week Victor Band makes records of four favorites—Lead Kindly Light, O Come, All Ye Faithful, Come Thou Almighty King, and Holy, Holy, Holy. Clear, sonorous and powerful, so recorded that they may be sung to by fair-sized gatherings.

The Little Old Clock on the Mantel is an active fox-trot by Paul Whiteweek. It is a superb record by a dance orchestra, almost overwhelming for its tonal volume and size.

On the other side is Charley My Boy, brilliant and humorous, by Jack Shilkret's orchestra.

Yes, at last we have Wendell Hall's classic, It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo', on a fox-trot record by International Novelty Orchestra, with Billy Murray and Ed Smalle to play the refrain future for this record. The other side is no more serious; Harvard Rag, by the Dizzy Trio, a so-called novelty foxtrot and well named at that.

The post jazz school will get a thrill out of a pair of records from Gosse Olsen and his music and The Virginians this week. My Papa Doesn't Two Time No Time, by the West Coasters is like a 90-mile gale with Billy Murray assisting in full force. Superstitious Blues by the Southerners has trick effects and a difficult sax solo.

Like the calm that follows the storm Vincent Rose and His Montmartre orchestra produce Moonlight Memories, a slow waltz rich in string harmonies, Italian in flavor. Tell Me You'll Forgive Me by International Novelty orchestra, has a violin duet, a vocal refrain, and interesting brass solos.

Broadway Theatre.

Once again the patrons of the Broadway theatre had the pleasure of witnessing a perfect programme of vaudeville and pictures which opened for a three day run at the Broadway theatre yesterday.

Harry Miller and Robert Wilson in "Dance Steps of the Moment" opened the programme with a fast routine of exceptional dancing.

Joe Carroll followed with a series of stories and songs that scored.

Allen and Grace offered some more comedy with high class singing as a surprise.

Laura Ormsbee, assisted by Jack Neal in "Moments of Melody" went over with a bang. There is melody of the melodious kind.

Jean and Jacques closed with a novelty comedy skit entitled "By the Sea." It is a clever routine of acrobatics, contortions and comedy.

The photoplay is Gambling Wives, featuring an all star cast of players.

Broadway Theatre.

Critics who have seen Pola Negri's latest starring picture for Paramount "Lily of the Dust," declare it is like the steeple of a cathedral, the crowning ornament of many years of careful building.

Produced by Dimitri Buchowetzki, who directed "Men," the star's new vehicle is at once the most dramatic and most entertaining of all the pictures in which she has appeared.

In the cast chosen to support Pola Negri in "Lily of the Dust," are figures which have stood for genuine achievement on both screen and stage. Ben Lyon, Noah Beery and Raymond Griffith head the cast.

The picture opens at the Broadway theatre on Sunday next.

Common sense is not so common after all.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Page, widow of James F. Page, died at her home on Maple street during the early hours of Thursday morning after an illness that has been of a serious nature for the past 13 weeks. Mrs. Page was born in Woodstock April 13, 1846, a daughter of John F. and Sarette Bolleat Warren. She had been a resident here and at Brooklyn for many years. She was a member of McGregor, W. R. C., Dorcas Rebekah lodge and of the Baptist church. Mrs. Page leaves a son, Dr. Fred Page, and a daughter, Miss Annie Page, both resident here.

After every series of accidents that happens on the hills of the Providence road, east of here, there is a clamor that "something should be done about it." In a way this is only natural. But it is an interesting reaction. The hills are only partly to blame for the accidents that happen upon them. They are steep and they are slippery in wet weather. But it so happens that they are protected with warning signs such as are always obeyed by careful motorists. The hills are not extraordinary as to length or pitch. They are many hills on state highways in Connecticut more difficult to negotiate. Once more attention is called to the fact that rarely does an accident happen on these hills to any driver acquainted with them. If other drivers elect to disobey warning signs, ignore all precautions for safety and drive according to their own judgment: the local public must harden itself to hearing about accidents on this road. Every day the press tells of grade crossing accidents, at one place or another in the country. Trains do not chase automobiles to get them. The automobiles plump themselves squarely in the face of them. Intrusive drivers will have it their way. About the same situation applies to the hills to the east of Danielson. Strange drivers continue to take a chance. When they do this they come to grief and comparatively few of them do lose the consequences on their own shoulders. The public suffers, more. The troubles of the world are bad great nowadays for anyone to have to spend much time worrying over.

The police have received a letter from the police of Nashua, N. H., asking the Putnam officers to locate certain articles stolen from a lodging house in Nashua by Leo Vannose of Putnam, who escaped from the state reformatory at Cheshire and was apprehended in Putnam several weeks ago. When apprehended here, Vannose admitted stealing the merchandise in Nashua and told where he had checked a suitcase containing many of the articles and where he had pawned others. These have been recovered by the Nashua police, but it is said that several articles, valued for their personal associations, are missing and it is these that the Nashua police wish to recover if possible. As Vannose was taken to Cheshire the day following his apprehension here the letter has been forwarded to the authorities of the reformatory.

All the stores closed Thursday afternoon and business was at a standstill in the business section. Most of these having a half holiday spent it at Woodstock fair. Next Thursday afternoon is the last half holiday until July, 1925. This is in accordance with a vote of the merchants of the city who, after a year's trial of a Thursday half holiday all the year round, found that it was not a success from the standpoint of the store owners.

The Putnam police have three bicycles in their possession awaiting owners. The wheels were found covered with a piece of canvas near the gas house, on Ayer street. While it is believed that the bicycles are stolen property, no reports of a theft or of the loss of bicycles has been received at police headquarters. A woman near the gas house saw the bicycles and called the find to the attention of Captain of Police Jarvis. The wheels are all in good condition and on each bicycle is a tool bag filled with tools.

What about gas and electric lights and water service for South Killingly? That was seriously asked Thursday with a view to publication. The problem is respectfully referred to the corporations that furnish such service. There is heavy expenditure attached to supply the service. Another question: Is South Killingly willing to pay the price?

Wild cherries, wild grapes (in many cases not ripe) are being hungrily sought throughout this section by those who would make wince against another year's requirements. Picking stuff green is now an essential if one would beat the other fellow.

How many votes is LaFollette going to get in this town? That's a question —but many people are asking it these days. By the way what does LaFollette stand for, by and large? If the voters consider that, maybe they may decide to vote for some of the other promisers.

Piles

Can't Be Cured From the Outside. External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through the stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., set at work some years ago to find a real internal Pile remedy. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It's easy to take, and can always be found at Lee & Osgood's, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

The club has a membership of over 300. Of the 314 applicants to be made voters, 163 are women and 151 men and the large majority are republicans.

When the attention of members of the citizens' committee, empowered to make plans for the organization of a new bank in Putnam, was called to the despatch in The Bulletin Thursday, stating that the petition of the committee for a charter of the Citizens National bank of Putnam had been granted by the comptroller of the currency, there was no surprise manifested. It was stated that no official notification of the granting of the charter had been received from Washington and until such official notice was received no action would be taken. The fact that the charter carries the provison that the new bank shall take over the sound assets of the old bank and shall purchase the bank building and equipment at market value was likewise no surprise to members of the committee.

This leads to the belief that these features had been discussed and in all probability agreed to as some of the numerous meetings held by the committee with H. H. McKee, representative of the comptroller, who recently returned to Washington.

The bank building is carried on the books of the old bank at $98,000 with $6,000 more for fixtures, etc., which would bring the total amount to be paid for the institution to $104,000. This would have to be financed in some manner, either by issuing more stock or possibly by a holding company of some kind. The proposition does not seem to be bothering members of the committee, however. While they are still saying little about their future plans it is apparent that they are prepared to go immediately to work to organize a directorate and working force, as soon as officially assured that a charter has been granted.

Apparently the effort to have the new bank take off of the receivers' shoulders the estate of Cashier G. Harold Gilpatric at a fixed sum has been abandoned, as no mention is made of this feature. There has been some talk in the past that, whether the old bank was reorganized or a new bank formed, the banking organization would be required to purchase Gilpatric's estate and $250,000 has been rumored as the price. Attorney E. C. Morse, counsel for the Gilpatric family, stated that Gilpatric's estate would show an equity of $260,000. While there have been rumors that it was not making such a showing as anticipated, Attorney Morse is emphatic in his reiteration that this substantial sum will be realized for the creditors, including the bank.

WOODSTOCK'S ANNUAL FAIR PROVES CLEAN AND VARIED

(Special to the Bulletin)

Woodstock, Conn., Sept. 18—Following a custom—now established as a rite—many hundreds of people cheated by the weather of Wednesday, flocked to the fair grounds here Thursday to attend the annual exhibition of Woodstock Agricultural society. There was nothing new in the way of attractions for this annual exhibition, a fixture for well over half a century. It may be said that new attractions are not necessary. The fair has established itself. It needs no special propaganda, nor boosting, or other artificial means of a later day to be a success. It just stands on its own legs, its reputation, it may be said, for so many years being justified to make worthy of the patronage that always comes to it.

There was everything Thursday that goes to make a country fair—from clam chowder to horse racing; from exhibits of cattle and poultry and fruit and dairy products to the midway attractions and the hundred and one other things that a fair is expected to provide.

The attendance was representative of about every town in the country and some towns neither in the state nor county. People flocked there, with their automobiles, from a hundred miles, more or less, to enjoy a good day in the open, to talk with their friends and regale themselves with a review of all the exhibits offered for inspection.

The fair lacked nothing this year in its display of products of the farm. Woodstock's apple displays would shame about any other town in the county, neither was it wanting when it came to the showings of honey, butter, other dairy products, shown in abundance at the annual exhibition.

Cattle owners who exhibited at the fair were put to an excess of trouble this year on account of holding over their entries for a second day's showing, as was required of them Thursday, when the animals remained in their pens, following the heavy rains of Wednesday, which was forecasted as the big day of the fair. This sacrifice was made, however in the interest of patrons of the fair.

Many conceived the idea that the fair would not be held Wednesday because of the northeast storm, but so many came, a thousand or more, that it was decided to go ahead with the exhibition and even the horse races were run off. The pacers and trotters figured as mud-larks in the going, but the drivers and owners would not hear of postponement for they have other places to go, and the season is growing short, so they insisted on racing for such money as there was in sight. J. Carl Witter of Danielson acted as starter in his usual efficient manner. The results of the races for the fair are appended to this story.

Fakirs in numbers were at the fair. Perhaps the term "fakirs" should not be used here. Sometimes a fakir is regarded as a person who wants 300 per cent profit. At Woodstock the people who had the concessions were happy to get about half that. There was nothing illegal about the concessions to disturb anyone. There was the usual display of blankets and barkers, and all that sort, but none of the skin games of the fair days of 20 years ago. That kind of a cleanup doesn't go any more. The Woodstock Agricultural society plays clean and the state officers back them up in their plan of procedure. State police officers were on the grounds during the exhibition and, it may be said, little got by them.

Woodstock had a wonderful display of fruit from its own orchards this year. Its dairy products were also a feature of the showing made. Its cattle and poultry and its oxen and many other assets of rural life left no one concerned about Woodstock's future. Woodstock is a safe and sane town, clinging to the essentials of life, producing the things that make life possible. It has not gone in for the frills and fancies. It is glorious old Woodstock, better now, if one may be permitted to say so publicly, with all the advantages of recent decades, than it ever could have been had no science and culture contributed to the winning of its present place in the sun.

County Agent Davis of the Windham County Farmers' association, which has done so much to advance Woodstock's agricultural interests, as has been the case with every other town in the county, was at the fair. The Farmers' association booth had literature to pass out and other things that will aid in an advantageous way in making country towns a bigger asset to themselves nd to the country than otherwise would have been the case.

A message to every housewife who wants better cooking

WHETHER or not your family enjoys good cooking, depends on your range.

Years of cooking experience count for nothing if your range is cranky and inefficient, for you cannot depend on it.

With a Crawford in the kitchen, to be a good cook you need only follow the cook book. The Crawford does the rest. When a recipe calls for a "slow oven," Crawford Single Damper Control makes the oven obey your command.

Come in and see the Village Crawford. It has plenty of capacity to give "better cooking" to the family of average size. It is finished in black, or gray enamel, as you choose, and if you depend on your range for hot water, it can be fitted with a special reservoir.

Come in this week!

WILL OF REV. HUBERT DAHME WAS REJECTED IN PROBATE

Bridgeport, Sept. 18. — Probate Judge Paul L. Miller today rejected the will of Rev. Hubert Dahme, pastor of St. Joseph's church, who was shot and killed here February 4. The will, disposing of an $50,000 estate, named Mrs. Nellie Hines, the priest's housekeeper as chief beneficiary.

The rejection of the will which was executed in England several years ago while Father Dahme was on a visit to Europe, was based upon the failure of interested parties to find the witnesses to the instrument.

DANGEROUS ROAD CONDITIONS.

Hearty endorsement must be given to any plan which operates for the safety of those using the highways, and particularly when it accomplishes the removal of such things as signboards, a hillside of brush or even roadside banks that obstruct the view of intersecting roads or railroad tracks.

It is well recognized of course that the corner bearing obstructions calls for all the more care. If it is impossible to get a clear view of an intersecting street there is good reason for using more caution. If there is a sharp corner to be turned, the fact that it is impossible to see whether others are coming in the opposite direction calls for the negotiation of that corner in a manner that will give protection both to self and to others. If there is a railroad track in front its presence is always indicated, and whether there is a warning bell, a flagman, gates, a light signal or just the customary "Stop, Look and Listen" self protection should prompt a respect for that danger, whether a view of the track is obstructed or not. If it is obstructed all the greater care should be taken.

There are points where buildings obstruct the view of streets and railroads where elimination is impossible, but when there are embankments which require some grading, brush-covered hills, ledges which could be easily reduced and billboards which actually make conditions dangerous there is justification for the demand that they be eliminated.

There can be no disposition to remove dangers just for the sake of making speedways of the highways. There is nevertheless the best of reasons for providing safety measures wherever possible. Such aids as can be given to the prevention of accidents and the saving of life are being more and more recognized as the elimination of public nuisances. Abatement of the conditions referred to will not overcome the careless and reckless drivers but the marked contribution to safety, and today that is the big demand on the public thoroughfares.

TAXING GASOLINE.

Out in Ohio they haven't as yet become reconciled to the gasoline tax. It is getting opposition from the automobile associations, which put forth the claim that if there is a tax on gasoline there should be a reduction in the registration charge to offset it. The Cleveland Times in voicing its opposition to the gas tax points to the "huge and increasing surplus in the state treasury at the present time" and declares that this condition is "a constant invitation to tax spenders." It has no objection to the shifting from one form of tax to the other and suggests that all license fees might be reduced to $5 and then the gasoline tax might be placed at two cents a gallon.

Ohio doesn't appear to have hit upon the wise plan which is followed in this state of applying the gasoline tax entirely to the improvement of the state highways. That is a provision that should be incorporated with every gasoline tax that is laid. The highway systems are built at large expense. The outlay for new roads, better roads and maintenance is not only large but constantly increasing. It grows because there is a demand for it. Motoring is dependent upon good roads and the travel on the highways is almost exclusively that of motor vehicles.

It is only fitting therefore that those who use the highways the most should bear the burden of the expense of building and maintaining. The use of the state roads is represented by the consumption of gasoline for motor vehicles. Thus if those with motor cars pay a gas tax they are providing the funds for their own good when such funds are devoted exclusively to road work, and those, who consume the most gasoline pay the largest gas tax.

Ohio may fight the tax the same as other states have. There may be reason for it if the proceeds go into the general treasury. But with the dedication of such income to the making of better roads the motorists are simply paying for the special privileges they receive. Connecticut has no difficulty in collecting its gas tax and it is regarded as resting upon the proper shoulders.

EATING TOADSTOOLS.

When toadstools are eaten in mistake for mushrooms there is certain to be acute and serious illness and the chances are good that the undertaker will have to be called. It is simply a case of mistaking what is poisonous for what is safe to eat. It is like keeping a deadly poison in a medicine chest with other remedies and taking a dose in the dark because the bottles feel alike.

Eating toadstools for mushrooms is by no means new. There are some every year who furnish business for the doctors, undertakers and clergy because of their cocksureness, when the liability of a mistake has been demonstrated over and over again unless those picking the fungi for consumption qualify as experts, and be able to distinguish between the edible and the poisonous.

It is most frequently the case that reliance is placed upon the judgment of those who pick the toadstools to the extent that several participate of the poisonous dish and an entire family, or the family and guests, are made violently sick. Somehow it appears that the liking for the dish is such as to cause too little care to be exercised on the side of safety. The unwillingness to sacrifice a meal of mushrooms rather than take a chance apparently doesn't occur to the over sure. And yet there is the fatal ending of just such cases which stands out prominently after such a dinner only to be quickly forgotten when the next chance to eat toadstools bobs up.

Those who have been so fortunate as to go through the experience of eating only enough of the toadstool dishes to make them sick can be relied upon to steer a clear course from such food in the future. There are still those who insist upon personal experience, even though it's fatal, and it is deplorable that they will set up their mistaken judgment on such matters, involving such a penalty, for the comparatively minor pleasure involved even though the fungi should prove to be edible. Where there's a doubt, however slight, the wise individual will play safe by foregoing the chance to make the supreme sacrifice.

AVOIDING TECHNICALITIES.

Under the provision of the United States Constitution it is stipulated that electors cannot hold "an office of trust or profit under the United States." Just how inclusive that is has not been definitely determined. Whether it would embrace officials and directors of national banks is a question, but as long as there is a question and there's a possibility that some embarrassment might result when the members of the electoral college get down to business, the thing to do is to guard against it.

That is just what has been done in the decisions reached by Charles F. Brooker of Ansonia, Frank T. Maxwell of Rockville and Frederick W. Mercer of New London to resign their offices in national banks. They have been nominated by the state republican convention as electors, and it doesn't appear but what other bank directors in the past have filled a similar position. But this year when so determined an effort is being made to throw the election into congress it is considered wise to observe the safeguard of not violating any constitutional provision, intentionally or otherwise.

It is simply a case of meeting a situation. It is rather far fetched to believe that they can be considered as holding positions under the United States within the meaning of the provision. But technicalities can cause a lot of trouble whether they succeed in their purpose or not. When the electors decide to resign their bank positions they remove the possibility of such technicalities being employed to make trouble. It is a case where the possibilities of trouble have been anticipated, and the trouble is removed.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Predictions as to contests in the state democratic convention appear to have been quite as far from picturing the actual outcome as were those concerning the republican convention. It is entirely possible that the predictions lead to a concentration of effort that would make contests impossible, that convincing arguments were advanced at the right time to prevent factional disturbances on the floor of the convention, but from the surface everything appeared harmonious at Hartford.

The democrats have named a ticket, representing the various sections of the state, which is unquestionably made up of true and tried partisans. It has not named for its candidates men who are prominently known throughout the state, or men who have been conspicuous in political activities. For the most part they may be said to be unknowns, though that isn't to be regarded necessarily as detrimental. They stand, however, as dark horses without having been forced upon the convention by contest or deadlock. Such, there is reason to believe, is due to the fact that it is a time when candidates are being presented with the idea of having a ticket in the field, instead of being overburdened with confidence that they will be elected. The democratic convention has unquestionably picked men of good character, strong partisans and good citizens, but as such there is no argument furnished for the changing of the present excellent control of state government now in the hands of the republicans.

The outstanding features of the democratic convention are the harmony of the session and the brevity of the platform.

READJUSTMENTS

"I've just run in on my way home from down town to ask you to give first aid to the injured," said the first girl, as she dropped onto her friend's couch. "I'm almost a wreck. Such a day!" She threw off her hat and pushed back her short curly hair. "Don't I look exhausted?"

"You do look a trifle tired and hot," said the second girl.

"Of course I do," the first girl went on. "I'm fagged out! You see I attempted early this morning to do some shopping before the heat of the day. The moment I got on the street car the motorman started it with a jerk and I was thrown against a man whose face was hidden behind a newspaper. Just imagine my feelings when I heard somebody say, 'Take my seat, Adelaide,' and I knew it was Jimmy Warren. I felt like fading away."

"But you and Jimmy are the best of friends, aren't you?"

"We were, but he — well, he did something I didn't like, and—well we haven't been seeing anything of each other for some time. And there I was, catapulted right at him! I don't think it was very nice of him to laugh."

"Did you take his seat?"

"What else could I do? But I was most dignified, or at least I tried to be. But my hat was jammed and my barrette had let my hair down over my eyes. He stood smiling at me as I adjusted the barrette and hat.

"'You're all right now,' he said.

"'Thank you,' I answered frigidly. 'Oh, here's my corner,' and I rose and left the car with him following me, much to my annoyance.

"He didn't seem to grasp the idea at all. Helen, that I wished to avoid his company. I turned into the first shop I saw, saving a cool good-by, and he came right in with me. To my great chagrin it was a candy store.

"'Did you want something here, Adelaide?' he asked and I replied stiffly that I was getting some cocoanut bars. They were the first things I saw.

"'Coconut!' he exclaimed. He knows my taste for sweets exactly.

"'They're not for me,' I explained. 'They're for a sick friend.'

"'Really?' he said with a grin that simply maddened me, and I remarked that I wouldn't detain him any longer.

"'Oh, I have all the time there is,' he said calmly. 'If you're going to walk the rest of the way downtown I'd like to accompany you this lovely summer morning.'

"'I don't think it's lovely at all,' I told him. 'I think it's hot and disagreeable,' I said, and then he quickly remarked that I must have a cool drink, and he ordered a chocolate frappe with almond, which he knows I simply love. Without making a scene I couldn't refuse it, so in my fury I thrust a spoonful of it into my veil.

"I had forgotten I was wearing a veil—you know they're getting awfully styling again, but I hate them—and of course that chocolate frappe—well, I saw myself in the mirror over the soda fountain, and I certainly was a sight. The clerk snickered, but Jimmy stood perfectly impassive apparently unconscious of my mishap. If he had laughed, I should never have spoken to him again."

"A man like that ought to be forgiven anything," said the second girl. "It would have made a sphinx laugh. But that was this morning—hours ago! Why so tired now?"

"Well you see after that I had to let him walk downtown with me, and we got to talking, and we walked and walked, way over the link, down Lakeshore drive, and up into Lincoln park, and we had lunch in a tearoom up there, and we walked back to the loop because Jimmy had to go to his office.

"I simply must go home now, and have a nap. You know this is my night to play for the settlement children's outdoor folk dancing, and I am just wondering whether you couldn't take my place this once. I don't see how I can go when—"

"When Jimmy is coming tonight, with a ring. I get you. Of course I'll give first aid. Run home and get some beauty sleep."—Chicago News.

SOME POINTS ON UPLAND BIRD SHOOTING

No better bird stands or flies than the grouse. We know this chap, yet no one knows all his tricks. Hunt him fairly and you will earn every bird you get. Grouse shooting will take you to the white birch thickets, alder, and tamarack cover, up steep hillsides and into defense undergrowth of all kinds. Look along old logging roads, in clearings, and along the banks of thickety creeks. It's a case of shoot and miss; don't get discouraged. Shoot and repeat. Some of these old birds have been raised on powder and shot. Keep banging away, this to help his education, and some day an unfortunate bird may run into the charge. Grouse flush in a startling manner. The first thunderous rush is upward, and then—ask the old-timer. Shoot high. First learn their habits by going over the ground in the summer and early fall. They are easy to find if you haven't a gun. They are cunning; they run and hide and will lie close. They like dried huckleberries, cranberries, wild grapes, oak, and beechnuts. Look where these abound. Best time, early morning, cold or stormy weather. Load for twelve gauge, three and one-quarter drams, or twenty-six grains. One and one-eighth chilled sevens. Important—take along plenty of shells and good nature.

Wild turkey has been called the king of birds, maybe because kings of all kinds are getting scarcer every day. The best gun is a small-bore rifle and the best call is made from the wing bone of the turkey. Early morning while they are feeding or at evening when they roost are the best times. Not so hard to hit if you can find them.

The pheasant is a bird of open or bushy country, river valleys, meadows, and marshes. He is an elusive, running bird and hard to knock down. Sometimes they lie close, but can run like hares. In cross shots aim well ahead. Look along a line of fences where bushes, brambles, weeds and heavy grass have grown, in the woods and in swamps. It is almost impossible to find the birds without a dog. He should be a fast, wide-ranging animal of the type used for quail although a staunch slow dog that hunts with his head high, makes close points and covers his field rapidly. For twelve gauge use three and one-quarter drams or twenty-six grains, one and one-eight ounce chilled either six or seven.

Prairie chicken is hunted with bird dog, being walked up and shot over point on the rise. They frequent fields early in the morning and evening; midday, near sloughs. Use same load as for the pheasant.

It's well enough to talk about birds and how to shoot them. Give a thought now about propagation and the part that you must play in it. We can't squander our capital and expect to draw dividends nor can we shoot off the game and expect it to come back automatically. If upland shooting is to continue it will be because you and I are doing our share to make it so. Your duty and obligation as an individual and a club is to set the scene for more game, game that you will buy and put out for raising under proper conditions. Each club should lay plans to propagate at least ten upland birds per member. Arrange for winter feeding by planting suitable grain and berries, see that the cover is right and plentiful. Equally important, be concerned with the fact that vermin must be destroyed. It will be useless to attempt to raise wild game birds unless protection is given against the predaceous creatures that menace their very existence.

A few sportsmen organized in the right kind of club can interest one or more friendly farmers by agreeing to pay them for their labor, in seeing that certain acreage is set aside for the purpose of raising wild game birds. The eggs can be purchased and easily hatched by native chickens and the young mothered until the time when they can take care of themselves. Game for sportsmen must be supplied by sportsmen if there is to be any game. A small assessment from each member and this money invested in game will bring an abundant supply for all concerned. In the second and third years these birds will multiply in satisfactory quantities. Play the game fair—take only fair shots—try to avoid making a cripple, and if you do, hunt it down—shoot your birds on the wing.

In wing shooting hold a trifle low for a bird apparently flying straight away from the gun, hold just above a bird rapidly rising without side motion, hold the game for a bird going straight away and close to the ground, hold above and ahead of birds rising and going to right and left; hold ahead and below birds going to right and left and lowering; hold dead on an incomer and shoot quick; hold ahead of birds passing above you. Never check the even swing of the gun in a quartering shot—and then repeat the third commandment.

Upland shooting takes you to the fields and woods when nature is zestful and restful. As the season advances the mystic coloration of forest, field, and dell is an inspiration to any jaded mind—the tramp with gun and dog, game bag empty or full, is time well spent.—Norwich Fish and Game Association.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The post of American charge d'affaires at Peking, which has been given added importance by the Chinese crisis, is held by Edward Bell, a man of long and varied experience in diplomacy. Mr. Bell has been in the diplomatic service of the United States for the past fifteen years. A native of New York City, he received his A. B. degree at Harvard in 1904 and then spent several years in travel and study abroad. In 1909 he entered the government service and was assigned to the post of vice-counsul general in Egypt. Two years later he became secretary of the American legation in Teheran, Persia, and this post he filled at the time when Morgan Shuster was attempting to reorganize the finances of that country. In recent years, following service in Havana and London, Mr. Bell has held several posts in the Far East and was one of the secretaries to the American delegation to the Limitation of Armaments Conference in 1921. He has been stationed at Peking since 1922.

Bowman Walked Far for Food

After his high hopes had been dashed by a rude hotel manager, John M. Bowman had to struggle for a living even walking miles to secure food.

At his home in Toronto, Ont., he was sent by his grandmother to carry shavings in a bag. Other boys laughed at him, but he needed the 25 cents compensation.

After obtaining a public school education, he decided to be a hotel man, and worked in a little summer resort in the Adirondacks. At the close of the season he resolved to go to New York and make his way upward in a large hostelry.

With a letter of introduction from a rich traveler to the manager of one of the largest hotels in New York, he gave up his position and enthusiastically started for the big city. He mailed the letter to the New York manager and requested permission to call. No response came. After waiting a few days he wrote again and asked the return of [illegible]. And that was not even answered.

Alone and without funds, he suffered many hardships. He drove a truck, broke saddle horses, became a riding teacher. At first his pay was so small that he walked from uptown to downtown, New York, to find food that was both substantial and inexpensive.

Deciding that he wanted to work his way up in the Holland House, he induced the proprietor, Gustav Baumann; to give him a chance. He accepted any work offered and finally climbed to the position of secretary to the proprietor.

Baumann and his company decided to build the Hotel Biltmore, and Bowman was slated to be its manager. A few months after it was ready for occupancy Baumann died. Bowman so convinced the directors of his ability that he was chosen permanent manager of the hotel and also president of the company.

Bowman's success soon was known. He headed companies that built the Commodore, the Belmont, the Murray Hill and other hotels. Then he constructed hotels in Florida, Cuba, California and elsewhere. Today, at 48, he is at the head of six hotels in New York and nearly as many more in other cities.

CHILD TRAINING

"Mother, Did You Buy Me Something?"

Marion Brownfield

"Mother, did you buy me something?" asked a little girl pausing from play as her mother came up the front steps.

Whether the mother did buy her five year old daughter something on that shopping trip is really unimportant. The simple question asked indicates, however, a point that should be considered in child training. Children are naturally eager and expectant, but parents, and mothers especially, might well ask themselves the question, "Am I training my child to expect too much?"

We owe it to our children to give them the necessities and as many of the comforts as possible. But "buy me something" can easily mean a luxury that is foolish and extravagant. That this little girl did not ask difinitely for any particular thing, is a pretty certain indication that she did not lack any of the ordinary comforts of life. She undoubtedly had happy birthdays and Christmases. She had pretty clothes and the average number of toys. But "buy me something" had become a habit—to be indulged because a mother had been over indulgent! With the best of intentions, parents make a practice of bringing gifts to their children when they have been away. If it has been a long trip, and the youngsters have been lonely and have had to exert themselves to maintain certain standards of "being good," rewards are justifiable. But beware lest rewards degenerate into bribes!

Contrast with the child above the twelve year old girl who rushed in from school to find her mother still away shopping. "Isn't mother here yet? she asked. "Goody! Then I can surprise her and have the supper all ready!"

If mothers encourage their children to do little favors for them, especially surprises, the children will enjoy the doing much more than receiving some expensive toy or game. Of course a five year old can't be expected to prepare a meal. But it is surprising how young a child can be taught to help make the home. A five year old boy in one family, for example, has as his special pride the task of putting out clean milk bottles from the kitchen to the front porch. Simple as such a duty is it is meaningful as a character builder.

The disagreeable "buy me something" habit is also often indulged when children are taken away from home. Seldom does the child really long for any particular thing. Usually, he merely wants entertainment at that particular moment. If a mother opens her purse as soon as her boy points to a peanut stand, his demands are likely to be endless. The thoughtful mother who realizes that hunger may also be a reason when candy is teased for, supplies something from home that is wholesome, such as crackers or sweet chocolate. Or perhaps before she starts on an excursion, she gives the kiddies a last minute lunch of bread and milk. A full stomach is not apt to whine. "Buy me something, Mother!"

One must find out, of course, why the child makes a demand. If the mother herself has unconsciously started the habit she at once must start a cure by making a simple but firm explanation: "Mother can't buy you something every time she goes out. She doesn't buy things for herself every time; she would be poor if she spent money whenever she went where there are things to be bought. She gets only what is needed, except that once in a long time she buys you a present."

Fortunately, most children are sensible. It is only when we indulge them unwisely or let them off carelessly with, "Don't bother me now," or "Run and play, Mother's tired," that we are encouraging and fostering the "buy me something" habit.

ALSACE-LORRAINE

Reports of dissatisfaction in parts of Alsace over the suggested operation of French laws relating to churches, do not raise pro-German or pro-French questions but rather emphasize the outstanding spirit of independence that is possessed by both Alsacians and Lorrainers, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Living in a border-land, the people of Alsace and Lorraine have developed an independent spirit not unlike that of the Swiss," says the bulletin. "They are admittedly a mixture of both Gallic and Alemann stocks. Studies of head measurements have shown this. But their language set them apart almost like separate little nations. The speech of the great majority of Alsatians is a German dialect, but it is almost as meaningless to the ears of a Berliner as is French. In Lorraine a French patoirts is widely spoken, but it is an alien tongue to the Parisian.

"The independence of the people has showed itself in regard to the language question under both French and German regimes. Before 1871 some more or less desultory efforts at the compulsory teaching of French in the schools of Alsace were combatted as were the intensive efforts to force the use of modern German after that date.

"So, too, the Alsatian has evidenced his independence by insisting on retaining his own religion, whatever the attitude of the sovereign country of the moment. When France held Alsace and Lorraine before 1871 priests and pastors opposed the teaching of French because of opposition to the French literature of the day. In 1872 the religious leaders found themselves in opposition to the German government over the suppression of religious schools; and today the same people insist to the French that as vigorously on retention of their religious privileges.

"The geographical position of Alsace and Lorraine has largely determined their development and that of their people. They have been cross-roads as well as border countries since Roman days. The Rhine, great traffic artery of Europe farther north, has always been a barrier where it skirts Alsace. Until recent years even part-year navigation was impossible along this stretch of the river. South of Strasburg the Rhine had a labyrinth of courses, sprawling over a wide valley, and creating in flood time a broad region crossing place, and this fact contributed to the importance of that city.

"The low, unhealthy, useless valley of the Rhine along Alsace's eastern border, together with the barren nature of the bench-land inland from the river, condemned this eastern strip of Alsace to almost complete desertion. Even today this Rhineward plain is sparsely settled. The thriving cities of Alsace are situated in a zone from ten to twelve miles inland from the Rhine in the parallel valley of the Ill or slightly westward along the Vosges foothills. Even Strasburg is not a true Rhine city. It was built on the Ill where the latter flows for three miles west of the Rhine, but in recent years the city has grown eastward until it touches the larger stream.

"At Strasburg highways converge from across the Vosges hills, geographical factors which helped to foreordain the growth of an important city at this Rhine crossing. Strasburg's name itself tells the story, for it means 'City of Roads.'

"In addition to the plain along the Rhine Alsace includes the eastern slope of the Vosges. Along the foothills grapes grow to perfection and the region is one of the important wine-producing countries of Europe.

"Lorraine differs from Alsace both in environment and type of population. In fact there is little to group these two areas for political administration save that together they almost completely fill the gap between Germany and France. Lorraine is a plateau, cooler than the lower Alsation plain and given over, so far as its agriculture is concerned, largely to pastures and cattle-raising. The people, not so isolated from France as the Alsatians, have somewhat closer affiliations with Latin culture.

"Industry has claimed considerable areas of both Alsace and Lorraine from their old paths of agriculture. Textile factories are concentrated chiefly in southern Alsace and in some of the Vosges valleys. The predominent industry in Lorraine is metallurgy. Near the Luxemburg frontier are coal deposits and beds of iron ore, the latter the largest in Europe. The coal is in the famous Saar basin. All about this region are concentrated populations of miners and metal workers. Alsace has no iron or coal, but near Mulhausen it possesses potash deposits exceeded in value only by those of northern Germany. These two deposits constitute partially the world supply of this indespensable fertilizer ingredient."

NORWICH GOLFERS WILL PLAY AT HARTFORD

Within the past two months there has been much interest in holding an amateur-pro-tournament in Connecticut and as the P. G. O. of N. E. has assigned only one to Connecticut this year the Goodwin Park Golf club, Hartford, takes this opportunity to stage an amateur-pro one day tournament next on Sept. 22. Attending from this club will be George Falconer, professional of the Norwich Golf club and Dr. F. S. Wilcox, who will team up.

It will be a 36 hole, best ball, medal play, amateur-pro, no handicaps. Play will be in foursomes and pairings may be selected. The committee will aid in completing foursomes upon request but suggests that players endeavor to arrange their own. There will be cash prizes for amateurs. The Goodwin park course, now in excellent condition, is said to be tricky and at times deceptive, preventing low scoring. Par is 37-34—71. The record is 69 made by amateurs.

Thirty-three years ago he removed to Springfield and for the following 13 years he was employed in the jail. Twenty years ago he became a conductor in the employ of the Springfield Street Railway Co. and remained in that capacity until failing health caused him to retire. The body will be brought to Mystic for burial.

PREDICT FREEMAN'S RENOMINATION FOR CONGRESS FROM THIS DISTRICT

On the eve of the second congressional district convention in Willimantic Saturday, the predictions in political circles are that Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London can expect the solid support of New London county for his renomination, with a practically unanimous delegation for him from Middlesex and Windham counties. There is said to be a rumbling of some opposition to come from Tolland county, but Mr. Freeman's supporters are discounting this and say that it will have no effect upon the final result. He has had five consecutive terms in congress.

Delegates to the convention from towns in this county will include the following:

Norwich, Louis H. Geer, Josiah Greenstein, Stephen H. Reeves, and Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury.

New London, C. E. Whittlesey, John M. Mallon, Dr. James R. Linsley and Mrs. Stephen R. Wightman.

Groton, Clark B. Whaley, Louis P. Allyn, John P. Ebbets and Mrs. Charles M. Adams.

Waterford, Thomas B. Woodworth and Anthony Dixon.

Ledyard, J. Edmund Norman and Alice Satterlee.

Old Lyme, H. T. Griswold and W. F. Clark.

Stonington, Henry A. Stahle, Calvin A. Snyder, John H. McNally and Charles J. Ryan.

Colchester, S. H. Kellogg, Mrs. George T. Loomis, Max Cohen and Abraham Agranovitch.

Montville, Hubert Dart and Pansy B. Dart.

Lisbon, George Allen, Sr. and Harold De Celles.

Lebanon, George E. Briggs, George H. Hoxie, 2nd, Edward H. McCall, Jr., and David Walsh.

Griswold, Felix Hunter and C. E. Maynard.

North Stonington, Irving M. Wilner, Eugene Bill, Henry B. Johnson and John Geer.

Voluntown, Alexander Tanner and Howard James.

The convention will be called to order in the Willimantic town hall at 11.45 (standard time) by Charles A. Gates, sheriff of Windham county, as chairman of the congressman committee, Charles B. Whittlesey of New London is expected to place Congressman Freeman's name in nomination. In addition to the nomination of a congressional committee for the two years ensuing. A luncheon will follow immediately after adjournment of the convention.

East Hampton Outing

The annual outing of the Middlesex County Republican club will be held at East Hampton Saturday afternoon. The event always finds all of the state leaders in attendance, consequently there will be a hasty exodus from Willimantic at the conclusion of the congressional convention of delegates and others towards East Hampton. Congressman Freeman will endeavor to be present, and Senator Ernest E. Rogers, nominee for state treasurer, has already accepted the Middlesex club's invitation.

First Elected in 1914

Congressman Freeman was first elected to the 64th congress in 1914 defeating the late Bryan F. Mahan of New London by a plurality of 3,985. Two years later he was returned with a plurality of 2,173 over former Mayor Daniel Dunn of Willimantic. In 1918 he defeated Frank P. Fenton of Windham former minority leader in the state house of representatives, and who is prominently mentioned for the Democratic nomination this year, with a plurality of 3,734. In the landslide of 1920, Congressman Freeman ran up a plurality over his Democratic opponent, Thomas R. Murray of New London of 18,564, or nearly equal to Murray's entire vote which was 20,868. Two years ago Freeman defeated Raymond Jodoin of Sprague with a plurality of 6,752.

He is ranking member of the house rivers and harbors committee and stands high in the party councils in Washington. His record for the past two years shows unfailing support of the administration, and his allegiance to President Coolidge has been unswerving. Through his vote for increasing the salaries of postal employees he has enlisted the support of every postal worker in the district, which is an item of no small consequence in a congressional election.

Reports reaching the congressman's campaign headquarters from republican leaders and political students about the district indicate that the attitude of the congressman on matters of import before congress during the past two years, and his consistent support of the president will result in his polling the largest vote of his history in the November election, provided, of course, that he is nominated.

PAYS $25 FINE ON RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 18.—Charles Baral, 45, of 76 School street, Norwich, was presented before Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton in the Waterford town court this morning, charged with reckless driving. The evidence was so strong against Baral that a fine of $25 and costs, the latter amounting to $19, was imposed. Baral did not possess funds sufficient to cover the penalization, so he was committed to jail. This afternoon, however, a friend came to his rescue and went to the jail and paid the fine.

Baral was operating an automobile, owned by Mrs. Henry Allen, also of 76 School street, Norwich, and with Thomas McCarthy, 169 Hamilton street, as a passenger late last night from Norwich to New London. When the machine reached a point near Quaker Hill it was taking a zig-zag course and traveling at a high rate of speed. Before Baral concluded stunts with the car it encountered an automobile owned and driven by Joseph C. Worth, 62 Broad street, Norwich and with John Bausher, Montclair, N. J., as a passenger on its way from this city to Norwich. The two cars came together with great force and both were extensively damaged. The state police barracks at Groton were notified and Officer Giles F. Watson, who was assigned to the case, ordered Baral to appear in court today.

Several games were played among which was Uncle Wiggily, the prizes being won by Joseph N. Hastedt and Rose Peckham. Marie Beausoleil won the prize for the donkey game. The children also had a peanut hunt, prizes being won by Elizabeth Smith and Lucy Greenman. The hostess was assisted in serving the little guests by Mrs. William R. Hastedt and Miss Frieda Blinderman. Those present were Elizabeth Smith, Lucy Greenman, Jean Spencer, Rose Peckham, Louise Manchester, Marie Beausoleil, Agnes Hastedt, Eleana Hastedt and Jack Waters, David Geopfert, Joseph Hastedt, Raymond Wheeler, Conrad Ruhl, Nicolas Conaty, John Morley.

NEW SUBMARINE INSIGNIA ARE SEEN AT THE BASE

The submarine insignia, announcement of which was made some time ago by the bureau of navigation, may now be seen decorating the manly bosoms of the duly qualified officers and the sleeves of similarly qualified men on the submarine base at Groton and attached boats. Not only the idea of thus recognizing the special training and skill of submarine personnel is approved by all hands, but the appearance of the emblem meets with general applause. The sporting dolphins are a bit awesome in comparison with the small bow of the undersea craft, but so long as these mythical monsters are friendly one need not worry as to their size, and the effect of the badge is impressive.

It has been whispered that the hope is now held out that the hazards and discomforts as well as the specialized skill of submarine officers will be further recognized by an increase in pay similar to, if not commensurate with, that enjoyed by the birdmen.

HUSBAND SEEKS DIVORCE, WIFE HAS CROSS COMPLAINT

The contested divorce suit brought by William J. Prescott of Waterford against Florence Winters Prescott went on trial before Judge Leonard J. Nickerson in the superior court at New London. The couple were married June 9, 1877, and the plaintiff alleges that his wife deserted him on March 11, 1821, and refused to return. He asks custody of four minor children, Florence Elizabeth, aged 6; Phyllis Lorraine, aged 5; Harold William, aged 4, and Donald, aged 3.

In a cross complaint, Mrs. Prescott alleges that her husband deserted her in March, 1921. She asks divorce, custody of the children, alimony and allowance for support of the children. Attorney Arthur T. Keefe appeared for Mr. Prescott, and Attorney Clayton B. Smith represented Mrs. Prescott.

CONNECTICUT SANATORIA ARE EQUAL TO ANY

Connecticut sanatoria for treatment of tuberculosis are the equal if not an improvement over any in the world, Dr. Stephen J. Maher, chairman of the state tuberculosis commission said at New Haven Thursday. Dr. Maher has just returned from a sojourn abroad where he visited similar institutions in Switzerland and other countries. Even the sanatoria of Switzerland, while widely known, are not the equal of the Connecticut institutions so far as beneficial results are concerned Dr. Maher said. The high altitudes of Switzerland have not health qualities equal to those in this state, he declared.

NORWICH TEXTILE MILLS REPORTED ON FULL TIME

Norwich textile mills are operating on full time, according to the September federal industrial employment bulletin of the department of labor, but the closing of one cotton mill has made a surplus in the labor market.

The special Norwich survey follows:

"All textile mills are running full time, with the exception of one cotton mill, which is closed, affecting about 450 workers, and there is not sufficient employment in other lines to absorb this surplus. The construction of a $100,000 nurses' home gives work to many of the resident building tradesmen."

A slight improvement in the metal trades in certain sections of the state is noted in the general state survey, which together with that of the principal cities, follows:

General—Some textile mills are closed temporarily and others are working part time. Slight improvement noted in the metal trades in certain sections. Increase in the number of working hours in the thread and silk industries reported during August. Building continues active employing a large number of craftsmen. Farm labor conditions are satisfactory throughout the state.

New Haven industrial district, including Ansonia and West Haven—All plants are operating, although a number are on part-time schedules. There is a surplus of workers who are unable to find employment locally. Metal-buckle industry on part-time schedule in West Haven. Building activities employ many tradesmen, with plenty of men available to meet any demands.

Bridgeport—All plants are running, some on part time. Farm work is absorbing a large number of those released from the factories. Building and construction work slowed down during the past month, with craftsmen working only part time.

Waterbury—Most plants are operating but on a five-day a week basis, and there is a small surplus of skilled mechanics who are unable to find employment. Building program provides work for a large number of tradesmen.

New London—Industrial employment conditions have shown a healthy improvement during the month in the textile and silk industry. Printing-press plant and machine shops have increased their working forces. Building is active and skilled and unskilled labor is well employed.

New Britain—All plants are running full time, with no surplus or shortage of labor apparent. Extensive building operations keep local craftsmen busy.

Bristol—Slackening in the metal industry noted during the past month. One plant is closed, affecting a large number of men, who are unable to find work in other lines. Building program affords employment to local tradesmen.

Winsted—Part time obtains in most of the plants here and one machine shop and one knife factory are closed. Many of the men temporarily released are working on road construction. Farm labor conditions improving.

Middletown — Practically all plants are running but most of them are on part-time schedules. Building tradesmen are well employed, with the local labor supply equal to all demands.

Willimantic—Part time prevalent in the textile industry and one cotton mill is closed. Some of the released workers are finding employment, on the farms. Thread and silk mills increased number of working hours during August.

Stamford — Industry employment improved the past thirty days. One large lock and key factory is working full time, employing a large number of hands. Part-time operations obtain in some metal plants, but those released have been employed in other industries. Building activities keep local craftsmen well employed.

Glastonbury—One underwear factory has closed for a period of two months, affecting about 150 workers. Silverware industry operating on a four-day-a-week schedule.

Danbury—Practically all plants are running and labor is well employed. Considerable highway construction under way affords work to a large number of men. Good farm labor is scarce.

BULKELEY HAS FIRST SCRIMMAGE OF YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Sept. 18.—After a week and a half of preliminary workouts, the Bulkeley football squad under the direction of Athletic Coach, William R. Cann had its first scrimmage of the season this afternoon with more than the ordinary run of success. The scrimmage from every point of view was perfect, and the Orange and Black mentor is highly pleased with the first showing of what is expected to be the first team.

For an even thirty minutes, the first and second teams alternating in possessing the pigskin, moved up and down the field with swiftness when the first team had possession of the ball, but with little head way when the second team assumed the offensive. It was truly a wonderful sight to behold, about a full week's practice only being required to bring the squad about in the fine physical condition that it was this afternoon.

If there is a game more exacting in the manner of effort than football that the writer of the article is unaware. To play football and play it right is exacting of a player's physical condition, and for thirty minutes here this afternoon under a warm sun the Bulkeley first team labored against the scrubs, that would give the onlooker an impression that was entirely false—and that, assuming that the Orange and Black had more than a weeks preliminary practice.

The scrubs had nary a chance to break through the strong defense of the first team forwards, not alone reach the secondary defense men. All attempts to advance the ball into the first teams territory met with disasterous results, and not five yards in all was gained by the scrubs in all their efforts of the afternoon. The work of the regulars was just a contrast to that of the scrubs and four touchdowns were made by the first team in the short space of time they were in possession of the pig skin. Rice, Barry, Henkle and Gray each accounted for six points each, and their runs to a touch down ranged anywhere from twenty to forty-five yards, showing that they were elusive indeed.

There were no changes in the first teams lineup at any one time during the afternoon so well did that body function. The second team saw but one change and that was the replacing of full backs, Nocery in Smith's place. The massing of the Bulkeley backfield behind the opposing tackle, is an emulation of the famous Dobie system and from results against the second team this afternoon, it looked as though the new system is going to bring results in future contests.

Gaining the information that the first scrimmage of the year would take place this afternoon, Head Master Homer Underwood and several members of the faculty availed themselves to witness the first real work of the season. The methods of the new Orange and Black mentor were extoled by the Bulkeley Head Master to a degree that shows that Coach Canty is more than satisfying the "head boss" as the Bulkeley Head Master is called for short.

The teams lined up as follows during the afternoon: First team, Dillon center; Brown and Boos, guards; Watterson and Gavitt, tackles; Daniels and Latham, ends; Henkle, quarter back; Rice, left half back; and Joe Barry at fullback. The second team lined up as follows: Donohue, center; Davis and Vogt, guards; Lonergan and M. Dawt tackles; Graves and T. Brown, ends; J. Gray quarter back; left half back, Harris; McGrath right half back, Smith and Nocery fullback.

SUBMARINE BASE TO MEET U. S. S. WRIGHT SATURDAY

Saturday at 3 p. m. the local Submarine Base will meet the team from the U. S. S. Wright on the Base Athletic Field.

The opening game is with one of the hardest hitting aggregations in the Atlantic Fleet. The Wright has been working hard in preparation for the game. They were the runners up for the Fleet championship last fall, playing the final game with the U. S. S. Wyoming with a score 7-7.

Many of their last years veterans appear in this seasons lineup.

The Base has been holding strenuous practice preparing for the battle Saturday. Lieutenant Carlyle Craig and "Babe" Brown have been concentrating on both offense and defense for the past several practices. Hard scrimmages showed that their work was not in vain. They hope to defeat the Wright by a decisive score, although no stone has been left unturned to eliminate the possibility of their opponents pulling some sultry work for a win.

One of their most difficult tasks is to select the original eleven to start the game. Murphy, Compton, Anderson and Cummings at end rendered it difficult to select which are the best two, Captain Bailey will undoubtedly start at center with May, Hess, Winwire or Graves at guards. Hart may, however start at center. For the tackle positions, Robins formerly of the Naval Station of Philadelphia seems to have his job clinched, although Andrulot the last year Base star and Low, McKeannon and Cummings leave little to choose.

In the backfield Locke of local fame, O'Hara at quarterback, Ancell at fullback, Buscias, Honeycutt, Metska, Carey, Jones and Moser seem to fill the bill as far as speed and line hitting are concerned.

SOCCER LEAGUE OPENS AT NEW LONDON ON SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Sept. 18.—Soccer fans from all over the eastern section of the state should gather here Sunday afternoon, when the first game of the Connecticut Soccer league gets underway, with the New London Rangers opposing the fast Scandia A. C. of Hartford at 2.30. This game will open the newly formed league in this section of the state, while in Bridgeport, Waterbury and Stamford other opening games will find the soccer season well underway before the customary opening which does not come until the latter part of October.

The entrance of the Rangers in the State league was affected by the excellent record of the Rangers last season. It must be remembered that the locals defeated the Capitol City aggregation by three goals to two in their meeting last season but it is doubtful if the Whalers will repeat over such a strong foe.

While other sports in the city are on anything but a sound basis, soccer is destined to come to the fore by the entrance of the Rangers into the new league.

In former years, eastern Connecticut was represented in soccer by a team from Taftville and Willimantic. This year, the Rangers will be the only team to represent this section of the state in the newly formed league, although the Rangers have organized, but one year. A big year is in store for them if they can travel a fast pace in the new soccer league, and from present indications it looks as though the locals will be a tough nut to crack.

SIDE BET OF $200 POSTED FOR GAME ON EAST SIDE TO BE PLAYED ON SUNDAY

After nagging each other since the game last Sunday at the Duwell field between the Married Men and Single Men of the East Side which the Married Men protested on the grounds of poor decisions by the umpire a settlement was made at the Bulletin office last night by representatives of the rival teams who posted one hundred dollars apiece with the sporting editor as a side bet to go to the winner of the return game to be played this Sunday, both teams to use the same lineups as were used last Sunday with Colberg in the box for the Single Men and Coleman pitching for the Married Men.

The Single Men were the first to arrive at the Bulletin with a hundred that contained anything from a twenty dollar bill down to a Canadian dime and as the hands of the clock drew close to eight it began to appear as if the Married Men's talk was only a lot of wind but at about five minutes of eight a well known fan on the East side walked into the office and dragging out a roll that would have strangled a horse, peeled off one hundred dollars and handed it to the editor. Single Men from seven to seventy an the East Side has his bit in the pot it is rumored that only a few were needed to make up the Married Men's hundred and that there still is a lot of Married Men's money on the East side.

While last Sunday's game proved to be a bitter one, according to all present indications, it was only a love affair compared to what this game should be.

Although everyone took the other games good naturedly it will be for blood and of course, the two hundred iron men that Sunday's game will be played for.

When asked what he thought about the coming game Berger Colberg, the veteran twirler for the Single Men, only smiled and remarked, "that if the fans thought he was good last Sunday they want to stick around Sunday and see some real pitching."

Berger has been promised a fat purse if the Single Men win Sunday but should they lose he still will get something but it won't be a fat purse.

His opponent, Coleman as usual solemn and grave refused to make a statement. Although both teams are to use the same men, the lineup will probably be shifted around a bit with the exception of the pitchers.

The Single Men, confident of another easy victory, have engaged Houston's Brass Band which last Sunday made a big hit with everyone present with its snappy music which they played when snappy music was needed. Not to be outdone it is rumored that the Married Men have also engaged a band and while the two teams are battling on the diamond their bands will battle in the stands, not with their fists but with music.

ATHLETICS MAKE CLEAN SWEEP OF SERIES WITH TIGERS

Detroit, Sept. 18.—The second division Athletics made a clean sweep of their three game series with the Detroit Tigers, erstwhile pennant contenders, by winning today's game, 5 to 2. Three runs in the first gave Philadelphia the lead that they held throughout the game. Heimac was wild but kept the Tiger hits scattered. The score:

PHILLIES PROVE TO BE THORN IN DODGERS SIDE

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—Philadelphia baseball today spoiled Pittsburgh's chances to gain on the league leading Giants by holding the visitors to an even split in a doubleheader. After dropping the first game, 6 to 5, the Pirates came back in the second and by a ninth inning rally won, 6 to 3. Carlson opposed Meadows in the box and worked hard to defeat his old teammate. The locals deadlocked the count at 3 runs apiece in the eighth inning but in the ninth Meadows started a rally by singling and another single and two doubles gave the pennant-chasers three runs and the game as the Phillies were helpless in their half of the final inning. GIANTS SPLIT BUT ARE ONLY HALF GAME TO GOOD

New York, Sept. 18.—The New York Giants divided a double-header with Cincinnati today and retained their lead in the National league pennant battle by a half game.

The champions dropped the first game to the Reds by a score of 5 to 3 but rallied to capture the second, 7 to 5.

A four-run rally in the seventh inning clinched the game for the Reds and drove Howard Baldwin, rookie twirler, from te mound after he had pitched brilliantly for six innings. Eddie Roush cleared the bases with a triple and scored the fourth run himself on Bressler's single. Adolfo Luque held the Giants to five hits, three of which were made in the first inning.

Jack Bentley and Eppa Rixey, left handed stars both were hit hard in the second game, the latter being hit by the Giants for fifteen safe blows in the seven innings he worked.

Cincinnati tied the score in the first half of the seventh on successive singles by Duncan, Roush and Walker, but the Giants came back to clinch the game in their half when Gowdy drove in Southworth and Jackson with a single.

WASHINGTON UNABLE TO BREAK TIE WITH YANKEES

Cleveland, O., Sept. 18—Washington made it three straight here today by scoring five runs in the ninth inning and defeating the Indians 9 to 5. George Uhle, who had pitched fair ball up to this time, allowed four hits in the ninth, gave a base on balls and hit two batsmen.

The victory enabled Washington to remain in a tie with New York for first place in the American League race.

Cleveland led for seven innings. The Nats scored their first two runs in the fourth when Wade Leffler a recruit first baseman, making his first appearance in an American League game, and pinch hitting for Russell, singled with Washington runners on second and third. Bluege singled in the eighth with the same bases occupied to tie the score.

Washington had to use three pitchers, both Marberry and Russell being hit hard. Score:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain, New York Giants

None out. Runners on first and second. Batter hits ball back of second base. The sun is in the eyes of both the right fielder and the second baseman. Second baseman drops ball as a result of this sunlight. This fills the bases.

What is a common error that second baseman make when this happens?

All ball fields have sun lights and when a fielder encounters one, he should shield his eyes by putting his glove up over them when handling a fly ball. But when they do drop them, the common fault is for the man who made the error to stand still and talk it over with an outfielder, instead of picking up the ball and hustling it into the infield. A good fast runner will take advantage of any slip of this kind.

WHITE SOX BEAT RED SOX IN FINAL GAME OF SERIES

Chicago, Sept. 18—Chicago drove Fullerton off the mound in the first inning today and made a clean sweep of the series with Boston, 7 to 3. The game was a free hitting affair, with Eddie Collins having a perfect day with five hits in as many times up.

The game was stopped for one minute at 4:30 p. m. while the players and fans stood with bared heads out of respect to Frank Chance, who was buried in Los Angeles today. Chance was manager of both clubs.

DODGERS WIN TWO AND ADVANCE ON GIANTS

Brooklyn, Sept. 18.—Brooklyn won both games of a double header with St. Louis here today 7 to 5 and 4 to 2, advancing to within a half a game of the lead when the Giants split with the Cincinnati Reds.

The first game was a 12 inning affair, the Dodgers emerging victorious after a see-saw session. "Dazzy" Vance, Brooklyn's star Pitcher, was sent in as relief after Ruether had been knocked out and Grimes had suffered an injury to his right arm when hit by a pitched ball. The speed king was credited with his 14th straight victory, his 27th of the season. Incidentally he fanned six batters in the four innings he worked and brought his total up to 234.

Zach Wheat won the game for the Dodgers with a home run in the twelfth, his 14th of the season, with Mitchel on base.

Doak outpitched Dickerman and Dyer in the second game, Dickerman being taken out after the Dodgers had gained a two run lead.

The Cardinals bunched two singles and a triple for their two runs in the seventh while the Dodgers bunched four hits in the third and two each in the fifth and eighth. Rogers Hornsby played a brilliant fielding game in the final, but failed to get a safe hit. The score:

CHINESE JUNK IN THE HOUSATONIC RIVER

Stratford, Conn., Sept. 18.—The first Chinese junk to enter the Housatonic river sailed in today from Bridgeport where it has been undergoing overhauling following its purchase for use as a yacht by Leroy Lewis, Stratford sportsman and head of the H. J. Lewis Oyster company. At 7 p. m., the Stratford Town Criers, an organization interested in the development of Stratford as a residential and manufacturing center, boarded the craft and used it for the first time since its purchase by Lewis.

Those present at a Chinese supper aboard the vessel were Representative Charles E. Wheeler, member of the famous Schagticoke Rattlesnake club and widely known as a fish and game authority in the state; Leo E. Miller, author and explorer, member of Roosevelt's expedition up the River of Doubt; Town Manager R. H. Hunter; Council Chairman Donald Sammis; Major Rex Delacour, D. S. C., who served with distinction in the Rainbow Division in France; C. E. Adams, of the Lake Torpedo Boat company; J. H. Van Yorx, of the Bullard Machine Tool company; Charles W. Collins, of the General Electric company; Layard Savaccol, prominent in American Legion circles; Clark P. Laue, Jr., American Chain company; Mr. Lewis, and Vincent Sexton, newspaperman.

The name of the boat is the "Amoy." It is the first junk ever to sail across the Pacific, through the canal and up the Atlantic seaboard.

PRINCE OF WALES PAID VISIT TO WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 18. — America's financial heart, Wall Street, skipped a few beats today at the sight of the gay young prince of Wales.

Seemingly everybody in the busiest money market in the world dropped all affairs of busines to have a look at Prince Edward. Police reserves from three precinct stations devoted a deal of perspiring effort to make it possible for the royal visitor to get in and out of the swirling crowds that welcomed him to "the street."

It was another busy day for the prince. The crowded programme included luncheon in the buzzing financial district, an inspection of the plant of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, a motor ride through Central Park and a baseball game—the first he had ever seen.

Any hope that h emight escape with but slight public notice on his third New York visit was quickly dispelled after the prince's big car whirled him into lower Broadway about 1 o'clock this afternoon. News of his impending visit had leaked out and filtered into every office room of lower Manhattan's skyscraper colection.

For when the royal car swung into position before 60 Broadway, a horde of men, women and children—the clerks, stenographers and ubiquitous office boys of the nation's money makers—swarmed about. The police hadn't been told about it and the prince's personal attendants were worse than useless in the face of the cheering, churning crowd. Two traffic policemen rushed up, but had to devote their efforts to assisting Wales' guards in keeping the mass from engulfing the automobile.

It looked as though it would be impossible to clear a lane to the office building floor, so the prince, after his first startled moment of surprise, stood in the tonneau, lifetd his grey hat, smiled a rather embarrassed smile and executed a series of jerky little bows in acknowledgment of the ovation.

It was decidedly a feminine crowd. There appeared to be about ten women to every man, all of them using their elbows to good effect.

Four additional uniformed huskies arrived ultimately, and a path was cleared to the door. The prince was quickly pushed into a private elevator and whisked up the 19th floor, to the offices of the North American Company, where he met Harrison Williams, president of the board, whose luncheon guest he was in an intimate nook of the Recess club of the twenty-first floor of the skyscraper.

The crowds did not disperse, standing about to await the prince's return, until the reserves arrived and blocked off the neighboring streets.

IF YOU WOULD WIN

If you would seek a place of power,
And climb aloft to high estate,
Keep moving with the running hour,
While idlers make excuse to wait—
Then rush ahead and swing along
Until you pass the lagging throng!

If you would rise above your kind,
And occupy an honored chair,
Bestir yourself, resolved to find
The lion-heart, to do and dare—
Then face the battle, fit to fight
Your way up to the splendid height!

If you would have the master-skill
That overcomes the toughest task,
Yield to the master's guiding will,
By tearing off your blinding mask—
Then take a grain of sense thus found
And plant it in productive ground!

If you would win the loud applause
Bestowed on men of rare renown,
Proceed to seek the basic cause
Why they can not be trodden down—
Then follow them with faith unfurled
And blaze your name around the world!

—Lilburn Harwood Townsend, in Forbes Magazine.

In the car shops of a southern railroad a frieght box car on which work was begun at 7:30 a. m., was completed, including the painting and stenciling, at 3 p. m. It arrived at a loading platform at 3:51 p. m.; received 150,000 pounds of tobacco and was in transit to Wiston, Salem, N. C., 154 miles away, at 3:56 p. m., arriving there at 4:30 p. m.

Richard Wagner's baton, a thick stick with one end broken off, used by the great composer when he conducted at the musical festical in Albert hall in 1877, was wielded again in the great auditorium by Miss Susan Spain-Dunk, who is one of the few women who have conducted orchestras in London's largest concert hall. Wagner's vehemence before his musicians was such that he broke many batons and one of them came into the possession of Miss Spain-Dunk, who decided to use it just for luck at her debut as a conductor in London.

The maximum difference between the high land and the low in the United States proper is 14,477 feet. According to the official figures. Mt. Whitney, the highest point, is 14,501 feet above sea level, while Death Valley, the lowest point, is 275 feet below sea level. These two points, which are both in California are less than ninety miles apart. The difference between them seems small, however, when compared with the difference between the highest and lowest point in Asia. Mt. Everest rises 29,002 feet above sea level, whereas the shores of the Dead sea are 12,290 feet below it—a difference of 41,292 feet.

JOSEPH KOPP, ONCE NORWICH SALESMAN DIES AT HIS HOME IN NEW LONDON

Mr. Kopp began his business life as a grocery store owner but later took up the sale of pianos, being located for a time in Norwich as salesman for the late A. H. Chappell. He then took over the salesmanship of New London dealers and was quite successful. His wife who was Hattie Lyon, daughter of the late John Lyon survives him. They had no children.

Al Bentley, for many years a printer in Norwich, now residing at Woodmont N. Y., was in the city today renewing acquaintances. His health is good and his appearance indicates that fact.

Theodore Stead, formerly manager of the United Drug store in New London, was presented in the police court today charged with non-support of his wife, Jane Stead. He did not get to a trial on that charge as his counsel asked for a continuance till tomorrow. Stead's lawyer was engaged in the superior court and could not be in the police court this morning. Stead came very much into the limelight of notoriety when he disappeared from New London some weeks ago. Then it was declared that a young woman went with him as a companion.

The girl missing was also an employe in the United Drug company store here. Now Stead denies that the girl went with him. He says the trouble that has come up in his home can be adjusted and that it will be. He is under a bond of $500 to appear in court tomorrow, that bond being an increased sum over the one on which Stead was held Wednesday. Stead disappeared about the 25th of July and remained away till last evening. He was residing in Norwich when he entered upon his service for the United Company.

It is believed that the walk will be continued to Shaw street, as the east side part of the sidewalk on that side of the street is in unsafe condition. The sidewalk on the west side of the street, between Division and Truman street, is also in need of repair and it is possible that a new walk will be laid there.

One hundred weavers, men and wo- men employed at the Edward Bloom Silk Company mill, Garfield street, left their looms this afternoon and went out on strike. The officials of the company claim that they are ignorant of the nature of the grievance that brought about the strike, declaring that no demand for an increase in wages had been made.

It is understood, however, that there is some trouble over working conditions. The mill is operated 24 hours a day, with a day and a night shift. There is some argument over lighting conditions. It is said, and the day employes expect the same pay as the night workers, according to reports. The strikers claim that the company employes from 225 and 250 men and women, but the company denies this, stating that the force does not exceed 200. The workers are not organized.

The strikers gathered in front of the mill after leaving their looms but there was no demonstration. Edward B. Bloom, owner of the mill, is in New York, but is expected back tomorrow when it is believed that the officials and the strikers will come to an agreement. The mill was established here in 1918.

UNCLE SAM'S SOLDIERS IN KILTS AT SAMOA

Uncle Sam has soldiers who go Scotland's Ladies from Hell one better. They wear kilts—and that's all.

They are natives of Samoa in the South Pacific, where the banishment of a chief by the American governor of the islands has caused a protest to be made directly to President Coolidge.

In regard to these picturesque soldiers, a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society quotes a communication from Lorena MacIntyre Quinn as follows:

"The Fita-Fitas, as the native soldiers are called, constitute an important unit in the government of American Samoa.

"It would be hard to find a more picturesque body of men than these, our South Sea Island soldiers. Tall, broad-shouldered, handsome in features, possessing splendid poise, they are admirable types of their race.

"Their fatigue uniform consists of a sort of black kilt with a bright red stripe around the border. Above the waist and below the knees the uniform is 'Nature's Own.'

"A leather belt carrying a dagger on the side holds the kilt or lava-lava in place. A bright red turban is the head-dress.

"For dress uniform the Fita-Fitas wear with the lava-lava a sleeveless white undervest, similar to the X. Y. Z. or A. B. C. garment graphically described in the advertising sections of magazines.

"When the native soldiers were first taken into the service of the United States, a less abbreviated and more conventional uniform was provided them, with the result that they were constantly suffering from colds; so there was a wise reversion to a uniform on the lines of their native dress.

"The Fita-Fitas have municipal as well as military duties. They act as policemen in and about Pago Pago, guard all prisoners in the Pago Pago jail, and frequently are called upon to settle fights at cricket games between rival native villages. The last-named duty is sometimes a severe test for the soldier as an arbitrator, especially when his own village is involved in the controversy.

"The multifold activities of our South Sea soldiers seem rather at variance with the conceptions most of us have about native life in the islands of the South Pacific. We picture a native as lolling under a coconut tree, an obliging wife sitting close by, waving a palm leaf to 'shoo' away the flies from her lord, and food on the branches of near-by trees within easy reach of both.

"When the Governor of American Samoa makes a tour of inspection of Tutuila, he is always accompanied by native soldiers. The Fita-Fita selected to be the orderly on such occasions holds a proud position among his friends.

"The official party is received with great dignity and formality by the chiefs of the villages on these tours, as the Samoans delight in ceremony accorded the Fita-Fitas by the pretty, vivacious Samoan belles of the different villages is always exceedingly cordial. These maidens, with bronze complexions, are as susceptible to the fascinations of the lava-lava uniform as their sisters in America are partial to the khaki and brass buttons.

"The principal feature of the Fita-Fita organization is the band. A little more than a decade ago the natives of American Samoa had never seen a brass instrument, but with infinite patience a band master of the United States Navy eventually taught some of the Fita-Fitas how to play with the result that today the repertoire of the Fita-Fita band covers a wide range of classical and popular airs.

"The favorite form of recreation for the Fita-Fitas is cricket. The English missionaries taught the Samoans the game, and cricket tournaments are gala events in the Islands. Instead of having the regulation eleven on each side, however, the natives have as many as forty or fifty, that a game very often assumes the proportions of a miniature battle.

"The 'rooting' section is the prime attraction at the tournament. The antics and capers of the Samoan 'bleacherites' at their games would make the 'stunts' of the undergraduates at the inter-collegiate game seem tame in comparison. The natives crouch on the side lines beating wooden drums and giving vent to wild chants, easily eclipsing our own college cheers, as far as volume of noise is concerned.

"Courage of a high degree is characteristic of the Samoans. The world looked on with admiration in 1889 when the natives defied the warships of three nations—three American ships one British, and three German. Then, when a hurricane swept the harbor of Apia on March 16, 1889, and destroyed all the assembled warships with the exception of the British Calliope, these 'savages' swam out and rescued their enemies."

MAXIMUM SENTENCE FOR ASSAULTING A POLICEMAN

Waterbury, Sept. 18—Henry Policonis, charged with assault on Patrolman Frank Smith, with intent to kill, was given the heaviest sentence of the September term of superior court when Judge Newell Jennings sentenced him to not less than four nor more than five years in prison, and fined him $1,000 and costs. The patrolman found Policanis in a garage at the corner of South Main and Piedmont streets in the early morning of July 18, and in the struggle preceding the arrest, both men were so badly injured that they had to be sent to the hospital.

Tony Pelisky was sentenced to not less than one year nor more than three years for entering the home of Thomas Reynolds, 276 Sylvan avenue on June 17. Peter J. Cunningham, a war veteran, was given a suspended sentence of sixty days on a charge of assaulting Emil Plitt of 62 Giles St. The assault is said to have been caused by a statement of Plitt praising the Ku Klux Klan.

Come In and See the Lovely Things

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

What Uncle Lucky Is Doing

Dear me, it is so long since I've written a story about Uncle Lucky, the kind old gentleman bunny, that maybe you little readers are wondering what has become of him. But nothing unpleasant has happened in his little white house on the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street, Rabbitville, since I last wrote about him. No indeedy. Had he been ill with the whooping cough or a bad attack of rheumatism, I'm sure Little Miss Mousie, his tiny housekeeper, would have called up Dr. Quack, the famous duck doctor.

Well, then, little reader, let us tip-toe up to the front porch and see if Uncle Lucky is swinging in the hammock. It is such a warm day I am almost sure that the dear old gentleman rabbit is reading a novel or the almanac, or maybe, for all I know, the Bunnybridge Bugle.

Yes, there he is, a big cushion under his head, and a comfortable pair of carpet slippers on his feet.

"Swing high, swing low,
Swing to and fro.
Be careful not to Sprain your toe."

sang Little Miss Mouse, peeping

"Guess I'll take my appetite with me."

from the front doorway, her bobbed hair just covering her pretty pink ears.

"Don't worry your kind little heart," answered Uncle Lucky. "I'm pretty comfortable."

"The pillow is all wrinkle crinkle," laughed Little Miss Mousie, bending over the dear old gentleman rabbit to straighten it out. "Now, can't you see better to read?"

"Right you are," answered dear Uncle Lucky. "Goodness, there goes my slipper! My pinky will get the rheumatiz unless you put it on quickerty quick."

"There, it's on," laughed Little Miss Mousie, tickling the old gentleman rabbit's toe.

"Don't do it again," begged the kind old gentleman bunny, patting her bobbed hair. "Here's a peppermint." After that Little Miss Mousie ran back to the kitchen to see if the Angel Cake were baked. Of course it was, for weren't the Four O'Clocks out in the garden just opening their eyes. Well, I guess yes, indeedy. They knew it was time to take out that lovely cake. Maybe they would have told Little Miss Mousie if she had delayed another minute.

By and by she called to Uncle Lucky, "Supper is ready."

"Guess I'll take my appetite with me," chuckled the old gentleman bunny, hopping into the kitchen to sit down at the little table, neatly covered with a red table cloth spotted with big white roses. Then taking the chair opposite him, Little Miss Mousie poured the Turnip Tea and cut a big piece of cake for dear Uncle Lucky.

THE POSITION OF THE FARMERS

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

They used to say that plasterers and masons had to be paid a higher per diem wage than other machanics, because their work was impossible during the colder parts of the year. They couldn't earn anything during the winter; consequently they must get their year's wages during the summer. This was so manifestly just that I don't recall ever hearing any criticism of the custom.

In that connection, how about the the farmer man? Here in New England he can work directly at farm production of crops not over six months of the year. Indeed seldom so much as that. His "growing season" extends from, say, the first of May to the last of September,—not more than five months. Even that is semi-frequently shortened by late spring and early fall frosts.

As a matter of fact, few crops are ever attempted by New England farmers which take more than 110 days from seed to maturity. If such things as Lima beans or egg-plants or watermelons call for a longer season, they are set down as semi-tropical plants, unsuitable for our short semi-arctic summers. We may take the risks in them occasionally, but do not trust them or expect anything certain from them.

Some smart aleck from a New York city bank undertook to dismiss the agricultural problem in a recent address before some other financial wiseacres, by the sneering remark that the farmer expected to earn his year's living in ninety days, and to loaf the rest of the year.

While the banker, usually sheltered behind brick walls and covered by a weather defying roof with any required degree of warmth provided by the heating plant in the basement, can usually work winters as comfortably and profitably as summers, he should reflect before ridiculing the farmer that we of the open lands have to do our work under no roof and at all times and as the season—a harvest summoned by a sun ninety odd million miles away permits plants to ripen and grow.

With the exception of the dairymen few farmers are able to produce anything between the limits set by spring and fall frosts. Those frosts are separated anywhere from a hundred to a hundred and twenty days. About a third of the year roughly speaking. In that third of the year the crop-growers not only earn their own keep but must also provide the food for their sneering banker friend and the several million others like him who, to live, must eat what the farmer is able to grow.

Unlike the mechanic laborer, the plasterer, admittedly demanding extra big day's wages during the limited season he is able to work cannot the farm laborer? In both cases the capacity for remunerative labor is limited by matters beyond human control. The one difference is that either Diesterer or farmer stops in zero weather because he is lazy. He stops because he has to, because he can't help it. He senses work because he cannot work because the climate, being a something he can't govern, puts a veto on work. If the sneering banker would suppose the mason's wall were some potato-field in a weather-proof, steam-heated, electric-lighted apartment-house oasis of comfort with light most any hour, and farmers would be as willing to work and earn something in January as in July.

No bankers have thus far undertaken to supply such conditions, outside of their own offices, so far as can be learned. Nor have we happened to hear of any who volunteered to pay farmers the fifty or sixty dollars a bushel for potatoes which would encourage them to undertake such a make-reversing programme on their own responsibility. Instead, most of the people who are quickest to sneer at the farmer are also promptest to raise a howl of protest if the price of potatoes goes up from thirty-nine or fifty cents a peck.

Meanwhile neither the sneers of our urban critics nor our own personal desires have any effect upon the weather and the climate. We farmers must not only earn our own livings but provide the rations for the entire non-farming population of the country in that quite too limited fragment of the year which God and nature have assigned as permissive of bean growth.

It makes not the slightest difference what either Old Money-bags of the city or Old Hayseed of the country thinks or wishes or desires. Crops must be raised when the weather is suitable and only then. They won't grow and can't be made to grow any other time. If in any particular year that time fails to as little as ninety days it isn't Mr. Farmer's fault any more than Mr. Banker's. He isn't to be blamed for a short season any more than he is to be praised for a long one. He takes 'em both as they come powerless to modify them by so much as the sixteenth of a second either way.

If the average banker had to raise dividends only on such days as the sun shone and the mercury stood above eighty degrees, I suspect he would be a little more considerate in his language regarding farm work.

One notable difference between such things as the farm mortgage and the farm corn crop is that interest on the mortgage keeps right on running whether it's wet or dry, cold or hot, summer or winter, day-time or night-time, Sundays or week-days. But the corn won't sprout till along in May and won't grow after the September frost has nipped it. It has got to do all it is going to do between those time limits.

Suppose, for instance, the mortgage which the bank takes in return for a loan to the farmer should draw interest only for the ninety or the hundred and twenty days when farm crops can grow? Wouldn't the bank think it ought to get a l-e-e-t-l-e higher rate of interest?

From the other side of the bramble patch, the high-waged labor unionist criticises farmers for failure to organize, as the miners and the locomotive engineers and the plumbers do, and thus compel the public, with a strike-threat ever at its head, to pay over to farmers wages comparable with those extorted by the unions.

As utterly regardless of the diametrically opposite conditions governing farm production as the sneering banker shows himself, they accuse the farmer of either laziness or stupidity because he doesn't make the square tenon which fits their particular mortise fill the raggedly roundish hole in his work.

Now while some measure of co-operative buying and selling has got to be resorted to, sooner or later, by farmers who can't sell direct to consumers, such iron bound organization as is practicable in certain mechanic trades is absolutely impossible to farmers. Barring exceptional accidents most mechanic shops can govern within narrow limits both the quality and the quantity of their output. Henry Ford, for illustration, can arrange beforehand to put out so many finished flivvers a day and can come mighty close to the figure set. He is able to do this by planning for and compelling the production, per day, of just the right number of crank-shafts and axles and steering wheels and bolts and cotter pins, etc., to go into the proposed number of cars. He, or his foremen for him, can figure out, to within a dozen, just how many cotter pins the workmen assigned to that branch can produce in a day. Same with all other parts. Having the parts in exact proportion at an exact time all that needs be done is throw 'em together,—and there's your flivver.

If the first day's work out shows that a few hundred more cotter pins have been produced than were needed and a few hundred less half-inch nuts, why, all that is necessary is to shift one or two workmen from the cotter pin to the nut bench. The whole process of production is within human control, from beginning to end.

The farmer's production, on the other hand, is never wholly within his own control and often entirely beyond it. He may, indeed influence it in some degree. But he cannot drive it just as he will. His plan in the spring may be to raise a hundred acres of wheat and a hundred acres of corn and an acre of potatoes. Whether he will do any one of these things at all depends upon whether the season will allow him to put in that acreage. It may rain for four steady weeks on end when time comes to plow for wheat. There may come a freeze after his corn has got well up and cut off the entire crop. Even if he got the seed all in at the proper time, and it gets a fine start, any one of a score of things, from chinch-bugs to drought, may intervene. He thinks, at the beginning of the season, that he ought to get thirty bushels of wheat and eighty bushels of corn per acre, and that he ought to sell them at, say, a dollar'n a quarter a bushel. But whether he will get thirty bushels of wheat or three bushels; whether he will get eighty bushels of corn or eight bushels; whether he will be able to get his dollar'n a quarter a bushel or have to take seventy-five cents,—all these things depend on developments quite beyond his control.

He can make various more or less probable guesses during the growing and harvesting season. But till the last kernel is barred and sold he has no absolute assurance whether the year will bring him a profit or put him in a hole.

He can no more bind himself to produce and deliver so many bushels of any crop than he can bind the sweet influences of Pleiades or loose the bands of Orion.

Cooperation, to the extent of securing some influence upon the market,—yes. That much is his right and within his power. But organization to the extent of fixing production and production costs,—no. That field is out of his reach and beyond his control.

They talk, in some portions of the country, of a farmer-labor party. Such a coalition is not only abhorrent to the facts of life, but as practically impossible as a mixture of oil and water. It is only short-sighted and easily misled dupes who will permit themselves to be scrambled into any such "olla podrida."

The farmer must hoe his own row. And about the only practical way in which so called "labor" can help him is by permitting the manufacture of hoes at such prices that he can afford to buy the tools once in a while.

At present he can't buy even a hoe with the income from a whole row of corn.

THE FARMER.

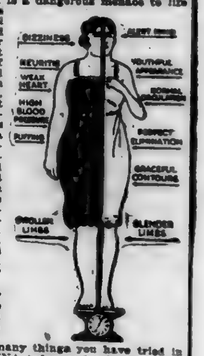
Physicians' Advice to FAT PEOPLE

Fat people do not realize the dangers of too much fat. They suffer from high blood pressure, dizziness, headaches, and internal troubles and don't know that 90% of these cases can be traced directly to obesity—Insurance Companies constantly warn the public to beware of fat. Fat is a dangerous menace to life and why? Because people who drag excessive flesh around are putting a strain upon their vital organs. Their heart has to work extra hard pumping blood to tissues that the body was never meant to have. An eminent physician says that in at least 40% of the cases, fat is the cause of Diabetes. "You should not wait to reduce until 70 or 80 pounds too much have accumulated on your body," is the advice of every good physician. It is when the scale shows the first increase that one should take notice. At first one is only pleasantly plump, little by little solid flesh appears and before you wake up you are a fat lady or a fat man. Up to now, physicians' advice had always been against taking any advertised fat reducer but a French physician has lately introduced in America a wonderful formula put up in a small tablet called "SANGRINA" which has met with the approval of medical men of renown, it has convinced physicians that at last something effective and harmless to reduce had been found—SANGRINA is endorsed by such men as: Dr. Narbonna, Graduate of French Hospitals, Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, Dr. Mc Alpine, late of New York Hospitals, Dr. Jacoby, Dr. Harris, etc., who all recommend it to their patients.



SANGRINA is guaranteed not to contain any habit-forming or dangerous drug—It is to be taken three times a day and will easily and safely take off 5 to 6 pounds a week. Sold with guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. Whatever your case may be and no matter how many things you have tried in the past if you are too fat, get a box of SANGRINA today and take your first step towards slenderness, health and beauty.

SANGRINA DOES RELIEVE THAT WORN OUT TIRED FEELING!

SAN-GRI-NA is now sold at Lee & Osgood's, McLaughlin's, ro Bray's drug stores.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

SILAGE-MAKING HINTS BY UNITED STATES SPECIALISTS

Corn silage is best prepared when the corn is cut at a silage containing about 65 or 70 per cent moisture, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture. This may be told when the lower leaves on the stalk are turning brown, about 30 per cent of the kernels are dented, and 75 per cent are so hardened that no moisture can be squeezed out.

The length to which the silage is cut should be from one-half to 1 inch. Silage cut this short will pack better and the silo will hold its maximum tonnage. Also the chances for the silage to spoil are considerably reduced.

In filling the silo packing is essential. The common practice is to keep the sides slightly higher than the center and to tramp the whole surface thoroughly.

If the silage is too dry to pack well, water should be added. This is best done by directing a hose in the blower. Well-packed and moistened silage is less likely to mold.

When the silo is filled the silage should be covered to prevent spoilage. A layer of cut corn or sorghum stalks from which the ears or grain have been removed does this effectively.

ADVICE TO BABY CHICK PURCHASERS

"Where shall I buy my day-old chicks?" "How can I locate a source of supply that is absolutely free from Bacillary White Diarrhoea?"—These are questions that are being asked by thousands of poultrymen.

The popular way of renewing the flock is through the purchase of day-old chicks, and it will continue to be popular provided poultrymen can obtain stock that is free from disease. Bacillary White Diarrhoea not only causes heavy chick mortality ranging from 25 to 100 per cent, but many of the survivors grow up as living carriers. They are very apt to be low egg producers because of the infection which centers in the ovaries of the mature birds and, if used as breeders, they pass on the infection to the next generation.

Bacillary White Diarrhoea (Bacterium pullorum) is transmitted from the mother hen to the chick through the egg yolk. It is also very contagious and spreads from chick to chick during the first few days after the chicks are hatched, through infected droppings.

There is but one way of being sure of avoiding this infection—and that is by purchasing chicks from stock that has been tested and found absolutely free.

Infection is more or less general. The average percentage of infection of all hens tested, as reported by different states over extended periods of time, ranged from 5 to 10 per cent. Bacillary White Diarrhoea is of such a nature that where infection exists to any extent, continued tests are necessary in order to obtain positive elimination.

While it may be a step in advance of the times to insist upon the purchase of chicks only from flocks that have been tested for Bacillary White Diarrhoea, it is nevertheless far safer to insist upon purchasing chicks only from flocks that have been tested and found absolutely free from the white diarrhoea bacilli.

Unfortunately there are not enough entirely free flocks to supply all of the chicks needed by the trade. Such chicks usually cost considerably more than the average hatchery chicks—but they are worth the difference—as mortality is, after all, the richest chick-raising cost (if not controlled) up to the limit of possibility.—Roy E. Jones, extension poultry specialist.

AUTUMN THE TIME TO LAY POISON FOR PEACH BORERS

Throughout much of the peach growing district east of the Rocky mountains from Canada to Florida, orchardists are troubled with the damaging work of the peach borer, the most important and serious pests of these trees and one that must be combatted relentlessly if the peach is to be grown. Its injuries each year, including the cost of control measures, amount probably to not less than $4,000,000, says the United States department of agriculture.

This pest has been known for more than 150 years, is a native American insect, and has demanded the attention of horticultural men continously. Many methods have been tried for its eradication and control, but not until 1915, when the bureau of Entomology began experiments in the use of various toxic gases as a possible means of control, was any very practical method found.

In these experiments it was found that the chemical para-dichlorobenzene, for which the abbreviated name "paradichlor" is suggested when referred to as an insecticide, could be used successfully in control of the insect. This chemical is a white crystalline substance having an etherlike odor which, while harmless to persons and domestic animals under ordinary conditions is poisonous to insects.

Application of this chemical to peach trees for the control of the peach borer should be made in the fall after most of the moths have finished their egglaying activities, to avoid late infestation of the trees. The time suggested varies, from September 1 as far north as Michigan, to October 10 in Georgia and Texas. The method consists simply of applying the chemical to the soil around the base of the tree in a circular band an inch or two wide, care being taken that the inner part of the band is about two inches from the tree trunk. As soon as the chemical has been applied cover it carefully with several shovelfuls of dirt, making a cone-shaped mound around the tree trunk by packing the earth with the back of the shovel.

Under average fall weather conditions most of the chemical under the soil covering will have evaporated in four to six weeks, killing from 90 to 100 per cent of the borers. It is a good practice to remove the mounds of dirt some five or six weeks after application of the chemical.

The "paradichlor," in the experiments of the bureau of entomology can be used without danger of injury on trees 4 years of age and over—the dose on 4 and 5 year trees being three-fourths of an ounce per tree, on trees 6 years of age and older 1 ounce per tree, or if the trees are unusually large 1 1-4 ounces may be used.

VEGETABLE GROWERS INVITED TO RHODE ISLAND

The annual field tour of the members of the Connecticut Vegetable Growers' association and their friends will be a visit to the Rhode Island agricultural experiment station, Kingston, R. I., Monday, Sept. 22.

Dr. Hartwell has invited the members to inspect the following experimenta and as many more as time will permit.

Comparative effect of acid soil conditions, and nitrate of soda vs. sulfate of ammonia, on tomatoes, eggplant and celery.

Effect of different fertilizer ratios, green manures and amounts of stable manure on celery, eggplant, cabbage, cauliflower, beets and spinach.

Influence of early potatoes on spinach, beets and peas on late cabbages.

Growth of a large number of cross seeded the last of July for green manure.

Rutabagas manured with straw bedding and sawdust bedding over manure with and without phosphate and potash supplement.

Asparagus on soil of different degrees of acidity, with lime and applications of common salt vs. no salt.

CABBAGE RANKS HIGH IN VEGETABLE GROUP

Cabbage, with a market output of more than 30,000 carloads a year has become one of the three most important vegetables in the United States, ranking next to potatoes and tomatoes. About two-fifths of the market crop is early Southern cabbage mainly from Florida, Texas, South Carolina, Virginia and Alabama. Three-fifths is shipped from the north and west, mainly from New York, Wisconsin, Michigan, Colorado and California.

These facts are brought out by the United States department of agriculture in a new department bulletin entitled Marketing Cabbage. Kraut manufacturers take about one-seventh the commercial crop, it is said, the quantity varying greatly according to production and market conditions. Kraut is made from northern cabbage of the large domestic type, and the factories are located mainly in New York, Wisconsin and Michigan.

New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago are said to be the four cabbage consuming centers, the four averaging one-fourth of all carlots of cabbage used. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Kansas City lead in pounds of cabbage per capita shipped to these markets. Cabbage consumption in the leading cities is said to be somewhat the same in quantity year after year, but that there is a tendency toward increased production, especially in the early shipping sections.

SCHOLARSHIP STANDARD AND TUITION ARE HIGHER

The standard of scholarship at the Connecticut College for Women has increased since 1923-1924. The class of 1924 was the last class to be graduated with only 124 points. Future classes will be required to have 130 points to make them eligible for the degree of bachelor of arts or bachelor of science.

By setting the standard of scholarship so high, Connecticut college excludes all but the best students both physically and mentally. Barnard and several other leading colleges in the country only require 124 points for a degree.

The tuition of Connecticut College for Women is also keeping pace with Yale and other colleges. The class of 1925 is the last class which will pay $250. All other classes, beginning with the class of 1926, will pay $300.

Although only ten years old, Connecticut college has set a standard not required by some colleges which have been in existence for half a century.

CAUSES GIVEN FOR THE RISE IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Washington, Sept. 18—Recent statements that the very substantial rise in the price of wheat is due to artificial causes were declared by Secretary Hoover today have no foundation in fact.

"Two things have underlain this advance," the secretary said in a formal statement. "First, there are three hundred million bushels less of wheat in the west from this crop than last year. Second, the increased stability given to Europe by the recent settlement brought about through activities of the administration, have increased the buying power and outlook for consumption.

"The practical effect of all this is shown by the fact that our exports of 35,000,000 bushels in the last six weeks shows a substantial increase over last year. There is every reason to believe that these exports will be maintained."

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, Sept. 18.—Failure of an old established stock exchange firm brought about sufficient selling in today's stock market to check the upward movement of prices, closing quotations disclosing considerable irregularity. Early gains which ran from one to seven points, were materially reduced or cancelled.

During the initial upswing nearly three dozen issues established new records for the year including Studebaker, Air Reduction, Goodyear Tire preferred, and Union Tank Car, Rutland preferred, Nash Motor, Colorado and Southern, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Southern Railway preferred, Missouri Pacific preferred, Worthington Pump issues, American Tobacco A. and B, Postum Cereal, United Drug and Allis Chalmers preferred.

U. S. Steel common closed three-eighths lower, at 108 1-2 after having sold a point above that figure. Baldwin dropped about a point to 122 1-4 while American Can closed fractionally higher at 130 after having touched 131 3-8.

Specialties for which there is a thin market made some of the largest gains, Worthington Pump jumped six points to 35 1-2. American Bank Note recorded a similar gain at 138 and Federal Light and Traction, International Harvester, Kinney and Company, Midland Steel Products preferred, Pure Oil 8 per cent. preferred and United Fruit moved up 3 to 5 points.

General Baking broke eight points to 140 on two sales. General Electric dropped from 265 3-8 to 261, off 3 on the day, while U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American and Foreign Power certificates (25 per cent. paid), Delaware and Hudson, Jersey Central, Jones Brothers Tea, and Gulf, Mobile and Northern preferred lost 1 1-2 or more points.

Active buying of the western carriers was predicted on reports of unusually heavy grain loadings. Rock Island common crossing 25 to a new high on the current movement.

Call money on the stock exchange was maintained at ° per cent. despite the abundance of funds in the 'outside' market at concessions from the official rate. Time money rates showed an easier tone with increased offerings of 90-day funds at 2 3-4 per cent.

The principal European exchanges lost ground. Demand sterling ruled a cent lower around $4.46 and the French francs were moderately active around 5.32 cents, or two points below last night's close. Japanese yen continued under pressure, dropping 3-16 to 40 9-16.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Sept. 18.—Abundance of time funds, offered as low as 2 3-4 per cent. for 90 days maturities, gave a strong underlying tone to today's bond market, resulting in a quiet and orderly advance in prices. Broader inquiry for high grade corporation issues developed with a lapse of interest in Liberty bonds.

Buying of railroad liens predominated in stock exchange trading. Among individual features, the most conspicuous movement was a rise of one point in International-Great Northern adjustment 6s to a new 1924 top price. Other isues which participated in the advance included Southern Pacific collateral 4s, Chesapeake and Ohio general 4 1-2s and New Haven, Western Maryland, Rock Island, Central Pacific and Seaboard obligations.

Heavy over-subscription of the Canadian government's $90,000,000 one year 4 per cent. note issue, offered today, was reported by the underwriters syndicate, headed by the Chest Securities Corporation. A preliminary estimate placed total applications at $200,000,000.

Industrial issues were moderately active, with a good demand for copper, sugar and rubber bonds. Sinclair Consolidated Oil liens moved counter to the general trend. Foreign and United States government bonds were firm.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Brand new demand for corn sprang up today following yesterday's big collapse in prices. A forecast of colder weather with possibility of frost tonight over Montana and Wyoming did a good deal to stimulate new buying. Closing quotations for corn were strong, 1 cent to 2 1-2 cents net higher, December $1.09 3-8 to $1.09 1-2. Wheat closed firm, 1 1-4 to 2 1-4c up, oats at 1-2c to 1c gain, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a rise of 25c.

Buying in the corn market, although largely on the part of recent sellers who were in a position to collect profits, appeared also to a surprising extent representative of fresh purchasing from traders who looked for an upward movement of prices, and who had been awaiting a chance to take hold at an advantage. An accumulation of overnight orders to sell stood in the way, however, of any rally at the opening. Continued favorable weather was likewise an obstacle, and so, too, were increased speculative offerings which developed as soon as the market scored an early fractional gain.

Lowest prices for corn since late in August were reached on the ensuing drop, but losses were soon more than wiped out, and during the last hour the upward swing of the market acquired a momentum which yesterday would have seemed quite out of the question. Purchases of the December delivery for cash houses were a feature today which attracted much attention. Meanwhile rural offerings remained small and many crop reports at hand placed stress on need of ideal weather until well into October.

Wheat and oats rallied with corn. A good cash demand here for wheat was in evidence with exporters participating, and the September delivery gained nearly a cent on the December.

Export buying of lard strengthened the provision market.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Sept. 18.—Heavy profit taking checked th eupward movement of prices in today's curb market, gains and losses being about evenly divided in the closing quotations. Oils held relatively firm in the face of further readjustment of crude oils. Prairie Oil and Gas, which opened a point higher at 210, fell later to 207 1-2. Most of the other active issues showed only fractional changes. Gillett Safety Razor, old stock, was marked up four points to 289, while net gains of 1 to 2 1-2 points were registered by American Gas and Electric, Cuba Company, General Motors and Gillett Safety Razor, new stock. Ward Baking lost ground in reflection of official denials of a large baking merger, the stock closing nearly 1 1-2 points lower at 33.

A break of ten points to 61 in Jib Consolidated Mining was the only feature of the mining group.

Of all the varied old interests of Hopeville, the grist mill, operated by a man named Saunders held out the longest. The store, famous as having housed the Hopeville lyceum, escaped not the remorseless hand of time. The big company barn was torn down and brought to Jewett City, and when set up again, it was transformed into a North Main street garage. The Hopeville lyceum stood in for some class in its time, and many there were that walked the three miles from Jewett City to hear such orators as Clark C. Palmer, Daniel L. Phillips and the late Joseph Roode debate upon topics of the day.

NEW ENGLAND IS FIFTH IN PAINT MANUFACTURE

The New England states stand fifth among the geographic divisions of the country in the number of establishments engaged in the manufacture of paint and varnish during the first half of this year, according to a report of the department of commerce which shows that although the establishments in New England engaged in this manufacture were the same as during the second half of last year, the figures for the type of paints and varnishes manufactured had changed somewhat.

The total number of New England establishments engaged in the manufacture of paints and varnishes during the first half of this year and the last half of 1923 was 26, as compared with 176 and 171, respectively, in the east north central states, the highest number in any one division.

New England establishments manufacturing white lead in oil total seven for both periods, while those engaged in the manufacture of zinc oxide in oil had increased from six during the second half of last year, to eight the first half of this year, and other paste paint manufacturing concerns from 13 to 17.

Business concerns in New England putting out ready mixed paints were 22 this year, as compared with 21 during the first half of 1923 while makers of varnishes, japans and lacquers had increased the numbers of establishments from 13 to 17.

It is reported the Honduran government troops have completely routed the revolutionists under General Fonseca, Matute and Peralta. A large quantity of military stores were captured.

CLAIMED TO OWN PRESTON FARM AS BASIS FOR BORROWING MONEY

On a request from the Norwich police, Michael Sacks was arrested in New York city Thursday on a charge of embezzlement and is held under bonds of $1,000 there until Monday, according to a telegram that Chief George Linton has received.

The time is pretty short between now and Monday for extradition papers to be secured but the Norwich authorities will do all they can to secure the papers in time to present them in New York city when the case is called up Monday. Officer Charles Smith, who will be sent from here to get the man, will make all speed to Hartford and then to Albany where he has to have the extradition papers executed by the governors of both states.

Sacks is accused of embezzlement of $150 last June from Jacob Bukavetsky of this city. It is claimed that Sacks came here from New York and represented that he was the owner of a farm in Preston City, that it was recorded in the Preston land records in his name and that he proposed to spend a good deal of money on the farm, including the installation of a Delco light system. Upon this representation he induced Bukovetsky to lend him $150, but all of these representations were false, it is claimed.

Besides the money he secured from Bukovetsky, it is alleged that he made loans from a number of other people on similar representations and these will make new counts against him when he is presented in the Norwich city court.

FALL RIVER YOUTHS IN JAIL FOR THEFT

Three Fall River, Mass., youths began a 10 days jail sentence at Haddam Thursday morning, following their capture Wednesday in Stafford for alleged theft of automobile markers in a Chester garage.

Upon their release they face theft charges in Waterford for the break a few nights ago in the Red Top gasoline station and in Fall River for the theft of a Dodge coupe in which they are alleged to have attempted escape westward.

The boys are Robert Cowdill, 16, John R. McGovern, 15, and Gabriel Conroy, 16. The story of their flight, as unravelled by police is an unusual one.

The trio jumped into a Dodge coupe standing at a curb in Fall River early this week and attempted a passage westward out of this section of the country, it is alleged. Several thefts were alleged to have been committed, each being because of necessity for their getaway.

When they passed through Waterford the stolen car was low of oil and with nothing to prevent them they made three separate breaks in the Red Top gasoline station and carried off about $40 worth of loot. They took a sufficient supply of oil to last them some time and also took plenty of cigarettes and tobacco, according to police.

On the following night they passed through Chester and realized that the Massachusetts markers on their car would disclose the ownership if it was reported stolen. Therefore they entered a garage and under the cover of darkness ripped a set of Connecticut markers from a car stored there. Fastening them to the Dodge in which they were riding they continued their trip.

State police were notified and Sergeant T. J. Henry, commander of the Centerbrook state police barracks, with a squad of policemen, overtook the fugitives at Stafford and brought them back to Chester. Wednesday night they were arraigned and Justice Prann imposed fines of $10 each. The boys were without funds. Money was one of the few things they are not alleged to have purloined and in default of payment they went to jail.

When their term expires they will be turned over to the state police of the Groton barracks and charges of theft and breaking and entering will be pressed in Waterford town court. Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton of that town has issued warrants for the boys on complaint of Grand Juror John A. Malona.

Following the disposition of their cases in Waterford the adventurers will be delivered to Fall River authorities where charges of larceny of the automobile will be preferred.

FOR CELEBRATION OF ITALIAN INDEPENDENCE

Next Sunday at 4 o'clock p. m. at the Community House on Church street, there will be the celebration of the 54th anniversary of the unification of Italy. There will be speeches made both in English and in Italian. The mayor and Judge J. H. Barnes will deliver the main address in English and the Rev. V. Panizzoli, the new Italian minister will deliver the main address in Italian. The Italian band will play special music for the occasion.

The 20th of September is for Italy just what the Fourth of July is for this country. Back of it there was the same spirit which prevailed in the thirteen colonies in 1776. It is the Italian Independent Day.

Italy had always wished to be free and independent nation, but her path was blocked. Ever since the year 98 B. C. till 1870 A. D., the Italians had cherished the idea of the unification of their beloved country. Even though many times they were opposed and many of them had to give their lives, yet their hope was always alive.

On the 20th of September 1870 after a long struggle and much bloodshed, Italy was united and Rome, the Eternal City was made the capital of Italy. On that day the ideals of liberty of thought and conscience, the most sacred things in human life, were affirmed. It was the beginning of a new era, both political and cultural. It was the beginning of the so called third Italy, that Italy for which Dante, Alfieri, Mazzini, Garibaldi and many other poets and philosophers dreamed and fought hard that their dreams and aspirations might become true. Their ideals were that Italy might free herself from her many foreigner rulers who had divided and subdivided her oppressing and keeping her back from all the progress she could make, and have her place in the world just as any other nation had.

COURTEOUS TRAFFIC COP WINS TOUR ABROAD

Patrolman John T. McIntyre, of Traffic A, who has sped thousands of departing travelers from New York on their way toward Europe, sailed Wednesday from New York on the Aquitania with Mrs. McIntyre for a six weeks' trip abroad, the reward of his indefatigable courtesy and efficiency as traffic patrolman at the Cunard Line piers, New York.

Among the harassed travelers assisted by McIntyre on their departure for Europe were William B. Leeds and his wife, the Princess Xenia of Russia. So impressed were they with the cheerful vigor with which McIntyre smoothed the way for them and others who were sailing that they decided to make him a present of a European tour.

JOHN T. McINTYRE

For six weeks all the traveling expenses of Patrolman McIntyre and Mrs. McIntyre will be defrayed by the wealthy American and his titled wife. McIntyre has obtained leave of absence from the department for the trip.

Standing at the city's seaward gate, McIntyre came to know the migratory rich. His smile was their farewell and their greeting. To the habitual trans-Atlantic passenger, Patrolman McIntyre became as much a fixed feature of the landscape as Nantucket lightship or the fogs of the Grand Banks and, personally, they regarded him as far more useful than either.

Envy of those fortunate travelers whose whims carried them beyond the horizon never tinted McIntyre's view of life. He saw things clearly and in their simpler aspects and regarded them with equanimity. Accepting without question the doctrine that things are as you find them, Patrolman McIntyre took it for granted that European trips were for the wealthy and a traffic cop was lucky to get a post at the piers. He was appointed to the force April 21, 1909, and lives at 327 West Forty-sixth street.

The fortunate New York traffic cop who is to enjoy this European trip is a native of this city, where he has many friends. It has annually been his custom to revisit Norwich in the fall at the time of the world series baseball games and he has usually been one of those who were on the inside in hearing the baseball returns at the Bulletin office. This year it is apparent that Officer McIntyre will be on his travels at the time of the world series.

COURT DISCHARGES WOMAN ON ABDUCTION COMPLAINT

In the city court, Thursday morning three men were fined $5 each for violation of the local traffic laws in parking their machines on the left hand side of the street. A Thamesville man was fined $5 and costs for intoxication.

Abraham Lincoln, a local janitor, charged with non-support, was ordered to pay his wife $6 weekly.

Emma Levianno, Emma Sherwin and Allyn L. Brown, all colored, were discharged. They were arrested at No. 54 North Main street late Wednesday night on a disorderly house charge and spent the night at the police station.

Mrs. Delia M. Verville arrested in Arctic, R. I., and brought back to Norwich, was presented on a charge of abducting her 15 months old son and taking the child from the state. The complaint was by her husband, William Verville of Greeneville. She claimed her husband was with her when she took the boy to Arctic. The couple have not been living together. Mrs. Verville was discharged.

Spending Winter in Auburndale.

Their daughter, Helen, has resumed her studies as a senior at Mt. Holyoke college, another daughter, Eunice, is at Wheaton college, Norton, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Smith and their daughter, Margaret, will spend the winter at Auburndale, Mass., where Margaret will attend school.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

RESERVES DECISION IN JAMES DIVORCE SUIT

The suit brought by Ray C. James of Waterford for divorce from Sarah Kane James of Old Lyme, and custody of a five year old son, Robert, which has been before the superior court in New London for the past three days, came to a conclusion shortly before noon Thursday when counsel for both sides concluded their arguments. Judge Leonard J. Nickerson, who has been hearing the case took the papers for consideration, reserving decision.

MEMORIAL WINDOW IN NEW LONDON CHURCH

There has been placed in the chancel of the All Souls' Unitarian-Universalist Church, New London, a very beautiful memorial window of which the subject is "Come Unto Me All Ye That Labour and Are Heavy Laden." This window occupies three openings, the center one containing the majestic figure of our Lord representing the Biblical quotation, the background being a remarkable landscape showing hills and vales interspersed with cedar trees, the sky dark and rich in wonderful colors.

At the base of the window is the following inscription:

"In memory of

LUCID VIEW FOR SOLVING AGRICULTURAL PROBLEM

Charles G. Dawes, Republican Vice-Presidential Candidate, in Address at Sioux Falls, S. D., Declared That Relief Measures Should Be Found by an Impartial, Non-Partisan Commission Such as is Contemplated by President Coolidge—Question Must Receive "a Comman Sense Consideration, Free From Political Poison"—Constructive Solution Must Be Found Without Sidestepping Embarrassing Facts in Certain Localities to Gain Votes.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Sept. 19—(By the A. P.)—Declaring the agricultural situation to be of such a serious nature that by common consent there should be no shrinking away from political quack remedies, Charles G. Dawes, republican vice-presidential candidate, speaking here tonight, urged that it receive "a common sense consideration, free from political poison."

In consideration, Mr. Dawes asserted, must come only through appointment of an impartial, non-partisan commission such as contemplated by President Coolidge and put forward in the republican plan for bringing agricultural relief.

The vice-presidential nominee declared John W. Davis, democratic candidate for president, has chosen to treat the agricultural problem in a political manner, and contended that the only course was "that discussion may result in a constructive solution rather than side-stepping embarrassing facts in certain localities to gain votes."

Reference was taken by Mr. Dawes of political comment aroused not only in the democratic party but from some of the republican ranks by his declaration on irrigation and reclamation in his recent Lincoln speech. He endorsed the statement that every irrigation and reclamation project operated to add to over-production of farm products, driving down prices, and declared that his critics as public servants desire realization to protect the interests of irrigation and reclamation, they should present the just claims in a proper and constructive way, from the basis of relief as a part of the greater problem which must be solved for agricultural relief, if all producers of foodstuffs including those on irrigated land are to receive essential justice.

Discussing the situation in American agriculture to the situation existing in Europe before the plan was created which he was largely instrumental in framing, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, republican nominee for vice president renewed his plea for the appointment of a committee to study the question and lay before congress a constructive plan for agricultural relief. To illustrate his need for a single round and constructive plan, Gen Dawes pointed to the fact that during the last session of congress the house committee on agricultural affairs had before it thirty-nine measures for relief of the condition of the American farmer and the senate thirteen more.

Discussing the agricultural problem as an economic problem, Gen. Dawes said, "as the farmer himself knows, it should be discussed in the light of the facts and the conclusions to be drawn from them and not from the standpoint of politics.

I note that Mr. Davis in his Omaha speech discusses the question as a political problem. He would eliminate from political discussion every question that is either economic in its scope or economic in character, we will reach that millennium when government through politics will cease to exist." He also maintains in general, that economic unity will solve the problem.

No one can make a proper statement of the facts involved in the present situation of the agricultural industry without referring to some of the complicated and conflicting economic interests of our people. The course of the politician in discussing the solution is primarily from the standpoint of getting votes. The proper course is that discussion which may result in a constructive solution, rather than side-stepping embarrassing facts in certain localities to gain votes."

Gen. Dawes pointed out that the "economic and practical" committee which the president was about to appoint to try to solve the complex and difficult question will face numerous situations where interests conflict.

"In the endeavor to reach a proper solution of this national problem," he said "the committee cannot start in, as politicians do, with pledges to conflicting demands, designed to satisfy both sides in advance. This means certain failure.

"My objection to putting the agricultural problem into politics is that it involves wholesale preliminary commitments from candidates after votes in certain localities, which tends to preclude, afterwards, impartial consideration of the constructive remedies for the agricultural industry as a whole. In my speech at Lincoln I endeavored to look at the whole agricultural question in the same way as our expert committee at first viewed the complex and desperate situation of European industry, which was due to the inability of politicians in the allied countries and Germany in the past to adjust conflicting demands. They had kept Europe in industrial chaos for five years as the politicians are now keeping the agricultural problem in chaos here.

"Dwelling upon the merits of expert consideration by a non-partisan commission of the agricultural problem, General Dawes said, "Candidates for office should have more faith in the common sense of the people and seek to resemble less the Hoosier schoolmaster, who said that if they would only give him a school, he would teach that the world was round or flat, according as the school committee might determine."

When the agricultural problem is stated in general terms, the speaker said, "its seriousness and complexity emphasizes the insignificance of any help which we can expect from making it a political question and allowing it to become the football of the demagogues."

General Dawes reviewed a considerable length all of the points made in his speech at Lincoln, Nebraska, recently. He pointed out the disparity in earning capacity of agricultural and industrial portions of the population, that the two portions are interdependent, and touched specifically upon the situation not only of wheat, beef, fruit and cotton growers, but of the whole body of farmers throughout the nation. He reviewed his remarks upon the great wheat growing competitors of the United States, Canada and the Argentine, as well as upon cooperative marketing.

"I have given this outline of some of the facts which must be considered in seeking a solution of the agricultural problem," General Dawes said, "not so much because you are not acquainted with them in a general way, but because the mere statement of them so emphasizes the necessity for its non-partisan treatment, if we are to make real constructive progress at this time.

"The idea of an economic, non-partisan, and impartial commission which the president has announced he will appoint to suggest a plan for legislative or other relief, is to have the subject impartially and competently considered from all standpoints.

"There is at present, no consensus of either economic or political opinion behind any specific remedy. It has not been possible to secure, for any proposed plan of relief, the endorsement of all of the agricultural organizations."

Here General Dawes, to show the confusion of opinion among the experts on the agricultural problem made his point, that thirty-nine bills were on the docket of the house committee having the consideration of agricultural legislation, and thirteen before the similar senate committee.

General Dawes here compared the situation in American agriculture with the situation in European industry which the expert committee had to face, after five years of futile bickering and with Europe on the brink of an abyss.

"Do not think that there were not critics of this course," the speaker said. "Mr. Davis' reference to 'moth balls' in connection with the suggestion of the appointment of an agricultural commission is very mild compared of equally distinguished men in Europe upon the proposition that the appointment of an expert committee suggest a plan for the settlement of European difficulties. One of these, I remember, was to the effect that it was prescribing a pill to cure an earthquake.

"But my friends, it has always seemed to me, whether it is injected in the form of a pill or given as a steady diet, common sense is a universal remedy.

"The committee plan, is the only one, as I see it, by which this great national agricultural problem can receive a common sense consideration, free from political poison.

"It is most important that we have the right kind of a commission." General Dawes continued, "its competency and its impartiality must be unquestioned. It must be absolutely non-political. All plans proposed by others should be considered by it. It must be bound, in its consideration, to no political creed or policy, any more than was the recent expert committee in Europe. Then, after it has suggested its plan and set forth its terms, it will be in order generally to discuss it.

"But, as in Europe, if a common sense plan is evolved, a changed status of public opinion may then discourage the demagogues from continuing to try to forge clear understanding in the interest of personal ambitions for public office. The public will study the suggestion of a commission, which is impartial and competent and public opinion should crystallize.

"The experts' plan in Europe was accepted because settled public opinion demanded its acceptance, and any government which had opposed its acceptance would have been overthrown by public opinion.

"There come crises so great in national affairs that by common consent there is a turning away from political quack doctors. It seems to me that such a crisis is confronted in the agricultural situation.

"I hope the commission may suggest a plan involving comprehensive relief, and at the very least, I would expect it to suggest plans and methods to bring substantial improvement. But of this, I am certain—that in the present state of public opinion on the debate of the agricultural problem, its creation represents the best hope for real progress."

BAY STATE REPUBLICANS TO DEAL WITH ANTI-KLAN PLANK

Worcester, Mas., Sept. 1.—A plank calling for denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan by name was proposed for inclusion in the platform of the republican state convention, which meets here tomorrow at an open hearing of the resolutions committee today. It was introduced by a woman, Mrs. Georke W. Knowlton, Jr., of West Upton, at the last moment, with the word that she had hoped some man would bring the subject up; that the klan had split her town in two, and that she could not sand by and leave her project unsaid.

Repeal or revision of the direct primary law, and a request that the convention refuse to endorse the candidacy for re-election of State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook, and the candidacy for the governor's council of Washington Cook of Sharon,—his brother, who was nominated by the republicans in the second councillor district, were other proposals with which the resolutions committee went in executive session tonight.

There was no voice raised in opposition to the klan condemnation, to the call for a change in the primaries, or the proposed rebuke to the Cooks. It was known, however, that some members of the committe would urge that the Massachusetts convention go only as far as the national convention as Cleveland in the matter of the Klan.

The motion to withhold endorsement from the state auditor and his brother was made by Clarence A. Barnes of Mansfield, after he had urged with other speakers the need of a change in the primary system. He said the nominations of the Cooks by the republican party were instances in which the primary had failed because of the incomplete information by voters on the personal affairs of the candidates. Barnes mentioned alleged financial transactions in connection with each and reasons why the convention should withhold endorsement from them.

DR. THIERY COMMITTED TO HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 19.—Dr. Raymond D. Thiery, Somerville physician, who has been held in East Cambridge jail without bail on the charge of murder in connection with the killing of his brother-in-law, David M. Noble, on August 8, today was committed to the Bridgewater hospital for the insane for observation after he had become violent in his cell.

The transfer of the prisoner was made on the recommendation of Dr. Edward R. Utley, Middlesex county physician, District Attorney Arthur K. Reading and Sheriff John R. Fairbain. According to jail attendants Thiery at noon today suddenly developed symptoms of insanity and was restrained with difficulty from injuring himself.

The physician was arrested after the police had investigated the death of Noble, who was shot to death in the Thiery home in Somerville on the night of August 8. Thiery said that burglars had killed his brother-in-law and then attacked him, and showed scars which he said had been inflicted in his struggle with his assailants. The authorities were unable to find any trace of burglars having entered the house.

Thiery at his own request was taken to a hospital and operated on for injuries he claimed to have sustained in his battle with the burglars, though closely guarded he succeeded in opening his wound and also pierced a vein in his neck with a safety pin in an attempt to commit suicide. He maintained his innocense throughout, writing many letters to relatives and friends, to the police and to his sweetheart in which he protested that he had not killed Noble.

Later Thiery formally admitted that he was a drug addict, declaring that at times when his nerves needed rest, he took two cans of an anesthetic in a single night. After his recovery, he was taken to the East Cambridge jail to await grand jury action.

Wiscasset to Greet Mac Millan Today

Party in Steamer Bowdoin is Spending Night on Island Off the Coast of Maine.

Wiscasset, Me., Sept. 19.—Captain Donald B. MacMillan, Arctic explorer, and his party of six, in the schooner Bowdoin tonight reached Monhegan island, 32 miles southeast of this port. Just four days less than 15 months ago, the MacMillan expedition sailed from Wiscasset on the eighth trip of the explorer into the Arctic.

The will remain on Monhegan tonight, coming across to the mainland tomorrow morning where Wiscasset has prepared to welcome them home with elaborate ceremonies.

Back in the United States again, MacMillan reported tonight that some of his crew were already suffering from Arctic fever and are eager to return to the land of the Eskimos. In spite of her rough voyage through storms and ice floes, the 88 foot auxiliary schooner is eager to weigh ancaor and head northward again next June, Captain MacMillan said.

Returning with Captain MacMillan in the joint capacity of member of the expedition and as members of the crew who stood their turn at watch are: Ralph P. Robinson, Merrimack, Mass., chief assistant to the explorer, Thomas J. McCue, Brigus, N. F., mate; Richard Goddard, Winthrop, Mass., sent by the Carnegie Institute Washington, D. C., to continue observations in terrestial magnetism and atmospheric electricity, commonly known as "static" which which he began in Baffin Land two years ago. Donald H. Mix, radio operator of Bristol, Conn., sent with the expedition by the 15,000 amateur members of the American Radio Relay league; W. F. Lewis, Lynn, Mass., cook; and John Jaynes, Somerville, Mass., engineer.

Another member of the party, Abram Bromfield, expert driver of Eskimo dogs, was left at Camp Lanes Baz, near Davis inlet, Labrador, where he was picked up by the schooner on her northward voyage.

Running through heavy seas and against head winds, the Bowdoin's log showed that she averaged about nine knots today in her trip across the Gulf of Main from Sable Island, N. S.

The Bowdoin will be met off Ocean Ocean Point at the mouth of the Sheepscot river tomorrow by a party of about 20 Bowdoin college alumni from Portsmouth, N. H., and Boston who will make the trip overnight from Portsmoth, N. H., on the steamer Sightseer. The steamer and a fleet of boats from Wiscasset will escort the schooner up the river to her home port, arriving at one o'clock.

Here the Bowdoin men—from the school which MacMillan claims as his alma mater—will be joined by others from Main points who will escort MacMillan in a parade which will follow his reception here. A half hour interval will separate the arrival and the parade.

Captain MacMillan said tonight that after the experiences of the past year with the ice floes and the storming of the floes in the Arctic regions adjacent to Northern Greenland where he passed the winter at Refuge Harbor, he was more confident than ever in the reliability of the Booth Bay Harbor-built schooner, now in her fourth year.

It was 7.43 p. m. standard time, when the Bowdoin dropped anchor in the harbor here amid the blowing of whistles and the ringing of bells from small craft which turned out to greet the incoming schooner. It was dusk and the short was dotted with bonfires lighted in honor of the party returning from their long stay in the Arctic.

In addition to the friends and relatives of the explorers nearly all of the 135 residents of this island, which is only a mile wide and two and one-half miles long, were in boats in the harbor. These were joined by a Hundred summer residents from the main land. It was at an island that the explorer's party had their first meal in the United States, upon their return.

WORLD FLIERS WERE WELCOMED AT DALLAS, TEX.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 19.—(By the A. P.)—Dallas paused today to welcome and greet the six intrepid army airmen who are now on the last few stages of their history-making round-the-world flight.

More than 7,500 Dallas citizens were at Love field, six miles from the city to welcome the aviators.

As Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, the flight commander, approached the ground, a mighty cheer went up, to be renewed when Lieut. Leigh Wade brought the Boston II to the field, and when Lieut. Eric Nelson, the last of the three landed.

The flight from Muskogee, to Dallas, was made in three hours and 54 minutes, a hop of 225 miles. This was considerably less than the average speed maintanied in other jumps of the flight, the lengthened time being caused by a terrific head wind which the fliers were forced to battle with almost constantly from Muskogee to Dallas.

The men were first greeted by a large number of former buddies, and then by the official welcoming committee headed by the mayor of Dallas, Louis Blavlock, and Charles Saville, manager of the local chamber of commerce. As the men went through the lane of people, one young woman, jumped in front of Lieut. Lowell Smith and kissed him.

A banquet at which the chamber of commerce was host, and a theatre party were included in the evening's galties.

Lieut. Smith announced tonight that the fliers would follow the right of way of the Texas and Pacific railroad from Dallas to El Paso, the next overnight stop, tomorrow. They intend to sleep until 8 a. m., and go to Love field at 9 a. m., central standard time.

Would Put End to War Through Arbitration

Envoys of 50 Nations Working For Security by Reduction in Armaments.

Geneva, Sept. 19.—(By The A. P.)—After three weeks of tense labor success looms hopefully over Geneva tonight as crowning the efforts of the representatives of the fifty nations who are striving to put an end to all war through arbitration, security and a reduction in armaments.

A protocol on arbitration and security has virtually been agreed upon and so confident do the leading statesmen feel it will be ratified that the so-called "big twelve" of the present assembly of the League of Nations decided today to recommend the convocation of a great international conference on reduction af armaments in Geneva on June 15, 1925.

The United States and all other countries not now members of the League of Nations will be invited to participate in the conference, as soon as the league's assembly ratifies the protocol, the league experts will buckle down to the work of preparing the programme for the conference, which must be forwarded to all governments at least two months before the time set for the opening sessions.

The text of the protocol will be whipped into shape and probably be presented to the assembly next Wednesday, allowing for two days' discussion before the full disarmament commission. The present plans are that fifteen states must ratify the protocol before the arms conference can actually be held.

Shanghai, Sept. 19.—(By The A. P.)—Reports that the Kiangsu army seeking to capture Shanghai has broken the Chekiang army's lines at Hwangtu, 15 miles south of the city on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway line, and was marching on the city, caused new alarm in outlying districts tonight.

GEN. PERSHING'S FORMAL FAREWELL TO THE ARMY

Washington, Sept. 19. — General Pershing's formal farewell to the army, written in the form of the last general order he signed on his birthday anniversary Sept. 13, which will be read to every army organization by the officer commanding at the first parade formation after it is received, was made public today at the war department. It is addressed to "My Comrades" and bears the simple signature, John J. Pershing, without other indication of his rank than the heading at the top, "General of the Armies."

"No words seem adequate to express to you the conflicting emotions that I feel upon reaching the date which officially marks the termination of my active service," General Pershing wrote. "Our experiences together have been varied. We have withstood the same hardships and shared the same pleasures. We have faced discouragements and rejoiced over victories.

"Today, the recollections that swiftly pass in review fill my heart with a deep sense of gratitude for the loyal service, and warm appreciation of the sincere devotion to the country of the patriotic officers and men with whom it has been my good fortune to be associated during the fleeting years of my army life.

"It is my proud privilege in parting, to say of the men of all ranks who have borne arms under the flag that none has more earnestly wished peace, yet in defense of right none has ever been imbued with loftier purpose nor more completely consecrated to the maintenance of our ideals.

"My esteem for them and my admiration for their achievements continue to increase with the passing of time. The inspiration of their exalted conception of citizenship and their fulfillment of its obligations should ever assure the preservation of our institutions. The glorious example of their fidelity and courage will be remembered by those who come after us.

"It is with an abiding confidence in our national forces, and with the assurance of my lasting interest in their welfare, that I bid you an all affectionate farewell."

SECRETARY WILBUR HAS ARRIVED IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Sept. 1.—Arriving in Washington late today Secretary Wilbur refused to comment upon any of the incidents which led to the termination of his western inspection tour upon request from the White House.

After communicating with the White House and stopping briefly at his residence, the secretary went to his office at the department where he held a short conference with Assistant Secretary Roosevelt and Rear Admiral Strauss, the budget officer of the navy. Admiral Strauss went to Harrisburg this morning to meet Mr. Wilbur and accompanied him back to Washington so he could give him latest details of the controversy between the department and budget director Lord.

The return of Mr. Wilbur ends, at least a week ahead of schedule, a tour of naval stations on the west coast which already had occupied more than a month. Unusual importance was attached to the termination of the trip when Mr. Wilbur announced that he had been requested by President Coolidge to return for important conference, and jumped by airplane to a junction point where he could overtake a trans-continental train.

In a White House statement, it was declared the budget as it affected the navy, was the subject upon which Mr. Wilbur's views were sought, but subsequently this was elaborated by a statement from a spokesman for the president who said other matters of importance concerning the navy would be taken up.

THREE GIRLS THROWN FROM AN AUTOMOBILE

Bridgeport, Sept. 19—"Still critical" was the verdict of the St. Vincent hospital as to the condition of the three girls that were thrown from an automobile driven by William H. Wright early Thursday morning, when his car was struck by one owned and driven by Joseph H. Dyer of Danbury, at Main street and Fairfield avenue.

The two Kusy sisters, Catherine, aged 17, and Anna, aged 16 of 124 Prince street, were declared to be in at least a hopeful condition, but there is still doubt as to the chances for recovery of May Lapuz, aged 16, of 17 Barnum avenue, Stratford.

The drivers of both cars, who are out under bond charged with reckless driving, may be given a hearing in the city court tomorrow morning.

PRINCE OF WALES IN PRE-ARRANGED ACT FOR MOVIES

Syosset, N. Y., Sept. 19—On his own private lawn, cut off from the public road by several hundred yards of dense woods, with only members of his staff and half a dozen movie picture and newspaper photographers present, the Prince of Wales took part in a pre-arranged act for the movies in a manner that indicated that he thought it rather good fun.

Men who for nearly three years had waited by the roadside sprinted after him in public places and climbed upon fences and buildings to get a chance shot at Edward with their cameras today had him at their beck and call. They told him what to do and he did it, taking their orders with a smile.

When the cameras were set up the prince in a light gray checked suit the usual guard's cravat, and brown shoes, came gaily out of the door. With a smile and a puff of cigarette smoke, he placed himself in the hands of the photographers with "Well, what am I supposed to do?"

He was supposed, first, to stand at the iron rail on the doorstep while the cameras gradually moved closer and closer, their operators trying to get their way to a point within four feet of the prince's face. He was supposed next, to walk down the stone steps followed by his staff; then to stand beside the sundial fronting the house then to step briskly into a motor car movie-fashion, turning his face forward to the cameras.

And he did it all. He felt constrained to observe, "Oh, this is horrible" when the movies buzzed in his face in the close-up. But he did it with a smile.

As he leaned against the sundial with six members of his staff grouped around him, the prince lighted a cigarette and said: "If you want us to smile, tell us a funny story."

Then he glanced at his companion actors and chided them. "Don't be self-conscious," he said. "We're supposed to look natural."

The prince assumed an air of abstraction as though trying himself to think of a funny story.

In the midst of the prince's act several motor cars full of luncheon guests rounded the gravel drive, astonished to find his royal highness playing as a movie star with evident enjoyment. On more public occasions he has exhibited marked shyness before the cameras, a quality apparently quite lacking today.

SENTENCES IMPOSED IN CRIMINAL SUPERIOR COURT

Bridgeport, Sept. 19—Pleading guilty as a third time offender against the state liquor laws, Albert Carriero 39 years old, father of eight children and proprietor of the Bell View Inn, Westport, was sentenced to from one to two years in the state's prison and fined $1,000 by Judge John W. Banks in criminal superior court this afternoon.

Charged with illegal transportation of beer, Henry J. Snyder, of Bridgeport, was fined $500 and given a 2½-day suspended jail sentence. Charles Anderson of Stratford, was fined $200 and given a 30-day suspended sentence and William Turner, was fined $300 and sent to jail for 30 days.

Stating his stand on liquor cases, Judge Banks declared from the bench today:

"In cases where the accused have either pleaded guilty or found guilty of a violation of the laws prohibiting the sale or transportation of liquor, it is the opinion of the court that justice will not be served by a fine, and in the future as in the past, this court will, in the ordinary case, impose not only a fine but a jail sentence and that sentence will not be suspended."

TOWN CLERK F. P. FENTON WOULD GO TO CONGRESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Willimantic, Sept. 19.—Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton has formally entered the race for the democratic nomination for congressman from the second congressional district, he announced Friday morning. His candidacy met with the unanimous endorsement of the Windham Democratic club which held a spirited meeting Thursday evening. John A. Kelly offered the endorsement motion and after being seconded by Alderman Pierre J. Laramee it was approved. President George Timmins was in charge of the meeting which was held at Al-Pierre Tabarin. The appointment of headquarters and membership committees was included in the business transacted. A number of the accredited delegates from the town of Windham to the democratic state convention gave reports. The functioning of the convention was explained in an interesting manner by Valentine L. Murphy, who labeled himself as an unofficial observer, as he was not a member of the delegation.

According to President Timmins and Mr. Murphy, Windham's own popular town clerk could have secured the nomination for governor with more or less ease if he had only consented to present his name as a candidate. It was pointed out that a winning majority of the assembled delegates were prepared to root for Town Clerk Fenton in their aversion to the state machine. Mr. Fenton heartily endorsed the gubernatorial nominee of the democratic party, Charles G. Morris whom he classed as a much loved personal friend and a Spanish War veteran known to all members of the local camp.

The third district committee, as selected for the coming elections, will comprise: Edmond Peloquin, J. Bernard Davis, Patrick Connell, Andrew Ogozalek, George M. Flint, Joseph Beaulieu, Thomas Kelley, Edmondvestre, Octave Dubreuille, Miss Mamie Bowler, Mrs. John O'Rourke, Mrs. John Hoey, Crs. Conrad Dubeau, and Miss Eva Beaulieu. A SURPRISING VALUE

Strange Experience.

My pet hobby is hunting. One day I went hunting and took my little dog. After we were in the timber for a while, the dog disappeared. I called in vain. I decided to hunt some more and then look for the dog, as I thought he had gone home. I tracked a rabbit to a large hollow log, and looked inside. Imagine my surprise at finding the dog inside. He had crawled in to get warm and had stuck in the log.—Chicago Journal.

The Birds' Handkerchiefs?

John is four years old and had a bad cold, which necessitated much nose-blowing and staying indoors on a fine day. With face glued to the window, he watched some sparrows hopping about on a tree for a time. Then he said: "I wonder what the birds do when they have bad colds. I s'pose they blow their noses on a leaf."

Cause for Worry.

"I wonder," mused the family cat, after inspecting the new mouse trap, "if that is intended as a labor-saving device for my benefit, or if I'm in danger of losing my situation?"

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Lux Contest

The Lux contest, the largest prize contest ever held in this country, closed recently when checks totalling $12,125 were sent out to people all over the United States by Lever Brothers, soap manufacturers of Cambridge, Mass. Among the winners were Ethel Littlehales of New Britain and Walter Aldeman of New Haven.

A check for $1500 dropped into the cross roads mail box of a gray haired lady who had sent the story of the August day when she sponged the flannel coat of one of the world's most famous men with Lux. Another contestant by laundering an infinite number of tiny socks, sacks and dresses had saved $730 toward the college fund of her two chubby babies when a prize award of $1500 came along to swell her bank account.

Five hundred dollars went to the keen and conscientious saleswoman at the dress goods counter of a store in a small New England town. To increase her sales she took home bits of material every night, laundered them in Lux and then produced the evidence when a customer asked about the laundering qualities of any piece of silk or linen.

Housekeepers from blazing Albuquerque, New Mexico, who must cope with sandstorms wrote of laundering the colorful brilliance of their hand-woven Navajo rugs; mothers from snowy Michigan, where the winters are long, described the methods by which they keep winter woolens soft and unshrunken.

In a lovely tree shaded suburb of Philadelphia stands a white Dutch Colonial house that was washed spotless and shining from eaves to underpinning with pails of Lux suds, saving its thrifty young owners a painters bill. One family substituted Lux suds for white paint and renovated the whole interior of their small home, battered and somewhat grimy from the ravages of six vigorous small boys.

The story of how Lux has gone along with men and women who went adventuring in far places also appeared in the contest letters, to France in nurses' bags, to Peking with missionaries, to Africa with explorers, to the farthest corners of the globe to serve a thousand uses.

Everything from sheerest georgette to canvas tents, from oil paintings to pedigreed Persian cats, from his pink and white majesty, the baby, to the family car had been washed in Lux by these enthusiastic women. There were letters from the connoisseurs of rare and beautiful things who told of restoring the lovely patina of old mahogany or the ivory and rose flesh tones of a priceless 17th century portrait with Lux.

The prize winners were selected from 68,000 contestants, who included prominent business women, ranch-women of the Middle West, society women, school girls and the great world of housekeeping women. Miss Martha Dodson of the Ladies' Home Journal, Miss Martha Sanford of the Woman's Home Companion, Mrs. Elizabeth Macdonald of the Modern Priscilla, Miss L. Ray Balderston, author of laundering, and Mrs. Ellen B. McGowan, co-author of Textile and Clothing, were tehjudges who selected the prize winning letters.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Lily of the Dust, which opens at the Broadway theater Sunday, is the first of the Famous Forty Paramount pictures starring Pola Negri to be shown in Norwich. It's Miss Negri's first of this big group of pictures to be followed shortly by Forrember Paradise and A Woman Scorned also booked for showing.

Lily of the Dust, written for the screen by Paul Bern, is based on the novel, The Song of Songs. It's a tense drama of life and love with the charming continental star in her greatest acting role. Critics acclaimed the legitimate play, The Song of Songs, a veritable sensation. When you see the screen version of the story you'll do the same thing.

Here's a great story, made by a great director. And that's Rex Ingram not by a long shot. Ben Lyon, one of the most likeable of the screen's younger leading men; Noah Beery, who needs no word of introduction to picture patrons, and Raymond Griffith appear in leading roles in support of the star. Others include William J. Kelly and Jeannette Daudet.

Here's the finest thing about Pola Negri's done since she came to America, and that's saying something when you glance back over Shadows of Paris, Men and all the rest.

A comedy and news are the short subjects.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday there will be five exceptional fine acts on the program.

Breed Theater

There is no spot on the globe which possesses such an atmosphere of romance as the South Sea Islands and many decades novelists, composers, poets and painters have found new inspiration in those gems of the Pacific, with the result that the mere mention of them stirs up in one's imagination visions of moon-lighted beaches, palms gently swayed by the sweet-scented zephyrs and native girls dancing to the strains of sensuous music.

Such is the locale of The Marriage Cheat, a First National attraction produced by Thomas H. Ince and directed by John Griffith Wray, which is the feature at Breed theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Based on the story by Frank R. Adams, it is enacted by a cast that includes Leatrice Joy, Percy Marmont and Adolphe Menjou.

In spite of the fact that it would entail considerable expense and time, Mr. Ince transported the company and technical staff to one of these fabled islands, and there the production was made with the result that it is pervaded with realism throughout. Effects are achieved which would have been unattainable in Hollywood, giving the production a charm that is fascinating.

The story of The Marriage Cheat relates the adventures of a civilized young woman, pretty and rich, who is cast upon an island through a remarkable escapade, and there finds the love that civilization has denied her.

Other pictures on the bill include Ben Turpin in The Dare Devil and Topics of the Day.

Today's bill consists of The Rejected Woman with Alma Rubens and Conrad Nagle, William Dundan in The Fast Express, a Mack Sennett Comedy and the Pathe News.

Palace Theater

Four days starting Sunday September 21.

Parisian studio life has a fascination for everybody, whether one has ever been abroad or not. Glimpses of Bohemia — the Bohemia of Montmartre and the Latin Quarter, where the men wear smocks and flowing ties and the girls wear sweet smiles, are given in The Lone Wolf, the Associated Exhibitors thriller. One of the most alluring scenes is that in which an artist returns to his atelier late at night, accompanied by a bevy of models, after a jazzy evening at the Bal Bullier.

Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are the stars who head a great array of acting talent in this big film, which was directed by S. E. V. Taylor.

Added attractions, Mack Sennett's latest two reel comedy Little Robinson Corkscrew, Pathe news, Aesop Fables, Hodge Podge and Palace supreme orchestra.

Teacher of Music

Having studied with a pupil of Leschetitskey's, Mrs. Mary D. Hodge is prepared to teach the most useful studies such as Czerny Op 740, the Chopin Etudes and many masterpieces with original markings. This method has to be learned from a teacher not from a book. She also teaches the Waterman form playing which is very wonderful and fascinating to a beginner of 14 and older.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

An item in the financial news appearing Friday told of plans of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company to pay back dividends on certain issues of its stock on which dividends have regularly passed since 1920, when the corporation became involved in difficulties arising out of readjustments that were general in all lines of trade and led to nation-wide depression.

Some time since in this column, it was forecasted that this over-due dividends would be paid. Through the plan now under discussion payments to stock holders waiting such dividends as have been referred to will be brought about by the issue of a new common stock, which will have a par value of $100, plus the amount of the overdue dividends to each stockholder.

Thousands of dollars of the preferred stock on which the dividends are overdue are held in this territory and it will be good news to the owners of this stock to know of the arrangements the corporation has in mind.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber company has made a splendid recovery and during the last two or three years has steadily reduced its outstanding indebtedness. It has reached a point where it will be possible press designs indicate, to make the arrangements necessary for the payment of the overdue dividend.

PUTNAM

Two uncontested divorce petitions were granted by Judge William M. Maltbie at a short calendar session of the superior court in Putnam Friday morning.

Arthur Rasicot of Mill street, Putnam, now working in Fall River, was granted a decree from Emma Rasicot, of Mechanicsville, on the grounds of desertion.

The plaintiff testified that he was married in West Thompson, April 14, 1913. That in October, 1914, he was out of work and his wife said that he couldn't support her and she went to live with her mother in Mechanicsville. He said that it was not true that he could not support his wife. He had tried several times to get his wife to return to him but without success. He was in the World war and was overseas for 14 months. When he returned he again tried to get his wife to live with him. He sought a priest who interceeded for him and following a meeting his wife agreed to return He hired a tenement and was all ready to put it in condition for occupancy, when his wife again changed her mind and they had never lived together since 1914. Plaintiff's mother corroborated this testimony. Omer Dumas of Putnam, a neighbor, testified that the couple had not lived together for ten years and that the wife was still living in Mechanicsville.

Adele M. Cross, of Danielson, was granted a decree from George Cross of Albany, N. Y., on the ground of adultery. She said her husband left her Labor Day, 1920, and that he was living with another woman in Albany. She only knew this through what she had been told.

Arietta Cross, 17 year old daughter of the plaintiff, said she was in Albany last July and her father took her to a house there where he was living with another woman and the woman was in a delicate state of health. She said, on being questioned by Judge Maltbie, that she did not say anything to the woman about her father having a wife living.

Florence Stevens of Danielson said she was in Albany last week and saw Cross and the other woman, whom he introduced as his wife. The woman was in a delicate state of health. She did not tell the woman that Cross had a wife living.

No assignments were made for next week as the few cases claimed went off the list for one cause or another. There will be no further sessions until next Friday when there will be another short calendar.

Following a hasty, and perilous exit from the revolutionary infested country of Honduras, Central America, Hector Lucier stepped from an early morning train from New York, Saturday, on the last lap of his journey from the South American state to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank X. Lucier, in this city.

Young Lucier was dressed in the costume he wore in the southern climate, which was about all of his personal belongings that he was able to take out of the country. This costume was that of the pictured cowboy of the western plains, including the wide brimmed sombrero.

Lucier left Putnam in May, 1923, to go to Honduras in the employ of the United Fruit Company. After some months, however, he became associated with a gold mining company and when its manager came to the United States, Lucier was left as assistant manager.

Lucier was caught between the lines of the revolutionary leader, General Ferrara and the Honduras government troops, while the federal army was pressing the revolutionists hard from the rear. He was told to get out of the country if he valued his own safety and comfort, but he was not furnished an escort and his horse and donkey were taken from him, leaving him with no means of travel except by foot.

Lucier hired a native as a guide and together they set out on the journey across the mountains. The journey of miles and miles was a perilous one, but they made it in safety and finally reached the coast where Lucier took the first homebound steamship, landing in New York, Thursday.

The closing of the First National Bank of Putnam has changed somewhat the plans of Putnam Lodge of Masons of Woodstock. The lodge had planned a rather elaborate programme for the dedication of the new Masonic Temple in South Woodstock the first week in October. Funds of the lodge are behind the closed doors of the defunct Putnam bank. For this reason the plans as first made may be abandoned or the date changed to next spring when more funds will be available to the lodge. It is planned to have the grand master of the state present at the dedicatory exercises and representatives from many lodges throughout the state will also be present.

G. Lawrence Perkins of Pomfret, president of the Patriot Press, Inc., is to spend several months in China this being his first trip to the Orient. Mr. Perkins will land at Shanghai and will then proceed horth to Peking, where he will stay until December. Then he will proceed south to Shanghai, Hong Kong and other points and cross to Manila, sailing for America in January.

A marine scene done in oils by Bailey has been purchased and hung in the community room of the Putnam Savings bank. The picture, which is beautifully framed, is of a square-rigged bark, all sails set, speeding through a choppy sea.

Willey, house manager of the House in the Pines, a school for young ladies at Norton, Mass. Miss Ellen M. Wheelock took Mrs. Holmes to Norton in her automobile and was accompanied by Mrs. A. S. Macdonald and daughter, Kay.

CHARTER HAS BEEN GRANTED CITIZENS' NATIONAL BANK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Sept. 19.—Official notice that a charter has been granted the Citizens' National bank of Putnam was received Friday, by Judge M. H. Geissler, chairman of the citizens committee by whom the application for a charter was made. The notice was on the usual bland form used in such cases and was signed by Charles W. Collins, deputy comptroller of the currency. In addition to this set form a letter was received signed by the comptroller of the currency, Henry M. Dawes stating that the charter had been granted contingent upon the adjustment being made of taking over the good assets of the old bank, also the banking house, which is among the assets of the First National bank. Barring possible delays, it is now believed that the new bank should be in operation early in November. The bank will be incorporated with a capitalization of $150,000 and a surplus of $75,000. In its application for a charter, the citizens committee agreed to take over the present bank building and the good assets as determined upon after due examinaion of notes and other evidences of indebtedness. The so-called good assets will be determined by a committee consisting of the incorporators, a representative of the comptroller and a representative of the stockholders' protective committee. It is believed that these assets will total over $600,000.

The committee will begin immediately the formation of an organization which will include choosing a board of directors to serve until the stated annual meeting. A responsible and qualified banker from out of the city will be secured to undertake the technical work of perfecting the organization. Several candidates for the undertaking are under consideration. The choice of a president and cashier of the new bank will be a matter of deep consideration, the general feeling of the committee being that these officers will be chosen from out of the city and should be men previously unacquainted with the local banking community.

On receipt of the charter, steps will also be taken to collect the capital and surplus for which $200,000 has already been pledged. Thus the objective sought—a bank owned and controlled by capital advanced from citizens of this banking community, will have been accomplished.

Of interest just now is the fact that excellent apples such as are grown in towns in this section of Windham county are selling at unusually low prices at the orchards. The Lanchester Balancer gives Willys-Knight a vibrationless smoothness unique in a motor car.

Willys-Knight Scores Again

Men and women who drive cars rightly demand the most of them. They render a verdict of enthusiasm for the Willys-Knight. The test of everyday driving proves to them the completeness with which its latest refinement, the Lanchester Balancer, prevents engine vibration at any speed.

Car owners, who object to vibration in open cars, find it amounts to a continually renewed irritation in closed cars. With closed cars coming more widely into use each year, demand for the elimination of engine vibration has grown imperative

Willys-Knight supplies this demand—the Lanchester Balancer conquers vibration. The Balancer makes a better engine of the world's best engine—the famous sleeve-valve motor that improves with use. It registers another achievement for Willys-Knight,—the car that literally outruns its field.

The Willys-Knight with Lanchester Balancer is on view now. Inspect it. Try it out. Then render your verdict.

ARGENTINA HAS POINTS LIKE UNITED STATES

Argentina, which by entertaining the Crown Prince of Italy, is running a few weeks ahead of the United States in extending hospitality to European royal scions has many points in common with the United States, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"A country of fertile plains, vast fields of grain, and tremendous herds of cattle, situated in a temperate zone, it is a land which may easily be understood in its major features by people of the United States familiar with the winning of our West," says the bulletin.

"In this great region, more than four times the area of Texas, and more than one-third ... of the entire United States the Western cattle man might find himself fairly well at home. The language and customs are alien, to be sure. ... it is the language of Spain ... the customs of ... Spanish with which large numbers of the American of our own 'cow country' are familiar. In Argentina prairies become 'pampas,' cow boys are replaced by 'gauchos,' and the lariat must share with the bolo its place as an indispensable part of the equipment. Like his American counterpart, the gaucho is an expert horseman, thoroughly at home in the saddle and somewhat awkward and ill at ease out of it.

"If Argentina livestock men have paralleled American methods they have surpassed their northern fellow herdsman in the magnitude of their operations. On the pampas a herd of 50,000 sheep is considered small. Some herds number more than 800,000 of the animals.

"Part of the great plains of Argentina are devoted to wheat growing to such good effect that many of the more populous European countries have looked for years to this republic of southeastern South America as the main source of supply for materials for their staff of life. The numerous huge grain warehouses that dot the country throughout a large section of Argentina announce unmistakably to the eye of the traveler that this is one of the world's foremost wheat regions.

"Argentina is not alone a pastoral and agricultural country. In Buenos Aires it possesses the largest city situated south of the Equator, a community of between a million and a half and two million inhabitants. Within the past fifteen years this city has forged far ahead of Rio de Janiero which was the former metropolis of the southern hemisphere.

"Buenos Aires is a thoroughly modern city which has lessons in city planning for municipalities of the northern hemisphere. A most pleasing skyline has been achieved through carefully framed building regulations strictly enforced. The streets are lined with trees even in the business sections. The city has the finest artificial docks in the world, commodious, and equipped with the latest machinery.

"Though most visitors entering from the east, see the country as a land of plains, in the west it contains the eastern slopes of the Andes, one of the world's most massive mountain ranges. On the crest of one of the principal Andean passes, on the border line between Argentina and Chile, is one of the world's famous statues: 'The Christ of the Andes.' This figure was set up on the bleak mountain pass in commemoration of the peaceful settlement of a boundary dispute between the two countries, which threatened war.

"Argentina covers a long range of latitude, extending from north of the Tropic of Capricorn to 55 degrees south, a position roughly comparable in the northern hemisphere to that from central Mexico to Hudson Bay."

Chinese Idea of the Deluge.

The tradition of a deluge in China corresponding to the flood as related in the Bible is embodied in the Chinese book "Li-Ki," where it is stated: "And now the pillars of heaven were broken . . . the earth fell to pieces and the waters inclosed within its bosom, burst forth with violence and overflowed. Man having rebelled against heaven, the system of the universe was totally disordered, and the grand harmony of nature destroyed."

COMPULSORY VOTING.

Some well organized efforts are being made this year for the purpose of getting out the vote. There is a realization that there are too many voters who do not go to the polls and who are therefore leaving the result to a part of the electorate.

The importance of participating in elections cannot be too strongly stressed. It should be realized by the voters themselves, but when it isn't good cause exists for creating the necessary interest to get a bigger proportion of the vote to the polls.

In an address which he made this week Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis expressed it as his view that those voters who do not respond to their duty should be put in jail on the occasion of the second offense. This is in support of the idea of compulsory voting, of which there are not a few supporters. But when it comes to forcing voters to go to the polls under the penalty of putting them in jail some consideration must be given to the effect which such action would be bound to have upon the electorate. Far better results might be obtained if the efforts to get votes through enforcement is pursued by removing the right if it is not exercised by those physically able.

What is needed is to develop the interest and the public spirit that will result in a larger vote being cast. This can be done through educational activities and by impressing upon voters the relationship which each one holds to good government through his vote. If the apathy which is encountered at election time is due to the lack of such understanding there is certainly a wide field for operations of that character.

If the right to vote is worth anything it should be utilized, but when it comes to forcing individuals to vote against their will it is like trying to drive a balky mule. They are not only likely to display their resentment in various ways but experience with enforcement is such that it can be appreciated that such a law would be like many of those which now clutter up the statute books—it would be better if they were not there.

WILD AND DANGEROUS.

This country owes what it is today as a large measure to the foresight of those who drafted the Constitution. But for that, with the antics of some of the recent congresses in mind, the situation would have been much different today. The Constitution established rights and institutions, which are part of the nation's bedrock. Yet there are those who would have that bedrock torn out and leave the foundation of this nation resting upon the sands, to be warped this way and that way in response to a temporary, wild impulse.

According to the plan of LaFollette he would remove the restraint which now exists of having congress endeavor to pass laws which conform to the Constitution by giving it the authority to pass judgment upon the constitutionality of its own acts, swayed though it would be by all kinds of influences, blocs and mob dictation. There would be no safeguard for the laws of this country. They would be constantly under attack and interpreted to suit political influences which happened to be strongest. The Constitution would be a weak and spineless thing, subject to the whims and fancies of one group today and the demands of another log rolling group tomorrow.

The Constitution is subject to change when the provisions for making the changes are complied with. The supreme court is the interpreter of the Constitution. It is furnished with authority that would not be secure if placed in the hands of those who are subject to changing political influences. When legislation is enacted that is unconstitutional, that overstepe the authority conferred by the Constitution it is fortunate for the country that there is a court that can so declare. That doesn't mean that such legislation cannot be carried out otherwise, for if there is a sufficient national demand for it it is possible through a constitutional amendment. There are 19 such amendments, and any one way of permitting a blow at the fundamentals of sound government deserves to be rigidly opposed. There can be no opposition to deal with the wild appeals that mean dangerous results.

R. MACMILLAN'S RETURN.

The return of Donald B. MacMillan from his trip into the far north marks the completion of the first exploration trip made under the advantages offered by the radio. It was nothing new for Captain MacMillan and his companions to be subjected to the restrictions and the rigors of arctic conditions. They have been there before and will probably go there again, but it was the first time that he had been able to keep in touch with the outside world, talk with it and hear from it, practically each day.

Data of scientific value has unquestionably been obtained and will be reported in due time. Captain MacMillan will have much that is interesting to tell about his experiences and already he has presented a problem for solution in the statement made concerning his radio troubles. Strange as it might seem it was not the stations that were always nearest him with which he could get into communication. There are times when static conditions give trouble to most of the radio outfits, but the peculiarity of the MacMillan experience was that while he could not receive the communications from stations in the eastern part of this country he had no trouble in getting those from the more distant western stations.

That such means of keeping in touch with what the great world was doing, while being able to tell what was happening to him, was a source of great satisfaction to those on the expedition goes without saying. The contrast is sharp when it is considered that previously only the possibility of a returning messenger, or the entrusting of a message to some other ship headed homeward, made it possible to disclose the situation of the explorers, while they had no means of knowing what was happening elsewhere.

When Captain MacMillan reports that the Greenland glaciers are advancing rather than retreating it means that there is going to be a greater amount of business for the north Atlantic patrol, and that all shipping has reason to accept the warning for such bearing as it may have upon the use of the north Atlantic. Icebergs are not welcome visitors but it is always well to know in advance that they can be expected.

ELECT A COOLIDGE CONGRESS.

Among those who have been speaking in New Hampshire is Senator George W. Pepper of Pennsylvania. He has been unstinted in his praise of President Coolidge and he has emphasized the need of having him reelected as the nation's chief executive.

But he has not overlooked the importance to the nation of having it provided with an equally good congress. There has been a sufficient illustration of what handicaps the country struggles under when there is an irresponsible congress, one that is bent upon making trouble rather than aiding in the carrying out of a much needed programme of legislation. What the country needs is a congress that will meet the requirements of the nation in a diligent and conscientious manner and that will place national welfare before political ambitions.

When Senator Pepper was talking he had in mind, of course, the last congress, which is bound to serve as an example of obstructionists from which the voters are duty bound to steer clear.

The importance of congress cannot be too much emphasized. It is necessary that the chief executive should be given a congress that will be sufficiently committed to his policies to see that they are carried out. Only by so doing can the president be permitted to render the best possible service.

The business of the voters is to not only see that men of the right type and men in whom confidence can be placed are nominated for congress but to bend their best efforts to see that they are elected. That all enters into making the presidential election the success that it ought to be. The nationwide demand for Calvin Coolidge as president should mean the giving to him of a congress that will work with him and not against him.

"PITTSBURG PLUS."

Much has been heard about "Pittsburgh plus." It has been declared to be a practice that was necessary by those steel plants that adopted it. It has been under investigation and by edict of the federal trade commission the practice must stop.

Steel plants are located at different points, some east and some west, some north and some south of Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh is the great steel center. When prices on steel have been obtained they have been quoted with the freight charges as if all the steel products were manufactured in Pittsburgh. This made no difference whether the steel concern was nearer the point of delivery than Pittsburgh or farther away. The freight charge was always figured as if the goods were sent from Pittsburgh regardless of where they came from.

The effort to put an end to "Pittsburgh plus" met with no small opposition. It was strenuously fought before the federal trade commission and elaborate endeavors were made to convince the commission that there was justification for it, and that it ought not to be abolished. The commission looked at the matter from all angles and came to the conclusion that "Pittsburgh plus" must go. It was not a welcomed decision on the part of the big steel companies which had devised the plan and endeavored to have it continued. Nevertheless the decision of the United States Steel company and others to accept the decision without further opposition means that further resistance is regarded as useless. The medicine, even though not desired, is going to be taken.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

On Wednesday evening, September 10, The American-Italian band gave another of their splendid concerts. It was remarkable not only for the variety, but for the excellence of the program. They are all musicians through and through, while their leader is a wonder. He is the very soul of music. The crowd, largely in autos, was appreciative. One thing only marred the pleasure of the evening and that was the disturbance on the part of young hoodlums, who did exactly as they pleased without the least interference. It was running, yelling, scrapping from the first number to the last. Those in their machines, only a few rods away, could not hear the low, soft parts of the music, and no one wanted to lose a single strain. Nobody but a crank objects to children's playing, but boys and girls in their early 'teens ought to have better manners.

According to reports that come to us from abroad, China is again in the midst of factional strife. Poor to begin with she will again, as heretofore, face dire want. And this will come frightfully soon after the fighting is over. Is not this the monotonous logic of all her scrappings. When order has been restored there will doubtless be the usual begging appeals to America for help, and we will send millions to stave off starvation. One is inclined to ask what action has been taken by the league of nations in the matter. We are told that more than forty countries make up the membership of the league. If so why doesn't the league show its functioning power in stopping this Chinese scrimmage? Surely the league cannot be waiting for the United States to come in for that. The chance is a fine one for showing its utility.

Evidence is unmistakably showing that the rapid increase of automobile accidents is largely due to liquor dringing. And the worst feature of it is that it is the sober, innocent party who gets injured most. It may be that this state of things will be the means of putting the 'fun' business down. Rum drinking and automobile driving cannot go together. The one or the other must go. The automobile has proven itself too valuable to be given up lightly. It may be that the people will rise up in their might and say "no more rum." And when the American people speak with some show of authority things usually move. The manner in which the law at present deals with rum soaked drivers is clearly a travesty on justice. There is a man living not more than a thousand miles from Norwich who has had his license revoked three times and who was seen not long since driving again under the influence of liquor. It is enough to make one ask, "O Lord, how long!"

Now is the time, brother man, to take your strolls across the fields and up into the hills and forests. It is too hot to do it in July and August, and it is apt to be too cold in late October and November. The air is very bracing now and vegetation has not been deadened by the frost. The blue asters are in the very perfection of their beauty. This is the time of all the year to do good work along this line. Leave your Ford section in the garage just for awhile and get out of the traveled highway into the fields. If you keep in close touch with nature you will feel the urge of the wild. The cooler weather has clarified the atmosphere and you will get the clear far vision which is impossible when the air is shimmering with the heat. Remember the sign you have over your desk. "Do it now."

The 19th of September, 1821, is a date that some thousands of good American men are interested in and one of them is the chief executive of the United States. On this date Amherst college first opened her doors to students, and students have been coming annually ever since. It was an anxious time because it was an experiment, and, from the outlook of that day, it was a daring experiment. In 1820 the population of Massachusetts did not exceed a half million. For nearly two hundred years Harvard had been in existence, and seemed to meet the needs of the eastern part of the state in this direction. In 1793 a charter had been granted to Williams college not more than thirty miles away as the crow flies. It was a daring adventure that called forth not only faith but courage and vigor of mind to make it a success. The founders of the institution watered its roots with their tears, but they also prayed and worked. It was the sweat of body and soul that made it succeed.

A date 74 years ago today (September 20, 1850,) is much easier to remember. It covers the major part of the lives of many men still living who are not yet twisted out of shape by rheumatism, and who do not tell the same story twice to the same person within ten minutes. We are apt to forget it because what it records was quite overshadowed by the bigger things that convulsed this nation ten years later. On September 2, 1850, slavery was abolished from the District of Columbia. The clearing of so small an area of the slave curse in itself meant very little. The District of Columbia is only a drop in the bucket when compared with the solid south. But it was the psychology, the moral influence of the act that gave a tremor to the whole institution. The sound of the bell was low, but it tolled a death knell. The great coming event had surely cast its shadow before.

No more vital question is before the American people today than that of racial inequalities. Can they be entirely abolished? If not can they be lessened? If so what are the agencies that can do it, and how? If you can find anyone big enough to answer these questions satisfactorily you will find a big man. Nature revels in inequality, and without it the surface of the earth would be a dreary dead level. Human life presents even more striking inequalities. A child is born with symetry of feature and form and will carry them through life. Into the same family is born a child ugly in body and will be contemptible in mind and they will be with him from the cradle to the grave. This always has been and always will be. There are unfortunate races as there are unfortunate individuals. If we cannot eradicate, may we not lessen, these racial inequalities?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Child Labor Amendment.

Mr. Editor: I have recently made something of a study of the subject of the proposed "child labor amendment" to the Constitution. In the various periodicals whose articles on the subject I have read, I have not found one copy of the amendment—plenty of opinions are offered but the amendment itself is not given. Will you be kind enough to print the text of the proposed amendment in full?

Yours truly,
MALCOLM R. WIBBERLEY.
Canterbury, Sept. 18, 1924.

The amendment submitted for ratification to the states is as follows:

That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-quarters of the several states shall be valid to all extents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

Section 1. The congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age.

Section 2. The power of the several states is unimpaired by this article, except that the operation of state laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the congress.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

The Lost Sheep.

There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.—Luke 15:10.

The parable of the lost sheep represents us all. A sinner is like a sheep astray, because he is away from security, plenty and care, and torn and tired and bleeding and about to die. It needs but "one" sheep to go astray to arouse the shepherd. The one sheep astray is an object of greater interest and care than ninety and nine safely folded. This interest is active. He "goes after that which is lost." This going after involves labor, weariness, pain and self-sacrifice. He keeps up the search "until he finds it." This does not teach that Jesus follows every sinner until He finds him, but it does teach that He follows a "sheep" astray until He finds it, not one who is really His own will ever be lost. The ninety and nine were not uncared for. They are represented by the saved souls on earth.

The sheep found, the shepherd lays it upon his shoulders. Jesus carries sinner whom He saves. We are kept and carried by His power and grace and it is with joy that He lays it upon His shoulder. Christ rejoices over the sinner saved. God rejoices in the sinner's salvation more than the sinner himself. He carries the lost sheep "home." He does not lay it down until He gets it all the way there. Christ never lays down the sinner until He gets him safe home. He does not scold but strengthens and encourages. So Christians should treat returning sinners not with harshness but with infinite tenderness.

The Son of Man was never happier than when He could save those who were lost, and never sadder than when He saw that there were some who would not accept the proffered salvation.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. George Ellery Hale, who is building a private astronomical observatory in Pasadena to carry on his investigations of the sun is regared by many as America's leading solar physicist. As an astronomer and author of books on natural scientific subjects, he has an international reputation. He is a native of Chicago and received his collegiate education in Massachusetts Institute of Technology. For ten years he was connected with the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago as faculty member and director. From 1907 until his retirement two years ago he was in charge of the Mt. Wilson Observatory, near Pasadena, which he helped to establish. In recognition of his work in studying solar phenomena Dr. Hale has received the Actonian prize of the Royal Institute of Great Britain, the Janssen medal of the Astronomical Society of France, and honors from other scientific societies both at home and abroad.

Industrial Europe Waits For Raising of Curtain

With signing of the Dawes reparations pact now a matter of history, the three principal industrial nations of Europe are alert and watchful for the first steps toward commercial rehabilitation. The stage is set for the next act in a drama which has been all tragedy. Study of the situation gives the observer a sense of being behind the scenes, waiting for the curtain to go up, declares Edward J. Mehren, formerly editor of Engineering News-Record, a noted industrialist, just back from an extended first-hand tour and study of England, France and Germany.

The question of markets is uppermost. World trade must go on. Manufacturers and workingmen alike are impatient for the tearing down of war-made barriers to their natural and logical markets. Lorraine's furnaces need the coal of the Ruhr and that province can get its cheapest iron from Lorraine.

Industrially, Europe has been waiting for deliverance from a plague. The spectres of unemployment and poverty have gone hand in hand with political exploitation and experiment. The workingman wants to get back to the bench and the lathe. Orders for the great manufacturing centers are necessary for the restoration of jobs to those who want them. With the world's markets restricted as they are now, these jobs are not to be had.

Outstanding Features

Three features stand out in the European situation:

First, and most striking, Germany's remarkable recovery, following upon her success in stabilizing the mark without new revolution or disorder.

Second, the contrast in the attitude toward labor in England and Germany. In England, there is a general complaint against the worker for his inefficiency and loss of self-reliance. In Germany, there is no complaint, but rather commendation. The contrast is significant of probable industrial development.

Third, the fact that France now realizes she must develop a friendly relationship with Germany.

Of the three leading industrial countries of Europe—England, Germany and France—England at present seems to be in the most troubled condition. She has the largest unemployment of the three; her public generally, as noted above, complain of the attitude of the workers; her business and industrial leaders are troubled about the future.

Germany, of course, is not out of difficulties. She has tremendous handicaps in the loss of important industrial areas, in the disappearance of her merchant marine and foreign trade connections and in the shortage of her credit facilities. But, she has regained her confidence and her people believe Germany again can become an industrial power. They are working at more nearly pre-war efficiency than are the workers of Great Britain and their employers have no word of complaint against them. There are only 400,000 unemployed (June figures) as against more than 1,000,000 in Great Britain. Incidentally, Germany has not pauperized her workers with unlimited employment doles. Unemployment relief in Germany comes from the insurance funds, and to obtain relief one must have worked within a year.

The great turn in Germany came with the stabilization of the mark. Until then, the government doubted its own strength. But the stabilization was put through without revolution or disorder. That established the fact that Germany had returned to respect for authority and that the possibility of revolution had disappeared. With the stabilization of the mark, the orgy of spending was terminated; the incentive to save, to return to Germany's traditional thrift, was restored.

In that one act—of stabilization—Germany turned from disease to health from the downward to the upward path. With the exit of the worthless mark went out at the same time undernourishment and its attendant ills of inefficiency and discontent. Germany is not in perfect health financially or industrially, but she is distinctly better than she was and is improving steadily. The credits under the Dawes plan will greatly accelerate this improvement.

France, the third of the industrial nations, is busy, she has no unemployment. In fact, in 1923, 962,000 industrial and agricultural workers came into France, with the assistance, be it noted, of the Ministries of Labor and of agriculture. But the unemployment situation may change. Government payments for reconstruction have ceased; that work, which gave employment to so many in France, not only in the devastated regions, but elsewhere (through the manufacture of building materials), is drawing to a close. That gives some concern for the immediate future. Again, France has a serious difficulty in her unbalanced budget, unbalanced because she has been obliged herself to raise the enormous sums required for reconstruction. If the payments materialize as expected under the Dawes plan, the budget situation will be relieved.

Political Situation

The political situation on the continent—as contrasted with the industrial—has greatly improved in recent months. France realizes now that force is ineffective to secure reparations. At the same time she has seen the rapid German recovery in the face of all handicaps. Recognising these facts, her policy toward Germany is being shaped to fit them. Herriot has been more reasonable than Poincare, a sign of the growing feeling that there must be developed a commercial accord with Germany, followed by the growth of understanding, if not of amity. Lorraine iron and Ruhr coal are, but their proximity, economically allied. The Ruhr should be able to get its iron more cheaply from Lorraine than elsewhere. The Ruhr steel mills, therefore, are the logical customers for the furnaces of Lorraine. Lorraine, on the other hand, needs the Ruhr coal. Commercial arrangements to facilitate this interchange is but the policy of sensible business men. That being effected, an amicable political relationship may follow.

For the peace of Europe no development is to be more desired than a friendly relationship between these continental neighbors. The growing German strength, if accompanied by hatred for France, would bode no good for Europe.

On the whole, Europe, facing the promises of the greatest experiment in the history of international trade, makes on the student of conditions an impression of hopefulness. England, with her persistence, will work out of her difficulties, though a firm hand is needed to stop the pauperizing effect of unrestricted unemployment doles. Germany, as has been seen, has made great strides since stabilization of her currency.

Acceptance by Seymour Parker Gilbert, Jr., of the post of agent general for reparation payments finds the confidence of Europe being restored.

With restoration of full confidence will come credits, orders and renewed industrial activity. With the Dawes plan in full operation, there should be great progress in the next two years in bringing back to all countries a normal industrial life.

Alice Freeman Palmer's Duties Ever Present

Almost from babyhood Alice Freeman had something waiting to be done.

Born on a farm at Colesville, N. Y., she helped with the dishes at 4. At 6 she became "little mother" to her three brothers and sisters, and at 7 she took charge of the housekeeping while her mother ran the farm and her father prepared at Albany to be a doctor.

Attending the country school she wished that she could be a teacher. She was 9 when her father returned from college and soon afterward took the family to live in Windsor, Mass. There she visited his patients with him, and when she told him of her desire to attend college he demurred because he could afford to give only one child a higher education, and that should be a boy, who some day would have a family to support. But she gained her point, studied at Windsor Academy and took the examination for entrance to the University of Michigan, only to find that she was not sufficiently prepared.

President Angell of the university interceded, she was given a six weeks' trial, and succeeded.

While in her junior year she was forced to make her way unaided, her father having met with financial reverses. By teaching at Ottawa, Ill., in five months she earned enough to complete her college course.

Taking the family to East Saginaw, Mich., she became principal of the public schools. Soon afterward came an invitation to teach at Wellesley college, but the family needed her. Later, just as conditions at home began to improve, her favorite sister died.

Soon afterward came another call from Wellesley and at 24 she became instructor of history. A year later the president died and she succeeded him. She was remarkably successful in raising the standards of instruction, constructed several buildings and saw the membership increase.

After six years of active work she resigned, and married Prof. George H. Palmer of Harvard. She retained her place on the executive committee of Wellesley, aided the undergraduates, served on the Massachusetts State Board of Education and later was Dean of Women at the University of Chicago.

Many honors were showered upon her and she was acclaimed and beloved as one of the leading educators of the world.

All Maxwell dealers are in position to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan.

The engineering group who share credit for the sweeping success of the good Maxwell, have high reputations to maintain.

You will realize how much that statement means when you remember that these men designed the Chrysler Six.

It is the same group which has built into the good Maxwell, performance worthy of a car three times its price.

If you examine into the basic reasons for such performance, and for Maxwell's economical, care-free service, you discover things like these:

That both the new transmission and new rear axle are strong and rugged enough for a truck.

That the extensive use of fine bearings eliminates friction to such an extent that with one hand you can roll the car on a level floor or street.

That the heavy, perfectly balanced crankshaft floats on a film of oil maintained under force-feed pressure in its oversize bearings—thus reducing wear to the point where there is practically no need for bearing replacement.

That the release or throwout bearing of the new clutch—often a prolific cause of trouble and expense because of poor lubrication—is positively and automatically lubricated from the transmission.

That at all vital points the good Maxwell uses the same kinds of alloy and heat-treated steels employed in the costliest cars.

That in proportion to weight, it is actually stronger than cars costing two, three or even four times as much.

That the rear axle drive pinion, which bears the brunt of propelling the car, is rigidly mounted on bearings which preserve permanent alignment and quiet.

That the frame, in addition to its unusual depth of six inches is braced by six stout cross members.

Such superiority in material, in construction, in engineering design, is bringing new thousands to the conviction that the Maxwell is not only a good car, but that it is actually better than anything at anywhere near its price.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Yellow Dog Tramp for Breakfast

The Old Red Rooster crowed three times
And then he crowed once more.
Little Miss Mousie slipped out of bed
And tip-toed over the floor.

"I mustn't wake Uncle Lucky," she said.
As she carefully brushed her pretty bobbed head.
Then down to the kitchen she went tippy-toe
To put in the oven the carrot cake dough.

By and by, not so very long, dear Uncle Lucky opened his eyes, and pulling his night cap off his head, he pushed up the covers and hopped out of bed.

By and by Uncle Lucky opened his eyes.

"Lovely morning," he said, looking out of the open window, where over the lawn Billy Breeze was playing hide-and-seek with the fallen leaves. "Lovely morning. Yes, Mr. Merry Sun is shining on the dewdrop in the grass. Wish I were one and twenty and loved a bunny lass," and the old gentleman rabbit sighed. Maybe he should have smiled, for the next minute he did on hearing Little Miss Mousie call at the foot of the stairs:

"The turnip tea is ready.
And the griddle cakes are done.
Oh, please come in a jiffy
And eat at least a ton."

"Goodness gracious meebus," answered dear Uncle Lucky. "Do you wish me to have an attack of indigestion?"

"I won't let that happen," she answered, "please hurry."

Just then who should knock on the kitchen door but the Yellow Dog Tramp. Dear me, but he looked dreadfully forlorn. His coat was all tattered and torn, and his old straw hat had lost its brim.

"Come in for breakfast," invited kind-hearted Little Miss Mousie. "Uncle Lucky will be right down. He over-slept himself this morning," and placing another chair at the table, she bustled over to the cupboard for a tea cup.

"Well, I'm glad it's you and not the gas man with a bill," laughed the dear old gentleman rabbit, hopping in from the hall. "Sit right down, Miss Mousie will be glad to hear the news. The Bunnybridge Bugle sometimes has nothing about Mouseville."

"Is that your hat over there on the peg?" asked kind hearted Uncle Lucky all of a sudden, setting down his cup of turnip tea. "Where's the brim?"

"Don't know," answered the Yellow Dog Tramp.

"You don't need your old felt hat, do you?" asked Little Miss Mousie, turning to Uncle Lucky.

"No, indeed—" answered the old gentleman rabbit. "Give it to him. 'Twill last for a year and not lose its brim." My goodness! Dear Uncle Lucky could speak in poetry all right, couldn't he, little reader? Maybe he had read Shakespeare when a boy.

Pretty soon he and the Yellow Dog Tramp went out to look at the strawberry patch, while Little Miss Mousie tidied up the house.

"I love to help this bunny man.
He is so kind and good.
I'd do most anything for him,
Except bring in the wood."

She sang as she placed his slippers by the old armchair.

BELIEVE INCENDIARY SET FIRE TO EAST SIDE CHICKEN COOP

Incendiarism is suspected in connection with a fire which was discovered at midnight Friday in a shed formerly used as a hen coop in the rear of No. 429 Main street. The fire department was called out by telephone and arriving found the flames breaking through the roof of the coop. With the aid of chemical and a stream of water from an inch and a half hose line the fire was squelched.

Moses Ballou, who occupies the premises, stated that there were no chickens in the coop and that none of the family had had occasion to go into the coop Friday. The firemen found that the fire had started on a door which had been stored there by suspending it on two sticks in the coop. It is thought that someone entered the coop and set fire to some articles piled on the door. The fire blazed up and worked its way through the roof. The damage was slight.

In spite of the lateness of the hour there was a good sized crowd of spectators on hand to watch the progress of the fire. Several of the fair sex numbered in the audience were wearing coats over their nightgowns. The property is owned by John E. Hawkins.

HARTFORD OFFICE RECEIVES HEAVY INCOME TAXES

The large amounts of money being paid at the Hartford office of the internal revenue collector on income taxes indicate that many taxpayers are including the last installment payment with this third quarterly installment due last Monday. The fact that corporations having a fiscal year ending on June 30 had to pay their corporation taxes by September 15 is another reason for the unusually large sum of money coming into the Hartford office. More money has been sent to the collector's office by taxpayers for this quarter than for any other installment so far this year. Payments totalling $3,638,335.62 have come in so far this week and it is esmated there that well over $150,000 more is yet to come. On Tuesday the heaviest mail of the week brought in $1,566,333.31. Thursday's mail brought $187,548.14.

In spite of the work of handling the income tax payments, the Hartford office is sending out over $1,000 refund checks each day and will have them all mailed to taxpayers before the end of this month. Many taxpayers were able to take advantage of the income tax reduction and pay the remainder of their income tax in full with this quarter.

APPLIED FOR $200 AT WESTERLY BANK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, Sept. 19.—Michael Butler, 28, giving his home address as 222 East Main street, New Britain, visited the Washington Trust Company banking rooms in Westerly this morning, seeking $200. When informed that he had no funds there he was reported to have stated that he had money in the National bank of New Britain. Banking officials telephoned the New Britain bank and obtained the reply that there were no funds in the bank in the man's name. Thomas Perry of the Washington bank asked for the payment of the telephone bill and found the man was without money and called Patrolman Michael Curtin, who took the man to the station house.

After questioning Butler, Patrolman Curtin found that he had left the Norwich state hospital Thursday night after supper and walked to Westerly, arriving here as men were going to work. Butler said that he had walked all night and had nothing to eat, but having visited a restaurant had been given a cup of coffee as he was without a nickel. Officer Curtin telephoned the Norwich hospital a description of the man and was informed that the authorities would come here to return the man to the state institution.

VISITED TEXTILE MILLS TO STUDY ABSENTEEISM

Connecticut textile mills are among the mills that have been visited, their records inspected and their employes interviewed by the women's bureau of the department of labor in the work of discovering the extent and causes of absenteeism among women employed in such mills, according to a report of the department of labor concerning the work of the women's bureau.

This investigation to discover the extent and causes of absenteeism among women employed in the textile mills is one of the most important being carried on by the bureau, the report states, and adds:

"The bureau has received many cordial and helpful cooperation from manufacturers in all parts of the country, and the study has awakened considerable interest among employers and industrial experts.

"From experimental compilation of the data already gathered there seems to be an excessive amount of absenteeism but sufficient analysis of the material has not yet been made to discover to what extent these absences are voluntary or enforced by conditions in the plant or the industry. It seems that the findings may comprise also a contribution to the subject of labor turnover.

WALLINGFORD POWER PLANT REDUCING ELECTRIC RATES

The Wallingford electric light commissioners have voted to reduce the rates charged by the borough electric light works for electricity beginning October 1. The reduction, the commissioners say, will be about twenty-five per cent., amounting to from four to five cents per kilowatt. This reduction, according to Superintendent A. L. Pierce, is due to the large surplus that this borough department has accumulated. The law allows municipal light plants to carry only certain surplus and the local sum is in excess of that permitted. Consequently money will be returned to the borough people in the form of reduced costs.

ARGUES IN COURT AND GETS DISCHARGE

John Brewer, a local character, better known as "Doc" Brewer, presented in the city court Friday morning on a charge of breach of the peace, defended himself in such an able manner, that the court discharged him. Brewer was arrested about 2 o'clock Friday morning on the West Side. At that hour a man drove up to Officer Driscoll who was at the Breed building corner, Washington square, and told him a man was scaring people in the vicinity of Summit street. Officer Driscoll and Officer Donovan investigated the matter and found Brewer asleep on an old couch in the rear of one of the houses.

Brewer entered pleas of not guilty to both charges against him and then proceeded to act as his own attorney. He told of taking a few drinks and circling the city through rear alleys, headed for the West Side to visit his sister. He came across the couch and went to sleep on it. The accused informed the court that he had a room and as evidence to back up his statement exhibited a large door key which he took from his optical case. Judge Libby discharged him.

One man was fined for intoxication and another man was fined for violating a city ordinance. A local man charged with parking his car on Franklin street between 10.30 Thursday night and 5 o'clock Friday morning, had his case nolled.

SAFE DRIVING BULLETIN IS MAKING BIG HIT

Approximately 6,000 extra copies of the September bulletin of the state motor vehicle department dealing with the menace of wilfully negligent and thoughtless operation have been requested within less than a week from the date of issue. Factory heads and the managers of large commercial houses maintaining big automobile delivery systems have asked the department to furnish a specified number of each month's issue for distribution among their drivers in an effort to improve their driving.

Since the department began the publication of a monthly bulletin in May, 1923, its circulation has grown to nearly 5,000 a month and, if the present demand is met, the press run will have to be increased to 11,000. The bulletin was suspended during the winter months last year but it will be continued this year throughout the winter.

It is a fact known by the statistics of the department that there has been a decrease during the past few months in the serious motor vehicle accidents in Connecticut in proportion to the total registration, which may be due to a general tightening up by drivers in the simple rules of operation. Since it has been discovered that a great percentage of accidents are due to simple departures from good driving practices, the department bulletins have been down on the kinds of mistakes which cause most of the highway tragedies reported. The bulletins are written in language which is not "over the heads" of the average drivers, and the absence of technical terms has encouraged the reading of them by those who would do their part to make driving safer in Connecticut. In the current issue, for instance, considerable space is given to the matter of improper parking, coasting down hill, skidding, and imperfect equipment, all of which are causes of hundreds of serious accidents every month.

STAFFORD FATHER AND SON BOTH DESERTED WIVES

Mrs. Clara Marr Armstrong of Stafford Springs was granted a divorce from Harry James Armstrong in the Tolland county superior court at Rockville on the grounds of desertion. Judge Allyn L. Brown, of Norwich, tried this case which was the only civil case on the docket for the day. In addition to receiving the decree, Mrs. Armstrong was allotted a judgment of $15 per week for the support of her three children.

Mrs. Armstrong was married October 13, 1913 at which time her husband was assistant postmaster at Stafford. During February, 1917, unpleasantness arose in the family and the husband told his wife that he wanted a divorce. A letter was presented by Mrs. Armstrong from her husband dated October 6, 1921, saying that he would never live with her again. This letter also said if she did not start divorce proceedings he would.

Mrs. Armstrong testified that she never received financial aid from her husband for several years although money was received for the children. When asked by the court why she wanted the divorce Mrs. Armstrong replied, "to take a load off my mind."

Among those who testified for Mrs. Armstrong was Mrs. Sarah J. Armstrong, mother of Harry Armstrong, the defendant, who said that her son was following in the path of his father, who deserted her a number of years ago. Other witnesses testified in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. The decree was granted without argument with an allowance of $15 a week for the children, payable every two weeks.

TOM MURPHY DRIVES CZAR WORTHY TO WORLD'S RECORD AT TOLEDO TRACK

Toledo, Sept. 19.—When Tommy Murphy drove Czar Worthy around Fort Miam, track in 2.01 1-4, here today, another world's record was smashed, for this was the fastest mile ever traveled by a gelding in a race. The record mile was trotted in the second heat of the Steadman trot, purse $5,000, feature event of the closing Grand Circuit card. Murphy won the event easily with Czar Worthy, winning the first heat in 2.03 1-4 and the third in 2.03. These three heats were the fastest three heats ever traveled by a gelding in a race. La Paloma, with Wolverton driving, won the 2.04 pace, taking the final two heats after Richard Hall, with Mallow up, had won the first mile.

The 2.15 trot went to Jeritza, Ackerman up, and the 2.10 pace was taken by Dickerman, Erskine in the sulky, in straight heats.

REDS GO INTO FOURTH PLACE BY BEATING PHILLIES

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—Cincinnati went into fourth place today by defeating Philadelphia 9 to 5 while the Giants were defeating the Cubs. Rube Benton started the game for the Reds but was relieved after the third inning when the locals scored seven runs and took the lead. Dibut pitched the remainder of the game and held the Phillies to three hits. The visitors rallied behind his excellent pitching and won out easily. The score:

PIRATES DOWN DODGERS IN LOOSELY PLAYED GAME

Brooklyn, Sept. 19.—Pittsburgh conquered Brooklyn today in the first game of duel between these pennant rivals and advanced to within a game of second place Robins. A crowd of 25,000 saw the Pirates win 4 to 2, in a loosely played game.

Kremer was wild but hard at times, pitched effectively in the pinches, had good support, and registered his fourth victory out of five starts against the Robins. Rube Ehrhardt started on the mound for Brooklyn but was relieved after being shelled for six hits and three runs in four innings. Johnson held the Pirates in check the rest of the game.

Errors by Brooklyn contributing to the visitors downfall by loose play in the second inning, missed several good opportunities to score. The Robins filled the sack for four hits in the inning, forcing the bases with only one run scoring only once. A fine stop by Wright, Brown's smash over second base and Cuyler's running catch of Wheat's fly were defensive factors that checked the Robins' rally.

Some of Maranville's three errors helped Brooklyn score in the first, but Wright squared the count with a home run in the second and the Pirates rallied for two runs, their deciding margin, in the [illegible]

In this frame, Smith got three bases when his single went through Wheat's legs while scratch hits by Yde and Cuyler also figured in the scoring. Cuyler was the individual star of the game, bagging three hits and as many stolen bases in addition to sterling play in the field. Score

HART WINS SENIOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Rye, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Claude M. Hart, of Brookline, Mass., won the United States' senior Golf association's senior championship by defeating Henry S. Redfield of Hartford, Conn., by seven strokes in the play-off at the Apawamis club here today.

Hart had a 77 for the 18 holes against Redfield's 84. A topped drive on the first tee and a short mashie pitch to the second green left Hart a stroke behind Redfield but he regained this and went into the lead by holing out a 30-foot putt for a birdie 3 against Redfield's 6. He was never headed.

Hart had a four stroke lead at the turn with a 38 against Redfield's 42. Hart came in in 39, and Redfield repeated his performance of the first nine by scoring another 42. The cards:

GIANTS WIN EASY GAME FROM CUBS

New York, Sept. 19.—The New York Giants retained the lead in the National league today by defeating the Chicago Cubs, 10 to 4. Nehf was in fine form for the league leaders and pitched brilliantly until the later innings when he eased up due to the big lead gained by his teammates. The victory was disastrous to the Giants, however, as Heinie Groh, the Giants' third baseman, was injured when he threw out his knee in sliding into third base. The extent of the injury is not known. HAGEN WILL OPPOSE JIM BARNES IN FINALS FOR NATIONAL PRO GOLF CROWN

French Lick, Ind., Sept. 19.—(By the A. P.)—Walter Hagen of New York, holder of the British open title, will play Jim Barnes, former National open champion in the finals for the National professional golf championship at French Lick Springs, both having survived the day's 36 hole matches, although Barnes had the narrowest escape he has experienced since Mike Brady took him 39 holes in the first round.

Hagen had no difficulty in eliminating Ray Derr, Philadelphia, by the wide margin of 8 and 7, but Barnes appeared to be the loser in his match witch Larry Nabholtz, of Lima, Ohio, until they had played their second shots on the 36th hole, and threre the sturdy youngster who forced Barnes to shoot even par the entire distance, committed again a fault that had cost him several strokes during the day—over-approaching on his second shot to the green.

Thus the finals bring together two veterans of the game—Hagen, who sprang into prominence 10 years ago by winning the National open title at Chicago, and Barnes, a native of England, who has been prominent in championship golf for many years but has captured few titles.

Hagen stepped away from Young Derr on the first nine this morning, although he took 37. Hagen got a lead of two up on the first three holes. The putting stroke that had made Derr famous during the tournament failed him today and he took 41 for the first nine. Three down at the first turn, Derr braced somewhat on the second nine and by shooting par 36 kept Hagen's lead to three at the end of the first round.

Hagen started out better than par in the afternoon, taking only 33 strokes for he first nine holes, while Derr slipped continuously, until Hagen was eight up during the home stretch. A couple of holes halved in par on the final nine ended the match with Hagen a victor eight and seven. The cards:

Hagen, out a. m., 445 343 545—37.—Derr, out a. m., 344 454 755—41.—Hagen, in a. m., 444 454 344-36—73.—Derr, in a. m., 545 344 344-36—77.—Hagen, out p. m., 434 343 453—33.—Derr, out p. m., 444 354 554—38.—Hagen, in p. m., 44.—Derr, in p. m., 44.

The real match of the day was that between Barnes and Nabholtz. Although he won the first hole, Barnes went one down at the fourth in the morning and by losing the fifth and the ninth, was three down at the end of the first nine holes. He was never even until the 25th hole, where by laying Nabholtz a stymie he managed to square the match, only to lose the next two holes.

BERLENBACK KAYOES REDDICK IN EIGHTH

New York, Sept. 19.—Paul Berlenbach, New York's sensational light-heavyweight knocked out Jack Reddick of Toronto, Canada, in the 8th round of a 12 round match at Madison Square Garden tonight.

The end came after one minute and 24 seconds of fighting in the concluding round when one of Berlenbach's heavy rights landed solidly to Reddick's body and the Canadian boy crumpled in a battered heap in his own corner.

It was a thrilling battle from the start. The tide of victory and defeat was shifty, Reddick almost having Berlenback out in the sixth round when a series of right hand punches thrown with trip-hammer rapidity made the New York boy groggy and it appeared for a time as though he were out on his feet, but he gamely rallied, came back strong in the seventh and started his drive that eventually brought about the finishing blow.

SUB BASE OPENS FOOTBALL SEASON THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 19.—The Submarine Base football season will be officially inaugurated Saturday afternoon on the Sailors athletic field at 3 o'clock. The Base team was sent through a short but snappy drill here this afternoon, and but two plays of real scrimmages were on the afternoons program. Taking out men occupied the attention of the Base staff of Coaches, and several of the plays were walked through to get accustomed to the shifts. The cutting out of scrimmage was to prevent some last minute injuries to the first string men, and the signal drill proved to be an able substitute for the scrimmage.

At a late hour this afternoon, the Base coaches had not made up their decision as to the lineup that will be used in the initial contest of the year.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch

Ninth inning. Man on first with one out. Team at bat 3 runs behind. Ball hit sharply to second baseman.

How should second baseman make the play?

When the team in the field has a 3-run lead in the 9th inning, it's infielders should not hurry plays, especially on hard hit balls. Two many infielders throw the ball, when it is hard hit before they have it firmly in their hand. The result is they either make a wild toss or they drop the ball. Under such conditions an infielder should always make sure of getting one man out. He doesn't have to hurry and he certainly should not.

Copyright, 1924, Sal Metzger.

It is expected that the coaches will meet sometime this evening for the purpose of selecting the team that will start the fray. Just what opposition the U. S. S. Wright will furnish is unknown, but the Base will have a number of substitutes ready to fill any position in an emergency.

Following the annual custom of presenting the baseball squad with gold emblems the entire squad at the government reservation repaired to the Hotel Mohican on Wednesday evening and partook of a fine banquet, put up by the hotel staff of cooks. The banquet was in the form of a testimonial for the entire squad for the conscientious efforts they put forth during the past season to make the season a successful one.

Short talks were made by Lieutenant J. E. Arnold, athletic director at the Base, and Captain R. E. Hawes of the nine, Lieut. J. H. Sprague and Ensign E. R. Burgin.

The members of the squad to receive the gold emblems were as follows: J. T. House, C. Orsi, K. G. Harrel, W. G. Moore, E. F. Le Blanc, J. T. Nicholson, A. E. Anderson, S. O. Locke, D. T. Widner, A. TIGERS HAUL YANKEES INTO SECOND PLACE

Detroit, Sept. 19.—A smashing finish that drove Sam Jones from the box in the eighth and brought the winning run home in the ninth on a single off Hoyt, resulted in the defeat of the New York Yankees, 6 to 5, today by Detroit. The defeat dropped New York into second place.

With the score tied, Cobb started the winning rally in the last of the ninth, grounding to Dugan. The Tiger manager went all the way to third and the signal drill proved to be an able substitute for the scrimmage.

THREE WORLD'S RECORDS BEATEN BY HAUGDAHL

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 19.—Sig Haughdahl, world's champion dirt track driver, today shattered three world's records over the half mile track at the Eastern States Exposition, captured the two, three and four mile races with new marks. He held the previous records for these events, which he established in this city two years ago.

In the two mile event, Haugdahl circled the track in 1.55 4-5 more than a second faster than the old record, or the three miles race, the Norwegian driver was clocked in 2.56 4-5, 3 1-5 seconds faster than the record he made two years ago. The time for the fourth mile event was 3.56 4-5.

SENATORS TAKE LEAD BY BEATING BROWNS

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—By hitting six Brown pitchers freely and taking advantage of the locals' four errors, the Washington team took today's game here, 15 to 9, and thus regaining the undisputed lead of the American league, due to the Yankees defeat by Detroit.

The Senators started the game in hard hitting fashion, batting Dixie Davis and Van Gilder from the box before the side was retired in the opening inning. Fourteen men of the visiting team faced the three Brown pitchers of this inning, in which the Senators scored 9 runs, 2 singles by McNeely, one each by Goslin, Rice, Harris, and Judge, a double by Peck, two passes, a hit batsman and McManus' bad throw to the plate gave the Senators a commanding lead of nine runs in the opening inning.

Three more runs were added in the fifth inning, on four successive singles by McNeely, Rice Harris and Goslin, a walk and a hit batsman. One more score in the seventh, on a pass, a double and a sacrifice and two more in the eighth on two singles and a double ended the visitors' scoring.

The Browns counted four of their runs in the fourth inning, when Mogridge was driven from the box and relieved by Marberry. Four straight singles by Robertson, Sisler, Williams, McManus and Gerber's double produced the four scores. One each in the fifth and eighth and three in the seventh finished the Browns' runs of scoring.

In all the visiting team collected 18 hits off the six Browns' pitchers. Score:

EAST SIDE IS ALL SET FOR SUNDAY'S GAME

Baseball mad ever since the robins chirped their first chirp early last spring, last night found everyone on the East Side in a state of wild frenzy as the day of the big game of the season draws nearer. While both teams have posted a one hundred dollar side bet on Sundays game it represents only pin money compared to the wild betting that has been going on over the bridge since this game has been arranged. On every street corner, in every home, and even in every back yard the main topic is "The big and final game between the Married Men and Single Men of the East Side that is to be played Sunday at the Duwell field. The whole East Side once united and together is now divided into two factions, one for the Married Men and the other against them. Autos, radios, furniture and even the stuff that usually rests peacefully behind a padlock in the cellar are now mortgaged to the limit to make ready cash to be laid on the game. Should the Single Men win they can smoke the best of cigars for years to come but should they lose the only way that they will be able to get a smoke is to scour the gutters for other people's butts as every cent that they ever earned or owned is wagered that the one and only Berger Colberg, idol of every fan that ever warmed a bleacher will again send the Benedicts down to defeat.

Manager Pedace has had his athletes out for practice every night this week and is confident that the boys will return easy winners as they work together like the works of a Waltham. Although he gave his team their last workout last night, this afternoon will be spent at the Duwell field where Berger will work behind closed doors, working out his many curves and hooks and also the new "black" ball a new deadly trick that he has developed during the week.

With Manager Cook out of town Sunday the reins that guide the Married Men have been turned over to "Todd" Coleman their youthful twirler, who has broken the heart of many a heavy hitting single man during the season with his assortment of hooks and benders that have earned him a right to be compared with the Mighty Berger. For his sake it is hoped that he will handle those so call reigns mighty carefully because it will be more than razzing and abuse that shall be his should he lead is team to anything but victory because it isn't a case of fighting for glory and honor as is the usual case but for the old bank roll 'that every man that ever swore "To Love and Obey," has confinitely placed on his team.

Although there will be plenty of action on the diamond from three o'clock, game time, there will also be plenty going on in the stands when Professor George Houston gets his famous brass band agoin' As one fan was heard to say last Sunday after the game "brass bands may come and brass bands may go but the brass band hasn't come yet that can compare wit hthe brass band that led the Single Men to victory last Sunday and again will lead them this Sunday."

SHIP AND ENGINE TEAM IN INDUSTRIAL FINALS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 19. — Gaining a game by forfeit is lazy man's baseball, and the New London Ship and Engine team of this city is the lucky nine. Lucky from every angle, for as the result of the non-appearance of the Fuller Brush Company nine last Saturday, the Capitol City athletes forfeited their game to the locals in the State Industrial elimination league. The Ship and Engine team will go to New Haven Saturday afternoon and play the winner of the New Haven Safety Car and Lighting company-Chase Metal Works nine of Waterbury.

The game the New London Ship and Engine will play is the final of the elimination baseball tournament, for last week the Bridegport Brass and the International Silver nines were eliminated by the teams that are mentioned above to play off the semi-final game in the first round the Ship and Engine was scheduled to play Hopkins the Fuller Brush, but the latter nine failed to appear in this city as scheduled and the locals by this forfeit advanced to the semi-finals; but again old lady luck smiled upon the local athletes and the team from across the river drew a bye, and remain in the finals with a fine chance of coming out the winner in this industrial elimination tournament.

The players to make the trip will be as follows: T. Daniels, p; Stoffel or Sheflot, c; Harran, 1b; W. Barry, 2b Merritt, 3b; Gaetano, ss; McGowan, lf; Brewer, cf; F. Brewer, rf; and Manager Jack Russell.

RIVERVIEW PLAYS ROSSIE TEAM THIS AFTERNOON

The Riverview club of the Norwich State hospital will have the strong Rossie Velvet Club of Mystic as their opponents this afternoon on the hospital grounds. This Mystic club has been clamoring for a game all season and feel confident that they can take the measure of the local organization. In Chappel and Teiford they have two reliable hurlers who have beaten many of the teams throughout eastern Connecticut. The Riverview club will present at the same lineup that has won 20 out of 27 games, namely:

Couillard, 1b; Mills 3b; Harrell cf; Moore ss; Burns 2b; Laffey, lf; Neal rf; Belair c; Posios p.

The game will start at 2:45 and "Hank" Morin will officiate.

SOUTHBRIDGE TO PLAY AT MOOSUP ON SUNDAY

Southbridge will be at Moosup Sunday, one of Moosup's keenest rivals on the diamond. It took two hole days to land Southbridge and now that Manager Loughran has landed them they are coming down to Moosup with all intentions of putting one over on the powerful Moosup club.

NEW LONDON MAN FINDS WIFE ATTEMPTING SUICIDE BY GAS

(Special to the Bulletin).

New London, Sept. 19—Mrs. Mamie C. Dill, 44, wife of John Dill, 371 Main street, was found unconscious in the kitchen of her home this evening from gas poisoning, believed to have resulted from an attempt by the woman to end her life. She is now a patient at Lawrence hospital, where she is in a semi-conscious state. Her condition while considered serious, it is believed will improve during the night.

Dill explained his wife's rash act as due to unsound mentality.

Mrs. Dill had been about her home the greater part of the afternoon. Dill returned from work at the station of the Connecticut Power company, Water street, shortly after 6 o'clock and found his wife seated in a chair and unconscious from gas, which was issuing from a cooking range. Four cocks on the stove were open, permitting a large volume of the poison to enter the room, while all the windows in the room were closed.

Failing to arouse his wife and after having opened windows and shut off the flow of gas, Dill summoned a physician, who administered emergency treatment and then caused the woman to be transferred to the hospital.

An automobile, commercial type, owned and driven by James L. Rainey, Waterford and a commercial car, bearing registration in the name of J. H. Carini, South Glastonbury, collided on Darrow street this morning. Both machines were damaged.

Harry Manheimer and family have moved from Pearl to Tilley street.

The largest fleet of naval craft to be in port since the world war is that which is at anchor in the harbor and those moored at the submarine base. The U. S. S. Camden and the U. S. S. Savannah, that have been at anchor in the lower harbor, were augmented this afternoon by the arrival of the mine planting fleet, composed of the U. S. S. Shawmut and about ten smaller craft, the Shawmut being the convoy of the fleet. As a result of the arrival of the added craft there were hundreds of sailors on shore liberty this evening. Sunday is pay day and even the paying off of the sailors Saturday to accommodate such of the crew as will be given 48 hours shore leave, there is sure to be a tremendous number of the blackjackets about the street tomorrow and Sunday. The sailors at the base were paid off this afternoon and this evening the public service operators and places of amusement reaped a harvest.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wall of Richmond street, have left for a week's automobile trip to Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund E. Darrow have returned to their home on Pearl street after a fortnight's automobile trip throughout Connecticut and New York.

Antone Leverone has sold the dwelling 44-46 Allen street, Groton, to John Dobrow, Groton.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett D. Moxley of Groton, have purchased a parcel of land at Gales Ferry from Antone Leverone.

Clyde T. Lusk, stationed at the submarine base and Miss Mary M. Flood, this city were married yesterday at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. George Lusk, brother of the groom and also stationed at the base was best man, and Miss Cecelia Aquiar attended the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Lusk will reside in Groton.

Ray Bailey of Simsbury, Mass., and Miss Madeline Rankin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Rankin, 440 Williams street, were married last evening at the rectory of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley, rector of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey will make their home in Simsbury.

Miss Ethel Broadwell, has returned to Philadelphia having spent a fortnight with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Broadwell.

It is represented that the pawn shops of New London are doing more business in making loans on personal property than they have done in recent years. An official whose business called him to the pawnshops said he was astonished at the number of loans to New London people in the summer months and equally surprised when he recognized the names of the borrowers. It is declared that diamonds, watches, jewelry and other goods that can be dispensed with for a while are pawned frequently that their owners may get ready cash.

There are intimations that the city of New London and certain owners of property on Bank street, below Howard street, may become involved in suits over the laying of sidewalks. Some twenty-five years ago Lewis Daniels resisted the efforts of the city in making him relay a sidewalk. Judge Butler, in the police court, decided that Mr. Daniels would have to pay for the walk which the city ordered laid. Mr. Daniels did not think the decision was such as the laws of the state would uphold and he appealed to the superior court. That tribunal decided against him, but he persisted and took the case to the supreme court. There Mr. Daniels won, and he never paid for the walk, the court holding that a property owner having once laid a sidewalk he could not be compelled to lay another one if the walk was in a safe condition for use. The city is now relaying walks on Bank street, from Howard street south corner being used and the city expects that property owners will pay one-half the cost. The walks are ten to twelve feet. Property owners are representing that the walks are too wide and that they should not be compelled to lay them to a width of three feet or so. The west side of the street in the same locality must be treated to relaid walks also and there the matter will meet with resistance also. The city council is considering a proposition to widen the highway on the upper portion of the street by taking from the sidewalks, and the property owners represent that in a few years at the most they will be asked to pay for making the walks narrower.

Mrs. Henry Levine of New York; Clarence Huntley, Waterford, and Mrs. Joseph G. Cranker and infant daughter of Hempstead street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospitals were discharged today.

Silas S. Wheeler of Stonington, and Charles B. Graves, executor of the will of Ralph Wheeler, today sold a house and lot on Williams street to Philip Sutleman. The price paid was $14,500.

Henry Vignet, 114 Main street, today complained of youths stealing grapes from his property, the youngsters being liable to do damage to the place. The lads have been making a practice of placing a ladder against the house in order to reach the grapes and Vignet is fearful that the ladder will fall against windows and smash them.

Mrs. Isabelle Flora, widow of Anthony Flora, died last night at her residence, 19 Terrace avenue, after an illness of about a week. Mrs. Flora is survived by two sons, Joseph and Frank Flora and by three daughters, Miss Isabelle Flora, Mrs. Joseph Ramus and Mrs. Joseph Caldon, all of this city. Mrs. Flora suffered a fall on Williams street several weeks ago and the shock produced by the accident caused her health to gradually decline. Mr. Flora died about four months ago.

Mrs. John McInerney, of New York, is visiting her father, Michael Doyle, of North Bank street.

J. H. Meacham, a sailor attached to the U. S. S. 28, stationed at the submarine base, is being sought both by the naval and civil authorities. The naval authorities desire Meacham for he is a deserter, while the local police seek the sailor for the theft of an automobile, owned by Robert S. Schmids, also a sailor attached to the U. S. S. 28.

Last Saturday Meacham was granted 48 hours liberty and he has not returned to the base. The same day Meacham, who owned a car jointly with Schmids, sold his share in the machine to Schmids and two hours later Meacham operated the car from its garage, also from the city. Schmids at the time of the theft of the automobile reported the fact to the police, but no trace of the automobile nor Meacham has been obtained.

The automobile owned and operated by John Bartolucci, 28 East street, was wrecked early this morning when it crashed against a stone wall at Eastern Point. The machine was found a mass of wreckage this forenoon and Captain Andrew McCarthy of the Groton police instituted an investigation. Captain McCarthy is of the belief that the driver of the automobile had been drinking, for several bottles of ginger ale were found in the car. Captain McCarthy came to New London later and accompanied by Sergeant Nelson Smith, went to Bartolucci's house, but the latter was not at home.

There is no change today in the strike situation at the plant of the Edward Bloom Silk Company, Garfield avenue, where 100 men and women weavers quit their jobs suddenly and without notice yesterday afternoon. Officials of the company stated today that they were still in ignorance of the cause of the strike and that the strikers had not requested a conference for the purpose of making it known just what caused the workers to walk out. However it is understood that the strikers are of the opinion that they are underpaid and that within a day or two they will request a conference and will then submit a schedule for an increase in wages.

Richard W. Mansfield, for many years connected with charities of a public nature in this city, was in Newington, at a meeting of probation officers Thursday and there he saw a boy who went from New London several years ago as a cripple, hopelessly afflicted. Mr. Mansfield saw a greatly improved child, in that the little fellow could get about on a wooden leg and could be of a great deal of service to himself and to others. Mr. Mansfield says he never saw a more delighted child than the boy from New London was when he realized that an old friend had stepped in to see him.

On the second complaint of possession of intoxicating liquors on Sept. 16th, defendant stated to the court that he did not know what it meant. When the charge was explained he said that he "didn't know where the liquor was in the automobile or what it was." He finally decided, "I'll have to plead guilty to that, too, I guess."

A jail sentence of 10 days in Providence county jail and costs was imposed in the operating under the influence complaint and on the possession of intoxicating liquors a fine of $25 and costs were imposed. A mittimus was issued and Police Officer William Kay of Hopkinton at the direction of Chief of Police Elmer C. Smith, took the man to Providence Friday morning. As a result of the case Cassidy loses his automobile license.

A fine of $20 and costs was paid.

Eligibility for membership is found in the description of the order, "an association of men who have fought America's foreign wars on land and sea." THE THOUGHT THINKER

Somewhere inside th' thing called Me
There runs a queer machine,
Only always busy a thinkin' thoughts
Not seldom thinkin' clean.
Thought-thinker is th' name I have
For this most strange device—
It makes thoughts just for Me alone
Free gratis 'thout price.

It starts to runnin' when I wake
An' manufactures dreams—
Th' daylight kind—that tangles me
In weird an' mystic schemes.
Thought-thinker runs th' best, I find
When I'm alone, somehow,
For instance, walkin' through th' woods
Er fetchin' home the cow.

Then's when Thought-thinker comes up
Th' queerest dreams in Me;
Lets haven' castles all my own
Beside some far-off sea!
Or where my neighbors all could come,
To visit me a while;
Leave every worldly care behind
In lordly style.

[illegible] Thought-thinker
[illegible] Discontent;
But I did treat Thought-thinker
Just as I'd mightily soon
Put up a sign "For Rent."
Of course it has its days of squeak,
An starts to growl an' scoff;
But when that happens—Me for bed!
An' close th' blamed thing off.

A CURE FOR THE BLUES

A brook that is singing its song

[illegible] message of happiness all the day long.

[illegible] at the sigh of the breeze,
[illegible] waters away through the meadows and hills
[illegible] and watergrass quivers

UNCLE CHARLIE SAYS, "HELLO"

Dear Social Corner Folks: I rather [illegible] the editor wouldn't remember as I ain't writ nothin' for so long. Reckon they do long as my name goes in the roll call I ought to rite sumthin' if it wan't morn to say, "Hello" as I went before mostly to invite some folks to ride who didn't have no automobile and I took out quite a number among them some and of course I ain't seen in years. Now [illegible] of mostly everybody has an auto it would seem as foolish as handing a scow to a reindeer, but as I never tended one of them Social Corner picnics I thought as how I might get a chance to go by takin some folks that couldn't get there no other way, if they was any such. My auto is like the Ford. He had ten in it and some folks says, "How many'll she hold?" and he says, "I dunno. I never tried to see." So I'll leave you to figure about it. Rebecca says it will be all proper.

UNCLE CHARLIE.

WHAT THOSE ATTENDING DINNERS MUST DO

Social Corner Sisters: On October 1st Wednesday the meetings of Club No. 2 will begin in Buckingham Memorial. We have been having some lovely places for outdoor picnics although I haven't been able to attend any except that at Versailles which I enjoyed. Am sorry I couldn't have attended them all but was there in mind. I trust that with the fall meetings of 1924 and those of 1925 each and every one attending will be willing to do their part as hostess and assistants at each monthly meeting. Also I find that the donating and bringing of food for dinners are not understood.

Each and every one must bring something for the dinner, not one person, or member, bring for herself and the person with her but every person coming to dinner must bring something. Now some give a little money extra. Well if we all did that where would the food be for the big crowd Club No. 2 has for the dinner? Then the hostess comes the complaint that there as not enough of this, and not enough of that, short of cakes, etc. So please let us have it understood that everybody who comes must bring their own donation of food. The hostess knows who does and who doesn't. Then to me comes the complaint and I must try and straighten out all errors. So kindly take this as I have explained it, so as to have our monthly dinners a success by having plenty of food.

I trust the hostess will have better results for their untiring efforts putting on the dinner the coming year with less complaints from those who did complaint.

We can always use salads, cakes, beans, coffee, butter, sugar, pickles. If we are short of bread we can always buy easily. Those who remained in June when we closed down please don't forget your donation. Have the coffee at Buckingham before the day of meeting. Mrs. Risley will take care of it for us as it takes time to get it ready.

Take this in kindly way for the success of our Club No. 2 and be prepared to help Chocolate with the entertainment. Bring songs, sheet music and poems.

Well Ronie I found pen and ink at the store but you wasn't looking for this kind of a letter.

CALLA LILY.

FOLLOWED FLIERS BY RADIO.

Social Corner Friends: How many of you saw the world fliers while en route from Boston to New York. As they did not come in sight of here we picked them up by radio while they were in sight of Block Island, R. I., and followed them to Westerly, Mystic, New London and so far as New Haven. The operator could be heard very plainly broadcasting the trip as they passed along the route. He was speaking the most of the time. We heard him say we are flying 90 miles an hour, our plane is flying directly under the other planes. I can see Block Island at my left. We are now making a turn towards Westerly and Mystic. I can see a small island at my left which I think is Fishers Island.

We are now near Fishers Island. Now we are making a sharp turn to the right. I can see the wire of our plane almost making a complete circle. The roar of the planes could be heard very plainly only when they were making a sharp turn. When they reached New London, which is the home of Leslie Arnold, one of the fliers with Lieutenan. Smith, the operator said "Hello New London" and the three soon on their way for New York.

While we missed seeing the world fliers we enjoyed the operator broadcasting his journey in the air much better than seeing them pass over for a few minutes. If there are other corner writers who followed them from New Haven to New York we would be pleased to hear from them.

RURAL DELIVERY.

COLD PICKLE

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Just a few lines this morning as I am very busy canning tomatoes but I had a nice recipe for pickle which I thought some of you might like to make. It is very easily made and very nice.

You don't have to cook it.

Cold Pickle: 1 peck ripe tomatoes, 1-2 peck green peppers, 8 large onions, 1 teaspoon of ground mustard, 1 teaspoon of ground ginger, 1 teaspoon of ground cloves 1-4 teaspoon of red pepper 1 tablespoon of ground allspice, 1 ounce of mustard seed, 2 pounds of brown sugar, 3 pints vinegar.

Scald peel and slice tomatoes. Take the seeds out of the peppers and chop in coarse pieces, peel and slice onions. Pour over 1 cup of salt and let stand over night. Next morning drain dry and add spices, sugar and vinegar.

Put in a stone jar and cover. Everything cold

RED ROSE.

LAZY WIFE PICKLE.

Dear Social Corner Friends: Am sure there must be room for one more in the Corner, as I have not heard anyone grumble or exclaim, "Get off my corn." Twice Twenty gave me a very cordial invite to join the Social Corner. Mary Gusta said, "Sure, why don't you," in her chirpy pleasant way. So here I am. As my entrance fee I will give you my recipe for—

Lazy Wife Pickle: Pare and slice cucumbers as for table use, pack jar, leaving room at top for one large tablespoon of sugar, level tablespoon each of salt and mustard and fill jar with hot vinegar and seal.

Would like to stop a little longer and talk over old times with Kitty Lou, but think I will wait until later. You may call me

CARO.

PEACH PUDDING

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I have been away so much that when I saw the Bulletin I did not see my pen name. But I have been a member for years. I went to the hospital the next day after I wrote my first letter for an operation, don't know whether you received it or not.

Will give you a good recipe for

Peach Pudding: 2 level cups of flour, 1 level tablespoon butter, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder. Cream butter and sugar, beat egg until very light, add milk and flour into which baking powder has been sifted. I choose for my pen name

RED CEDAR.

WANTS HELP FOR RUSTY SINK

To the Social Corner: I have been waiting for my turn in the roll call to ask a question. I recall a year or more ago a discussion on how to keep an iron sink from rusting. What was the conclusion of the matter and did any get help that has lasted? I have a fine, big iron sink. We put in running water and it is in almost constant use. I am afraid it will not remain smooth long if I cannot keep it freer from rust. Our water system has been a wonderful help with three children to wash for and with a handy man at the head of the household we have had little expense for plumbing repairs. With all best wishes as ever all.

KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT

Dear Sisters: I want to say to Louisa G. that I received letter. Many thanks. Will write soon. No, Neighbor and Rhody Louise do not write often. Perhaps if they knew how anxious you were to read their letters they would write.

Acorn: There is no use for me to be shilly-shallying the question. I wanted to find out how you are keeping up your massage for your corn. You know I claimed that it would absolutely cure. I am duly sensible of my own limitations, but I know if you do your part it will be all right. You can drive a horse to water, but can't make him drink. My heart is not exactly set upon the matter, but if you keep up the massage every night and morning you will surely reap your reward. One almost feels reluctant in making such a statement, not knowing how the laws will be carried out.

When a lady telephoned me the other day, she said she had followed out my advice and her hair had stopped falling out and new was coming in. I said, "You worked for it." She said "You bet I did. I had to. My hair was all going." So in that way I do not hesitate in making my dictum too positive. I have never heard from the eight sisters to whom I sent the same massage. I have forgotten the names but I think one lives on Manchester Green who has daughters. It maybe sort of presumptive to ask but I would love to know if they did try it faithfully for six months.

It is on the same principle as playing the piano. It one does not practice after having a new piano, or violin, promised them why they never get any where. As an old piano all out of tune isn't fit for anyone to practice on, but where you have a good toned instrument you can do wonders—the same with having good hair tonics. They are no good if you don't use them as you should.

Kreisler could play the Rosary on a cigar box and make us weep, but an amateur must have a good instrument.

I don't mean to be discouraging or fault-finding for I think in any corporate work the discouraging woman is a perfect bugbear. We ought to be like the colored mammy who was once asked, "Why in the face of discouragements she was always cheerful." "Lawdy, chile," was her answer. "I jes wears the world like a loose garment." There is a great deal of philosophy in her words. There are many times where we must "wear the world like a loose garment."

You know I would like to write a letter that would interest all, but I can't. One says, "I don't care for recipes," another will say I look in the Corner and if there aren't any recipes I don't read the letters and while I have striven to write interesting letters some don't look at them.

I think I will have to give them all one guess like the old southern colonel. He was a fine type, the fierce scion of a race of cavaliers. He had just received a letter from a man, "a low soht of puhson suh, I assuh you," which displeased him very much, and he was debating inwardly how best to convey to his vulgar correspondents an adequate expression of his (the colonel's) opinion of him.

The colonel snorted, made two or three false starts, and finally elerated: "Sir: My stenographer being a lady.. cannot transcribe what I think of you. I being a gentleman, cannot think it. But you, being neither, will readily know what I mean."

I will send the requested recipe for orange marmalade later.

GREETINGS FROM PEGGY ALDER.

Dear Social Corner Friends: Yes, here I am again, but I am too busy to stop long.

I began to think I was not going to be able to get anything to make jelly of this year, but my son picked me some grapes and a kind neighbor gave me some apples. Surely the lame and the lazy are provided for.

Mary Gusta: I laughter when I found out I had you guessing, for you have written to the Corner for a long time and I couldn't find out your pen name. I was getting revenge, you see.

Now I have been looking at that bridge and it looks to me like a perfectly reliable, honest-to-goodness bridge. I couldn't see any catch about it. Come over and show it to me, that bridge is very useful to me, but I use it more in the winter than I do in the summer. Can you tell why. Would you like to know how to stop a runaway auto? Ask Lilac Lady, I think she can tell you.

Lilac Lady: I don't want to sit under the maple tree and you won't care to either, when I tell you about the wild animals out there. Come over and we will go hunting. Mary Gusta hasn't been along yet to say, "Hello, Peggy." Spose she went to the wrong house?

Will close with these two lines I just saw in a magazine.

Fear-not, lest men say evil things of you.
But fear to do the ill they say you do.

Yours for the Corner.

PEGGY ALDER.

DOING MUCH CANNING.

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Well, I guess everyone will wonder if I am not a new member, I have been tardy for so long.

I am ashamed to admit that I haven't written for a year and a half, and I don't believe I can be forgiven.

I am married now, a year ago July 2nd and I have a little boy, who is two months old.

I suppose the sisters are all busy canning. I have about 80 quarts of fruit and about 60 jars of jell done since August 15th, and I hope I can get more to can.

Well, I hope this will escape the waste basket or I will get discouraged, but if it is printed I will try to write more often.

Good luck and best wishes to the Cornerites.

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER

Dear Corner Folks: I will say howdy this fine morning. Was very glad to see in last Saturday's Bulletin a letter from Aunty No. 1. Sorry to know she is still feeling poorly, but hope to hear better tidings as time passes on.

Biddy: Was some surprised to learn you are now a resident of Willimantic. How long since you left South Coventry?

Slip-in-Sky: See you are inquiring after me. Do I know you? Certainly not by that name unless you are the sister I met that day in the rest room in the Boston store, while waiting for another.

Balsam Fir: Very sorry to learn of your very bad burn. I too just touched my face on the hot stove ten days ago and I had a pretty painful burn for a few days. The skin is still drawn up, so I know about how you felt.

Merry Widow: Thanks for pretty card. Was indeed glad to hear from you. The last time I heard direct from you Mrs. G. told me of the accident; that happened to your son. How did he feel when he left the hospital? How is by now he is allright.

Paula: I saw the account in the paper where your cousin-law was struck by the automobile and was removed to the hospital, over a week ago. I hope the wound in his head is healing nicely so he will soon be able to return to his home and that nothing serious results. You know a blow on the head is a bad thing.

Elina Jane: I tried your raised cake recipe. It is very good and my folks like it. Just a little bother but when it is baked you are well repaid for that. That recipe makes a nice large cake. It tastes very much like a cake my mother used to make.

U. C. E.: Was unable to attend your gathering. When it was time for me to leave it was raining and by the time it cleared away it was too late for me to start. Hope you and Bumble Bee had a good crowd, for it seems too bad when you go to such trouble getting ready to have the weatherman butt in. A great many times some that would go don't know what to do in such a case.

Hope all the sick ones are on the gain and all the well sisters have had a delightful summer is the wish of

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS AND HELPS

Dear Cornerites: Of all the blessings that gladden our earthly pilgrimage, sympathy is the sweetest of all the gifts of God, a friend is the Chief.

The more we live for self the less we find the value of existence; the more we live for others, and out of self, the greater will be the joy and satisfaction of living.

From morning till night we are ever scattering the seeds whose harvests we cannot foretell, and oftenest never know. The soil in which they fall—the human heart—that soil is so rich that of all those seeds none utterly perish.

The dangers which threaten us will never be averted until there is no single good man or woman in any sphere of life who does not realize the individual's responsibility for the general condition, and who is not laboring in some direct, definite, self denying way to rescue those who are perishing from the action of preventable evil.

It is cheaper to pay your honest debts while you have the money than to starve them off to accumulate and crush you in the end.

Remember that if opportunity for great deeds should never come, opportunity for good deeds is renewed for us day by day. The thing to long for is goodness, not glory.

One of the greatest lessons in life is to learn to take people at their best not their worst; to look for the divine, not the human, in them; the beautiful, not the ugly; the bright, not the dark; the straight not the crooked side.

Nowadays people are very fond of says so-and-so was "jus mad" meaning one very angry; and it would be well if temper was more often seriously regarded as madness, but madness it is while it lasts. It may be preventable madness, and there is seldom anyone who is more unhappy than the person who gives way to it.

FINE TRIP TO PLYMOUTH.

Dear Sisters: It is only a short time since I wrote a letter, but I have had a birthday this month and must thank the sisters who sent me cards—Nelia, True Blue, Blue Bell, Scottie and Bonnie, No one taking, we do love to be remembered whether we are young or old.

I see lots of the sisters are telling of their many trips. It is fine to be able to get away from the home ties for a few days and see something different, so that when we return to the many tasks at home we have something to think about besides washing, ironing, canning, getting the children ready for school and then something nourishing for them to come home. My, what a lot of things mothers have to think of. But how dear they are to us after all, and how true it is "there is no place just like home."

We have had some very beautiful trips this summer. I could not begin to tell all the places we have been to, but one I must mention, and that was to Plymouth, Mass., to see the place where the Pilgrims landed and Plymouth Rock. It is a lovely place to go and spend a day traveling over the old places where our forefathers traversed, now wonderfully built up with beautiful houses. Well, it will soon be time for us to meet in the Buckingham again and we must all try and make this year a banner year for the old Social Corner.

GREETINGS FROM TRUE BLUE.

Dear Editor and Corner Friends: I answer present to the roll call with promptness and gratitude to the editor, who gives so much of his time and patience in reading and accepting the various items for the Corner page. I joined Club No. 2 in November, 1922, and have attended and enjoyed a great many meetings and picnics and the good fellowship manifested at each and every gathering. May the Corner continue to thrive.

Wrinkle: As I am a D. of V., your letter was very interesting about the G. A. R. encampment in Boston.

Marigold: Those turkeys must begin to look like thanksgiving.

Blue Bell: What a merry time we had.

Effie M.: Have you the permanent wave?

Savilla: Is the lake as large as the name?

Necia: How about the wheelbarrow—fit to be tied?

I remain

TRUE BLUE.

A SMILE AND A HELPING HAND.

Dear Corner Members: "Its the honest grip of comradeship makes a fellow take heart again: it's the word of cheer, from a friend sincere, makes him feel life's not in vain.

When the way is dark and the luckless bark, in drifting from safety's strand, why God bless the men and the women who then, hold to us a helping hand.

MISTER DOOLEY.

PLANNING THE CLUB MEETINGS

Dear Editor and Cornerites: In responding to the roll call, will answer, present.

Although I've been decidedly dilatory in my contributions to the Corner, I have not lost one item of interest, and have secured many beneficial suggestions from it, I hope to attend many of the club meetings in Buckingham Memorial this winter.

Not having time to write more now, will send greetings to all Corner members and remain. Very sincerly,

PICKEREL.

BACON AND POTATO OMELET

Dear Social Corner Friends: I am answering present by sending a recipe:

Bacon and Potato Omelet: 1 cup cold potatoes chopped fine, 1-2 cup bacon, diced, 4 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt and pepper.

Brown potatoes in frying pan together with bacon, separate the eggs, beat yolks till creamy and whites until light; add seasonings, combine, stir into the potato mixture, and cook gently like an omelet.

UNCLE SAM'S DAUGHTER.

MORE FAVORABLE VIEW OF CALIFORNIA

Dear Social Corner Friends: The recent letters from Rose Lee and Rural Delivery about California have been read with much interest, as I was a resident of Pasadena and San Diego for 24 years and am therefore well acquainted with the southern part of the state and its climate.

Am sorry that Rose Lee had such an unpleasant experience while there. Had she remained longer and tried other places believe she would think differently. I agree with her that many of the old houses are insufficiently warmed, but I noticed that the new houses and bungalows are provided with some kind of furnace. A new gas furnace is giving good satisfaction, providing the necessary heat and at the same time does not destroy the oxygen in the atmosphere. We used wood heaters and were comfortable. It is also true that no place has all the advantages. There are compensations in every place one may live.

To those who dislike the cold eastern winters the climate of southern California is so ideal it surmounts all disadvantages. About the drinking water, it varies in different places. We had fine water in Pasadena coming direct from the Sierra Madre mountains. Nine years I lived near San Diego in the extreme southwestern corner of the state which is also supplied with fine mountain water. Most of the water has some alkali but not sufficient to be harmful. San Diego is preferred by many on account of its even climate and beautiful marine and mountain views. California has a semi-tropical climate having some of the tropical fruits and all of those grown in the temperate climate.

The mornings and evenings are cool and nights are conducive to sound, restful slumber.

In buying a home one should live in different places for a time to find which one agrees best with him as there is sufficient difference in high or low altitudes, hot or cold, warm and cool temperature to suit each individual taste or form of disease. Los Angeles gained over 100,000 in population, largely tourists who had previously visited the state and were favorably impressed with its fine advantages. It is a wonderful state in agricultural products as we all know. I have been impressed with that fact as I have traveled its length and breadth. To say that warm clothing is not necessary is a mistake, for there are only three very warm months, July, August and September, with occasional warm days even in January, but on account of cool nights one should alwayse be supplied with comfortable clothing, especially if one is sensitive to the cold.

I think Rose Lee chose the unfavorable season of the year in going to California as the cool season begins in November and lasts to the middle or last of January. December is the most unpleasant month of all and is the month when the citrus fruit owners must guard their orchards.

The season's vary there as they do here in Connecticut but February usually ushers in a beautiful spring month with the almond trees in bloom and sweet songs of the mocking bird. March follows with plum, peach and other trees in bloom, and April is the lovely rose month. During the summer months the open fields are brown and dry but with the many large, storage reservoirs in various parts of the state the lawns, flowers and shrubs can be kept green and blooming at a very reasonable price. Some think living is high there, but I made careful comparison and find it is about the same. While some things are more others are less and rents are very nearly the same for the same accommodations, and according to the size of town or city, as they are here.

Some go there expecting to find employment in their particular line of work and are much disappointed if they are not successful, but the old maxim "all things come to him who waits" usually proves true especially if he keeps up his courage and seizes the first opportunity that presents itself. If one chooses to live modestly there he can do so, or if he wishes to spend large sums he will find many avenues open for such expenditures. The greatest advantage as I see it, is in the out of door life which makes a strong appeal to me. For exclusive indoor living I think Connecticut would have the advantage. But few people wish to remain indoors all the time.

Los Angeles is a large up-to-date city with fine stores and business houses and beautiful residential sections and a fine place to shop. But for a residence Pasadena far excells. I love Connecticut, my native state, also California, my adopted state for many years. You ask, why I returned. Someone wished me to come and where your heart is there one can always be happy.

CALIFORNIA POPPY

HOPES FOR MEETING AT CENTRAL SOON

Dear Sisters, one and All: I will try to write a few lines to help keep up the Corner. I certainly do enjoy reading the Corner page which is always interesting. I think some of the sisters are very gifted in writing the letters they do.

Well, the good old summer time will soon be a thing of the past but we have not had a bad summer after all and then there are some good things to think about in winter time. We don't have thunder storms and we don't have to fight against insects as we do in summer. So there is always something to be thankful for if we just stop to think.

I think every one should have some kind of music in the home as it seems to cheer and help lighten labor. As for myself I am very fond of music.

Sorry we couldn't have had the meeting at Central Village. Hope that some sister will go ahead and call a meeting soon. Let us all try each day to help cheer each one we meet if by nothing more than a kind word or smile, always remembering a smile goes a long, long way.

With success for the Corner.

RURAL AUNTY.

ANOTHER CORNER BROTHER

Dear Editor, Social Corner Sisters and Brothers: Can I join your charming circle? I have been told there are real men writers but one can never tell by their pen names. For instance there is Jim, John Alden and Uncle Henry. Drat him if he is pretending to be what he ain't. Your letters have helped me so much I just want to thank you all. My Biddy Ann thinks she cant live over Sunday unless she gets the Saturday Bulletin so she can read all those nice letters. Through thick and thin, snow or blow I had to go for the paper. No! it is brought to the door. I wondered what she found so interesting so I peeked over her shoulder and she was reading the Social Corner letters. After she was through with the paper I took it and read all the letters—never skipped one. They were all so good the recipes, the letters about children's care and about pets, dogs, cats, birds, horses. The letters always seemed to be written by good people. I see me thinking. I allowed a horse trader could not be in the business and be honest so quit. I paved $200 for a roan driving horse as likely a one as ever one set eyes on. I drove to town one day after having him about three weeks. I stopped at the Raspberry tan, took a little too much, traded horses with the good fellow what had been betting up. Well I drove home unharnessed, put the horse in the barn, ate supper went to bed and next morning real early I took a look at my trade. He was a horse all right, made on the giraffe plan, had to knock off a beam over the door to get him out. Funny he went in all right! Well I traded and traded, fool that I was. Sometimes it was one horse for two, at last I traded one pretty fast horse for three others or rather two and a half, the half being a mustang about half as large as an ordinary horse. The man I traded with stole him from a gang of gypsies camping near here. They broke camp some time during the night, the mustang joined his road gang and I have never seen him since. One of the other horses died, got down and couldn't get up. The last horse I put out of his misery as he had only one sound leg. Now I knew my Biddy Ann didn't like to have me in the horse business and after reading all the good letters gave up and am trying to be good. I wish I had joined before (afraid I wasn't good enough) then I could have attended some of the many picnics. I don't so much having taken only three long trips in my life, once to Providence, R. I., once to Hartford and once to Putnam with Ned. To all of these places I drove old Ned hitched to the dump seat carriage. Why it is called a dump seat is more than I can tell. Perhaps because the front seats folded under to allow one to get in the back seats. However they folded up sometime when they ought not to. Once first as I was about to pull old Ned out of the road to pass one of those buzz wagons the seat doubled up threw me forward onto my knees and cut my nose on the dash board. I hit my head on a plank that rested on two barrels across part of the road where there was a bad wash out. One of the red lanterns that had been left burning on the barrel flopped up as I hit the plank and went clean over the carriage. After I got Ned down on all four feet I got out, tied him and went back and fought fire for a while where the lantern was thrown. I don't drive much now Ned and I are both old. Am now enjoying himself as all retired gents should. He is in a large box stall winters and summers he is turned out to pasture. I hitch him to the buggy once in a long while out, where can one drive with a horse these days? The state roads are slippery and there are so many cars the poor justice to walk in the ditch all the way. The country roads are worse, being so narrow in places. When I have met a car in these narrow places Ned has gone nearer and nearer to go over the wall. If he could have kept his youth he would have made it. Sometime in a horse trade the horse gets the best of the bargain getting a good home with plenty to eat. When a horse is young and sound he brings good money. It is when he is old and done up he gets his worst home generally. He is made to work hard and is poorly fed. This is all I dare write this time, I am an honest to goodness man. I am holding up my right hand too. I will rake for my pen name.

SULARR WYLIE.

VACATIONING IN NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Well here I come again as I saw in last Saturday's paper about Bonie going to take a trip to her former home. I don't blame you. As I have had a short vacation. Mr. L and myself went to Greenfield, Mass., over the Mohawk trail up into Vermont and New Hampshire and back. We attended the Ath. fair and came back home. We had some trip and saw so many beautiful things and such fields of cucumbers. Probably some were as large as two acres, and such fields of tobacco! It was quite a treat to me as I haven't had a vacation for at least five years and I enjoyed every minute of the time I was gone. As it is canning time I am going to send in a recipe telling how to preserve a husband.

Be careful in your selection, do not choose too young. When once selected give your entire thoughts to preparation for domestic use. Some insist upon keeping them in a pickle. Others are constantly getting them into hot water. This may make them sour, hard, and sometimes bitter, even poor varieties may be made sweet, tender and good, by garnishing them with patience, well sweetened with love and seasoned with kisses. Wrap them in a mantle of charity, keep warm with a steady fire of domestic devotion and served with peaches and cream. Thus prepared they will keep for years. Now I think that this is a true way of preserving them.

I guess this is long enough for if I should send any more recipes there wouldn't be room for others so will say I hope to meet with you all the first of October at the Buckingham.

Wish best wishes from

NELLIE BLY.

FINE TIME AT BUMBLE BEE'S

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: The weather was not very favorable early in the morning on the day Bumblee Bee planned for the Social Corner to meet with her, but those that did go were amply repaid for going. There were thirty with the children. Dinner was served in the house on the meeting house table and such a variety of good things to eat. Special mention should be made of the apple pie made by Ethel. Singing of the good old fashioned songs with Biddy as pianist and visiting with neighbors and friends whom we had not met for a long time made the day pass quickly and pleasantly. Bumble Bee was very thoughtful and with her helpers, Neapa, U. C. E. and others, made every one comfortable and happy even to showering some of them with rice as they left for home. Enjoyed seeing little Miss Bumble Bee riding Grandpa's pretty horse as she could not find her own riding horse.

Deliah Deal: Sorry you have to be shut in so much of the time. Wish you could come to the meetings as you did at one time.

Crimson Rambler: Haven't forgotten the day at your house. Hope you will be able to be at the next meeting.

Comfort: Hope to see you at Buckingham Memorial Oct. 1st. Also all of the sisters and friends.

Best wishes for the Social Corner.

WURDY BELLE.

PICKLES RECIPE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Will say present in the roll call. It has been some time since I wrote but will try and do better in the future. Maine Lover and myself spent a few days in Springfield, Mass. We enjoyed our trip very much if we did get mixed up. How about it, Maine Lover?

August: I think we are going to get left as to the Coventry picnic.

Some sister asked for my recipe for pickles. Here it is:

Mustard Pickles: 2 tablespoons of dry mustard, 2 tablespoons of salt, put in a quart jar, 4 tablespoons of sugar. Clean the cucumbers and fill with cold vinegar. They are very nice. Try it.

WANDERING JEW.

VISITING WITH AUNTY NO. 1

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Some time has elapsed since I wrote to the Corner. First I want to answer to the roll call, but will only say present to Biddy. Please Mr. Editor cross out all my other names. I spent the past week with my sister, Aunty No. 1. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday we had quite a time going to and from her house. First, Tuesday we were invited to the west side in Norwich to an old schoolmates home, Mrs. Hattie (Maynard) Steers to meet other old schoolmates that we hadn't seen since in the '70's. There were nine of us and we certainly did have a great time reminiscensing. What one forgot others remembered. The time soon flew and the hostess soon invited us out to the dining room to a wonderful buffet lunch—crab meat salad, sliced ham and pimento cheese sandwiches, wafers, sponge and raised cake, tea, and brick ice cream.

Our experience going down and back is what I want to tell you. Aunty hoped it wouldn't rain for I was sure it would, and I said I was going to take an umbrella and if it didn't rain I could use it as a cane. Well, we started early enough so we could take our time going down that hill. You all know what a steep hill it is. We were waiting for the trolley when along came a neighbor that was kind enough to take us right to our friend's house. Otherwise we would have had to transfer to get there, and that is tiresome. Well, Biddy guessed right and when time to go home it was raining so hard we were obliged to hire a livery, that took us right to the door. I was saved the journey up that hill No. 1. Wednesday we started for Bumble Bee's to her picnic and along went the umbrella again. The day was uncertain for it rained so hard the day before. But when Old Sol began to peek around the corner (the clouds) and show his blue jeans (blue sky) we decided it time to start. We took the bus at the foot of the hill for Bumble Bees and do you believe it? I got stung. I thought Bumble Bee was someody else. God bless her heart I am glad she is wood one is. Such a wonderful apple pie, yum, yum. There was large enough of a crowd there to make it a day never to be forgotten. We were not permitted to walk up "the hill" this time. "Chauffeur" kindly offered to take us to the foot of the hill, and along came a neighbor that carried us right to the door. Friday we walked down the hill again and I left the umbrella home this time and for a cane I used my own original ones, but I suffered for it that night after I got to bed. I never suffered such pain before. But we were fortunate when we got off the trolley and the foot of the hill coming home for a neighbor came along and landed us at our door for the third time. So you see I had some unseen hand guiding me that kept me from climbing that hill. I meant to have mentioned the names of those who were my old schoolmates. Maybe some of you know them. Mrs. Hattie (Maynard) Steers, Norwich, Conn.; Mrs. Sadie (Ladd) Cruthers, Norwich, Conn.; Mrs. Carrie (Ladd) Mahoney, Norwich, Conn.; Mrs. Georgianna (Brewster) Lillibridge Yantic, Conn., Mrs. Mary (Thompson) Hancock, Willimantic, Conn.; Mrs. Angie (Thompson) Griswold, Groton, Conn.; Mrs. Annie (Rose) Howard, Woodstock, Conn.; Mrs. Ella (Brown) Weaver, Norwich Town, Conn.; Mrs. Cora (Brown) Nye, Willimantic, Conn. If any of you sisters know any of these I wish you'd tell me. It is so nice to meet with those that have strayed away so many years.

Crimson Rambler: I can go you one better. You said a while ago you had canned around 50 jars of fruit I have reached the 200 mark and not through yet. I have canned, cherries, blackberries, peaches, pears, apples, summer squash, tomatoes, cucumbers beets, stringbeans, shell beans, carrots, over 30 pounds of chicken, beef, blackberry jam, currant jelly, tomato (green) soy. Three baskets of peaches and two of quinces and coming yet to can, and pickled pears, grapes and soups, more meats and choo suev yet to can.

Have helped Aunty No. 1 can quite a little. The editor will be saying "sho, get out my yard" if I don't stop on that account.

I have been told that the ground was dry and brown, barren looking, no green grass only where they irrigated. Suppose they can put up with poor drinking water. When one is thirsty what is better than a drink of good spring water? I will stay in Connecticut a while longer.

OLA.

BEATING FATHER GREED.

Dear Editor and Cornerites: You have heard of old Father Time. Have you heard of Father Greed who makes us pay more for sugar, tea, coffee, etc. How to beat him will take all our ingenuity. Every clean scrap must spell utility on our part.

I am making crumb cake, loaf and cup cakes, puddings, griddles, meat loaf, fish stuffing and putting a quarter in my codfish cakes. You can make a very good pudding with one-third crumbs and two of fine corn. You can use cookie or cake crumbs. With this yesterday I put a short steak bone and trimmings in a skillet with five cold lima beans, half a green pepper, spoon of bacon grease, little mess of corn, piece of a carrot, slice of onion and called it woodchoppers' stew.

Anything is good if seasoned, if one knows how to cook and hasn't got that increasing disease—laziness. Oh, these life giving days.

J. E. T.

ENJOYED CORNER AND THOSE CONNECTED WITH IT

Dear Corner Friends: I see it is my turn to say present as my name has appeared in the roll call. I have one regret and that is that I failed to have my first letter appear in the early issues of the page. I have greatly enjoyed the page and all connected with it. I attended all of the first social gatherings at the Camp ground and W. C. T. U. rooms in Willimantic and at the homes of Aunty No. 1, Aunt Mehitable, Biddy, Maine Lover, Huldy, Aunt Abby, Aunt Mary, Eliza Jane, Rock Maple, Lucinda, Grace and later with C. E. S., Tiddy Addy. Remember Me; Olga, Twice Twenty, Golden-Glow, Wiltwyck, Alfara, Selinda, at the Buckingham occasionally and also the annual reunion in Versailles. I have received a great many messages and cards from the writers some of whom I have never seen, which have been a great pleasure to me.

Saturday Eve: I am glad to see you back in the Corner again. You wonder why the writers don't respond to their names better.

Perhaps some are away and not aware of it, there may be those that do not have the paper as some that I know of; perhaps it is procrastination like what affected me when I had a nice card on my birthday from Fritzie and she was looking for a card from me, she said and you can't think what a shock the news of her death was. I did not know her or even her name, but I have got that why to ponder over—why I hadn't sent her another card to cheer her in her weeks of illness. We do wonder why over so many things.

Rural Aunty: I agree with you in your admiration of the beautiful scenery in Connecticut especially the western part. We can't describe how one peak rises behind another, or and on in the distance showing different shades of green and blue. To spoke of passing through Winsted I wonder if you journeyed on through the land of Canaan? Now try to New York? If so, you must have been impressed by the wonderful mountains there are right here. I want to say to Lucille in her inquiry about Kent Falls that they are near the state road above the little village of Kent, about 14 miles north of New Milford or 25 south from Canaan. The home of my childhood was but 12 miles above Kent Falls. It is about 45 west from Hartford but you would ride more miles than that to reach the place. A very expensive state road is being constructed from Canaan to New Milford, directly by, connecting the Berkshires with southern Connecticut and New York by way of the Housatonic valley, and it will be the most wonderful scenic trip anywhere in the state. There is much blasting of ledges to open up this roadway along the western bank of the Housatonic river and its steep inclines. Probably another summer will find this road completed and you want to put this trip on your list.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I did not intend writing so soon again, but I do wish to thank Rose Lee for her letter on California. She told what I wanted to know, and I cannot tell how much I appreciate her nice, long description of it. That

MARKET WAS BRISK

New York, Sept. 19—Chief speculative interest in today's stock market centered in a limited number of specialties, hich were bid up briskly on reports of special developments. Bear traders, who endeavored to create a political scare simultaneously with the opening of the LaFollette campaign in the east, made little headway, the few recessions among standard industrials being limited to fractions.

An even score of stocks attained new peak prices for the year, these included such widely diversified issues as American Tobacco "A" and "B", Worthington Pump, United Drug, Postum Cereal, Air Reduction, Maxwell "B", C. R. Kinney, American Bank Note, American Radiator, Public Service of New Jersey and Western Pacific. In addition, Missouri Pacific preferred, Studebaker and American express duplicated their previous top prices.

Trade news was mixed in character. The weekly mercantile reviews called attention to a perceptible broadening in demand in many quarters. This was offset, however, by further cuts in gasoline prices, omission of the preferred dividend on Jones Brothers Tea and failure of the directors of the Gulb, Mobile & Northern to put the preferred stock on a six per cent. basis.

Pivotal industrials showed inconsequential changes. U. S. Steel common sold down to 107 3-4 but good buying support was provided and the stock rallied to 108 1-2 where it was unchanged on the day. Baldwin closed unchanged at 123 1-4 after having fluctuated between 121 1-2 and 123. American Can showed a small fractional loss at 129 3-4.

Tobacco issues again appeared to be under accumulation. American Tobacco A and B rising 4 3-4 and 4 points, respectively. Schulte Stores and Lorillard each closed about a point higher. The Maxwell Motor issues responded to reports of increased sales. General Motors (new stock) traded in for the first time, opened at 61 3-4 but eased a point in subsequent transactions.

Revival of speculative interest in the gaming issues resulted in a jump of 7 points in General Baking. National Biscuit moved up more than two points to a new top at 70 1-4. Recent strength of Worthington Pump was associated with that company's development of a new feed water heater. Strength of Kinney & Company reflects earnings $6.59 a share on the common in the first six months, which is believed to forecast an early resumption of dividends.

Rails held relatively steady with good showing noted in Canadian Pacific, International Railways of Central American preferred and some of the western carriers.

Call money ruled unchanged at two per cent. The demand for loans seemed slackened but there was no change in rates. Commercial paper rates held steady with business quiet.

Foreign exchange was commercial sections were impressed that pound sterling ruled about four cents lower around $4.47 3-4. Trade in French francs showed a loss of about two points around 5.50 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York Sept. 19—Bond prices today continued to respond to the influences of easy money, with railroad issues leading the advance. Further shading of rates on time funds provided the incentive for expanded operations in liberty bonds, high grade foreign loans and domestic corporation issues.

Heavy trading again took place in Missouri Pacific 4s and International Great Northern Adjustment sixes on anticipation of benefits to be derived from the approval of the merger of these two roads together with the Texas coast line. The international great northern bonds, which daily have been making their previous high mark, reached a new 1924 peak price at 62.

Denver and Rio Grande refunding 5s responded to the announcement that the roads upset had been fixed for a sale decree at 17,000,000, with the ruling that the property must be disposed of at auction within 28 to 70 days. Other rail bonds which showed substantial gains included St. Louis Southwestern Consolidated 4s, Central of Georgia 5 1-2 and Louisville and Nashville 6s.

Wilson and Company issues were the most conspicuous strong spots in the industrial list. Their gains were commensurated by the heaviness of Virginia Carolina Chemical 6s, Eastern Cuba Sugar 7s and Chile Copper 6s.

Preliminary negotiations for an American loan to Czecho-Slovakia were reported under way in the financial district.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Sept. 19—Rains and colder weather that interfered with threshing and the crop movement both in the Canadian northwest and Montana tended to make wheat prices today average higher. Closing prices here for wheat were firm at the same as yesterday's finish to 3-4c up. December 133 3-4 to 137 7-8 and May 139 5-8 to 139 3-4, with corn unchanged to 3-4c down, oats varying from 1-4c decline to 3-8c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Upturns in the wheat market were associated with gossip that serious delay to the crop movement in Canada would be likely to increase the export buying of wheat in the United States. Talk was also current that the quality of Canadian wheat this season is below the usual standard, and that prolonged moisture would render the situation worse. Export buying of wheat today proved to be of sufficient volume to offset hedging sales. Besides, trans-Atlantic shipments from this country by way of the Gulf of Mexico continued heavy and reports emphasizing inadequacy of food supplies in France attracted considerable notice.

Corn and oats were relatively weak, influenced more or less by reports of a little improvement of corn crop conditions over the northern portions of the belt. The forecast, however, was for wet and cooler weather.

Packers of lard gave firmness to provisions.

CURB MARKET

New York, Sept. 19—Today's curb market was a two-sided affair, the oil issues losing ground in reflection of another series of gasoline and crude oil price cuts, while most of the industrials displayed moderate strength.

With few exceptions the net losses in the oil field were limited fractions.

Admission to two new stocks to the list added interest to the day's trading, transactions in Consolidated Electric and Power of Baltimore, "when issued," fluctuating between 33 3-8 and 33 1-4 and Pathe Exchange, Class A common holding at 38 3-4.

Gillette Safety Razor led the industrials with a gain of seven points. Swift International also was in demand, closing about four points higher.

The public utilities group was also active. American Gas and Electric, Commonwealth Power, American Light and Traction, and United Light and Power scored gains of from one to three points. Hazeltine Corporation and Dubilier featured the radios with advance of nearly two points each.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The outstanding event of the week in Norwich fifty years ago was the parade and review of the Third Regiment, Connecticut National Guard. Seven companies and the regimental band took part in the parade and the regiment was afterwards reviewed from the Wauregan house steps by His Honor, Mayor Greene. The Norwich Horticultural society was preparing for its eleventh annual exhibition in Breed Hall. At a special meeting of the court of common council that week the erection of 58 street lights in Greneville was authorized, 26 gas lights and 32 oil lights. Heavy rains that week broke a drought that had held this section in its grasp for five or six weeks. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of September, 1874, are as follows.

Monday, Sept. 14, 1874—The Rev. W. S. Palmer who has been called to this city by the Second oCngregational society is expected here this week, though his pastoral duties will not begin until October. He will occupy the parsonage on Otis street. Mr. Palmer will have a favorable reception here at the hands of all Christian people.

The ladies of Mohegan church give their annual fair next Wednesday and Thursday. Among the articles to be for sale, it is announced, there will be wooded spoons and baskets, with a bountiful supply of succotash, veokeag, brown bread, and other such toothsome articles.

The allusion to the Messers. Murphy as "coal heaver" the other day, was an accidental one, entirely, and there is no truth in the statement that we have tried to belittle the victory of those gentlemen in the late (boat) race (on the Thames river.)

Much interest was manifested in the opening of Trinity church by the members of that congregation, and there was a full attendance both forenoon and afternoon. The interior of the church has been repainted and the ceiling frescoed. The colors blend very harmoniously and the effect is very pleasing.

William Armstrong, of Scalpingtown Who was reported as being robbed of $40, is not the man. It was John McGarry.

Co. C, 3rd Regiment, C. N. G. will have a street parade tomorrow.

Tuesday, Sept. 15, 1874 — Court street is halting between two opinions; whether to be a river or a road bed and is waiting for the next rain to decide. Whether the authorities are frightened at getting so near the end of the job before they had begun another, or whether the men have been drawn off to take the place of the forty more or less, who were discharged by the town authorities, at Greeneville, upon the village becoming an integral part of the city, is a dark not to say bloody mystery.

A special meeting of the common council was held last evening. A verbal report was received from the police commissioners, in reference to lighting streets in Greeneville, which stated that it would take 58 lights, 26 gas and 32 oils. The report was accepted and the committee was ordered to erect the lamps. Ralph H. Fillmore and Sylvester Fagan were, on recommendation, elected policemen for Greeneville.

Arrangements have been made with the Norwich and Worcester and the New London Northern railroads to sell excursion tickets during the days of the fair from all stations to Norwich and return for thirty-five cents in addition to a single fair. This includes a ticket of admission to the fair.

Although the first part of the season has been very wet, we have been passing through a season of drought which has seldom been so prolonged. With the exception of one slight storm the 22d of August we have not had any rain since the fearful storm of August 8th and 9th. From all parts of the state come reports of suffering from dry weather.

Wednesday, Sept. 16, 1874 — The joint meeting of the board of school visitors and selectmen was held Tuesday. The object of the meeting was the reception of such claims for money as any school district saw fit to send, in addition to such money as had already been voted. No such claims were presented however.

Considerable discussion followed in reference to the conditions of affairs in the Taftville district which were represented to be very bad. The law had not been complied with requiring the attendance of children at school and the school was much too small to accomodate. An addition had been proposed, but was objected to and so was not attempted. It was also stated that the district had not spent, by a large amount, the money appropriated to it, and it had been thought best by the selectmen not to pay the balance. After some further consideration the meeting adjourned.

Mrs. William Dixon, wife of one of the most respectable residents of Greeneville, died yesterday morning, as suppose, of heart disease. She had retired the night before about 8:30 o'clock as well as usual having done her housework the day before. Yesterday morning her daughter found her mother on the bed dead.

William Scott, another resident of Greeneville, died yesterday afternoon having been sick but a few days. He will be remembered as the "blacksmith" in Greeneville for a great many years past.

Thursday, Sept. 17, 1874—The double scull boat race between Strong and White and Walling and Davison has been postponed indefinitely by reason of a disagreement of the distance to be rowed.

The first rain for nearly a month, came to us yesterday. It will be a blessing to all crops hereabouts, except peaches, which in this latitude are just ripening and imperatively demand warm dry weather, for their protection.

The window at the north end of Park church, which has just been put in place is very handsome. It contrasts well with the others, and with them produces a beautiful effect.

The new pistol shop on Chestnut street is now under operation, some thirty men being employed and the force will be increased to seventy men very soon.

The new building corner of West Main and Thames streets, West Side, is completed and occupied and the sidewalk in front has just been covered with concrete.

Col. Edward Harland of this city will attend the 8th Regiment reunion at Bridgeport today.

The Norwich Croquet club authorize a challenge to any club in the state to play them, best three in five four handed games on their grounds for the championship of the state and golden mallet and ball which they hold. They also challenge any club in the United States for the championship of America. Address, W. H. Nash, at Norwich.

Friday, Sept. 18, 1874—The eleventh annual fair of the Norwich Horticultural Society will be held at Breed hall next Tuesday and Wednesday. It is possible, if our citizens have only a mind, to make an attractive and creditable display on this occasion and we earnestly trust that our fruit and flower growers will enter into the spirit of the project and afford horticulturists the encouragement which these exhibitions are intended and ought to inspire.

An effort is being made by a number of Scotchmen in this place to form a Caledonian society, similar to those established in other parts of the country, having for its objects, benevolence, kindred, unity, and the perpetuation of the ancient manners, customs and literature of grand old Scotland. A meeting will be held at the engine house, Greeneville, September 22nd, 1874, at half past 7 o'clock to take action on the matter.

A city meeting will be held at the court house next Monday evening to lay a city tax. Our Greeneville citizens should not forget to be on hand.

The Hon. James A. Bill of Lyme, well known as a large dealer in fine cattle, has lately brought eighteen head of Devon cattle of Stanley Griswold of Torringford, Litchfield county.

The last of the hotels at Watch Hill closed Tuesday.

Saturday, Sept. 19, 1874—Notwithstanding the lowery weather and the muddy condition of the streets the parade of the Third Regiment took place in this city yesterday and taking all things into consideration was a creditable display. The early morning trains brought in the different companies with the band and officers of the regiment, but the rain compelled them to forego the programme of the morning and the rank and file amused themselves in wandering about the streets. At half past one o'clock the line was formed on Franklin square by companies as follows: Co. C., Capt. 36 men; Co. D., Capt. Bentley, 47 men; Co. E., Capt. Cranston, 35 men. Co. F., Capt. Johnson, 59 men; Co. G., Capt. King, 52 men; Co. H., Capt. Lewis, 48 men. Co. A., Capt. Landers, 53 men.

After parade and drill the regiment was reviewed from the Wauregan steps by His Honor, Mayor Greene, who was accompanied by Councilmen J. Hun, Smith and Col. H. H. Osgood. The review over the line was formed on Franklin square and the manual of arms was gone through with and then dismissed.

At a recent meeting of the committee of general arrangements of the Agricultural society it was voted to offer any amount up to $250, provided a like amount should be raised as an outside purse for an extra race open to all horses to take place during the coming fair.

At a recent meeting of the German Lutheran society the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Jacob Theis, president; Frank Ulmer, treasurer and secretary; Martin Durr, assistant secretary; trustees, William Noss, Fred Steiger, Philip Ensling, Oscar Hildebrand, George Hess, John Durr.

R. I. TEXTILE WORKERS VEST M'MAHON WITH FULL POWER

To Take Such Action as He May Deem Proper in Connection With Wage Cut of 10 Per Cent in the Mills of the Manville-Jencks in Pawtucket—Mr. McMahon Declares That Unless the Wage Cut is Discontinued a Strike Will be Called.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 21.—President Thomas F. McMahon was authorized to take such action as he might deem necessary in connection with the wage cut of 10 per cent. announced in the mills of the Manville-Jencks company here at the special meeting today of the Rhode Island Textile council called to consider its attitude on the matter.

President McMahon said that this enforcement of the recent vote of the United Textile Workers of America, with which the Rhode Island council is affiliated, carried with it authority for him to call for action on the part of the operatives at such time and each place as he decides, without further notice.

"We will use every reasonable influence to avoid a strike," he said, "but if the cut in wages is not restored the battle will be on. We do not want an impromptu strike. It is possible that enough influence can be brought to bear on the manufacturers to restore the cut, but only through organization. The manufacturers must restore wages or we will have a scrap."

Mr. Mahon said that his statement [illegible] today's vote applied to all other [illegible] might put wage reductions [illegible] effect.

[illegible] the situation at Manchester, N. H., where the Amoskeag [illegible] obtained the consent of a committee of operatives to a 10 per cent. [illegible] he said that his organizers were [illegible] with the situation there and that he had been informed only [illegible] that the Amoskeag workers had voted to follow the advice of the council as to any further action. Decision in this case, as in Rhode Island, would depend upon conditions, he said.

In his communication to the council which brought the vote of authorization, President McMahon said: "Organization of the textile workers under the banner of the American Federation of Labor is going on rapidly. The unorganized workers are mainly responsible for the present cut in wages. When the battle starts, and start it will, none but those (and their families) who are connected with our union will be assisted."

He summarized his reasons for asking authority to resist the cut as follows An increase in machinery operated by each operator enabling the manufacturers to save 25 per cent. in wages; reduction of 34 per cent. in the price of cotton in the retail market; only 17 cents of every dollar paid by the consumer for cotton cloth received by labor, and stock dvidends declared by the mills to avoid payments to the government used as the financial basis on which to endeavor to cut wages.

Acting on a rumor that the Lonsdale and Berkeley companies, operating five mills employing 4,000 persons in the Blackstone valley, were to increase the number of looms and frames tended by each worker, Organizer Francis J. Gorman of the United Textile Workers tonight called a special meeting of the Lonsdale employes to be held tomorrow night for discussion of the situation.

PRINCE OF WALES NOT COMING TO NEW LONDON

[illegible], N. Y. Sept 21 Just be[illegible] leaving the Prince [illegible] issued the following state[illegible]

"I am leaving the United States to[illegible] with very real regret. This is not [illegible] the end of a thoroughly enjoyable [illegible] three weeks which I shall always [illegible] but it also involves saying [illegible] to a host of friends who [illegible] I have made; in this country, who [illegible] done everything in their power to make me welcome. Your president [illegible] his fellow citizens with whom [illegible] me in contact, have united [illegible] me the right hand of good [illegible] very many others, whom [illegible] never met, have taken the [illegible] to write to me kind words [illegible] touched me deeply. It [illegible] not been possible for me to answer [illegible] letters as fully as I should [illegible] but I am glad to have this [illegible] to thank the writers collectively [illegible] I value their good wishes. [illegible] to them have sent me such cordial [illegible] Districts of the United States, which I have not yet seen [illegible] I hope more than ever it may be possible for me some day, [illegible] time and circumstances permit, to make an extensive tour of this great country.

"I have made the most of these [illegible] national weeks, which for [illegible] could not have been more full of [illegible] and interest, but the chief [illegible] of them which I shall carry [illegible] with me, the best of all memories [illegible] a departing guest, is one of [illegible] and appreciation and sympathy."

[illegible] of the prince's special [illegible] started again today, so that [illegible] from Harold avenue, Long [illegible] the New York, New [illegible] Hartford route to Springfield. It was due in that city [illegible] o'clock Monday morning. [illegible] was routed over the Boston [illegible] tracks to White River [illegible] and by way of the Central [illegible] line of Vermont, from White River Junction to St. Johns, Quebec. The rest of the route is over the Canadian National Railways.

The train comprised eight cars, two [illegible] cars, the Balmoral and the [illegible], a combined compartment-observation-library car, the Fort Grant, two sleeping cars, a cafe car and two baggage cars. Besides the royal staff Mr. Thompson and C. K. Howard, general tourist agent of the Canadian National, and the secret service men, will ride on the train.

The prince distributed farewell gifts today to many of those who had served him during his visit. Joseph Robinson, superintendent of the James A. Burden estate, which was the temporary royal residence, received a pair of gold cuff links bearing the prince's crest and the crest of the order of the garter. Sergeant D. S. Bock, of the state constabulary, who has helped guard the prince, received a silver cigarette case with prince's crest, while servants in the Burden home were given gold scarf pins similarly decorated.

The prince spent part of the afternoon making farewell calls upon Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rogers Winthrop of Woodbury, who were his official hosts during his visit. Louis E. Stoddard, president of the United States Polo association, and Mrs. Stoddard. Mr. and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clarke, Harrison Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Devereux Milburn.

RESCUED FROM CABIN OF AN OVERTURNED SLOOP

New York, Sept. 21.—Trapped for eight hours in the cabin of the auxiliary sloop Dawn, while the upturned craft was buffeted about in the waters off Sandy Hook last night after it had been capsized by a heavy wave, Oscar Olsen, a boat builder of Brooklyn, was rescued today when the sloop was washed ashore near Sandy Hook. George Olafsen, owner of the craft, was believed to have been drowned when the boat capsized.

Richard Ellingsen, also of Brooklyn, who had gone with the other men on a fishing trip, was thrown into the water but he managed to cling to the bottom of the upturned craft until it drifted ashore.

LAFOLLETTE MAKING BID FOR THE GERMAN VOTE

New York, Sept. 21.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette, in an address here today eulogized Frederick William Von Steuben, who served as an officer in the American army during the Revolutionary war, paid tribute to Carl Schurz, secretary of the interior under President Hayes, and discussed "the great part played by the German element of our population in the making of America."

The senator spoke at a celebration held in Yankee stadium under the auspices of the Steuben society, which is made up of men and women of German ancestry. Although he declared he was not speaking as a presidential candidate and would not discuss political issues, he was introduced as "the next president of the United States."

A wave of cheers greeted Mr. LaFollette when he asserted that "throughout the terrible strain of the World war, citizens of German blood loyally supported the government of the United States."

BELLS TO CHIME CARILLON MUSIC AT COHASSET, MASS.

Cohasset, Mass., Sept. 21.—Carillon music as it has been heard in Flanders for centuries will ring out for the first time on the south shore on Tuesday when a set of bells presented to St. Stephen's Episcopal church here by Mrs. Hugh Bancroft in memory of her mother, Mrs. Jessie M. Barron is dedicated. The Carillon, which is of English casting, consists of 23 bells, the largest weighing 2401 pounds and the entire set weighs six tons. Hamiel Lefevere, assistant Carillineur at St. Rombold's, Cardinal Mercier's cathedral at Malines, Belgium, will play the carillon for the dedication and will give a series of recitals in the next two weeks.

Bishop William Lawrence of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, will officiate at the dedication and the preacher will be Rev. Dr. Milo H. Gates of New York, a former rector of St. Stephen's.

POISON IN STOMACH OF A CLERGYMAN'S WIFE

Mount Vernon, Ill., Sept. 21.—The same kind of poison found in the stomach of Mrs. Anna Height, whose husband, Rev. Lawrence M. Height, of Ina, is being held in jail here pending an investigation of his wife's death, has been found in the stomach of Wilford Sweetin, who died under mysterious circumstances nearly two months ago.

Presence of the poison in Sweetin's stomach was reported today to Coroner Jesse Reece here by Dr. W. D. McNally, Chicago chemist to whom the contents of the stomach of the dead man had been sent for analysis. The message was brief, merely informing the coroner that poison had been found and that a detailed report would be sent later.

A. F. OF L. CAMPAIGN FOR LAFOLLETTE AND WHEELER

Boston Sept. 2.—One hundred thousand circulars will be distributed to Boston working men as a part of the nation wide campaign to be waged by the American Federation of Labor in behalf of the La Follette-Wheeler independent ticket in the coming election, it was announced today at a meeting of the central labor union. The circulars, it was said, will set forth the reasons why organized labor has given its support to the independent ticket.

BINGHAM ADDRESSED THE MIDDLESEX COUNTY REP. CLUB

East Hampton, Sept. 21.—With 200 republicans present from all parts of the state, including candidates on the state ticket, the second annual outing of the Middlesex County Republican club was held Saturday afternoon at Carriers' pavilion. Among the guests of honor present were former Governors Frank B. Weeks and Marcus H. Holcomb Lieutenant Governor Hiram H. Bingham, candidate for governor; Senator John H. Trumbull of Plainville, candidate for lieutenant governor; Senator Ernest E. Rogers of New London, candidate for state treasurer; Congressman Thomas F. Cargo, of Pennsylvania. Senator Frederick De Peyster of Portland, Conn., to toastmaster at the banquet.

Lieut. Gov. Bingham warned his republican friends not to look upon LaFollette as a candidate who has no chances in the present campaign. The republicans must work for a victory in the wheat states, especially Iowa and Minnesota, he said, for if La Follette carries those states, where he is strong, in his opinion the election will be thrown into congress for settlement.

The lieutenant governor criticized the democratic platford, which calls for the repeal of three taxes—the personal unincorporated business and gasoline taxes. These three taxes netted the state $2,500,000 he said, and he asked his democratic opponents where this money would come fro mif the taxes are repealed.

The issue today, according to the gubernatorial candidate, is one of sound common sense and Calvin Coolide against Utopian ideas. He criticised LaFollette for attacking the constitution under which he said, the country had lived and prospered for 150 years.

Senator Trumbull spoke of the work of the finance committee and also attacked the democrats for their demand for a repeal of the taxes mentioned by the candidate for governor.

Former Governor Holcomb told his listeners that the country was on the eve of one of the most important elections in his remembrance. This is due, he said, to the attack that has been made on the Constitution.

He praised both the national and state republican tickets, declaring they are among the best the republican party has ever had. He predicted that Bingham would carry the state by between 50,000 and 100,000 majority.

Miss Murray, state woman's club organizer spoke of the work of her organization and praised the record of President Coolidge.

Congressman Crago, speaking of international affairs, declared that the United States should not join the league of nations. The country is always ready to help nations in trouble, he said, but if the United States should become a member of the league, "it would have to be told what to do and could not act as at present in its own free will."

In the courst of his remarks, Lieutenant Governor Bingham said "The platform of the democratic party adopted at the Hartford convention last Wednesday, after endorsing John W. Davis and Charles W. Bryan, starts right in with a proposal to repeal certain taxes in Connecticut. It says:

"We favor the repeal of the personal tax, the unincorporated business tax and the gasoline tax. Let us remember that these taxes combined yield the state more than two and a half millions dollars a year. I believe that the people of Connecticut favor a sound financial policy, the pay-as-you-go policy, which was the motto of the last republican general assembly. Our income and our outgo are now fairly well balanced.

"The democratic platform does not indicate where this $2,500 000 is going to come from. It is by cutting down appropriations for education or for humane institutions? Do they expect to reduce the $1,500,000 we appropriated last year for the aid of the tuberculosis commission, or are they going to provide less generously for the insane and feeble-minded? If they do not expect to raise the money by radical cuts in these appropriations, perhaps they are looking to new forms of taxation. The hole left in our revenue, must be filled.

"It would have been more satisfactory had the democrats stated in their platform whether they propose to cut appropriations by the entire amount of $2,500,000 which will be lost if the three taxes under consideration are repealed, or whether they propose to invent some new form of taxation to make up for the deficit or whether they propose to float bonds and push the payment ahead for our children to bear.

"Since these three forms of taxation affect a very large number of people, it is easy to understand the reason for including such an irresponsible proposal in the platform of the democratic party. As a matter of fact, the personal tax is not burdensome. The main advantage of it, aside from the revenue which it produces is that it serves to remind all types of voters that government costs something, that you cannot get something for nothing, and that the government of this state is their government, in which they should take a direct personal interest because they pay for it.

"The second on the list of taxes which the democratic party proposes to repeal is the unincorporated business tax. As a matter of fact a republican general assembly ten years ago placed a tax on the earnings of corporations. This tax contributed largely to the retirement of the debt which had been inherited from the last democratic administration. While in all respects this tax was fair, it was found that among business as a whole an injustice was done, because through the operation of the tax, an incorpated business was taxed, while the same industry or business if operated by an individual or partnership—and there were many of each—escaped the tax and had an unfair advantage.

Consequently the tax on unincorporated business was provided in the interest of justice and fair play and to produce revenue. The democrats make no protest against the tax on corporations. Here again the tax now on our statute books brings to the mind of every business man the fact that the government of the state costs money and that he is directly interested in its being effeciently and economically managed.

"If he can escape from this tax by dissolving his corporation or by failing to be incorporated, and can therefore get the idea that he is getting the benefits of government without having topay for it, we reduce his interest in the government and take away from his the temptation to see whether the money that is collected is being properly spent. Here again the appeal is not to the business man who wants to escape his share of the burden.

"In the third place they oppose the gasoline tax. The proceeds of this tax are used entirely for repairs on the roads, repairs which are occasioned by the amount of use the roads receive. It is a tax which is justly apportioned to the amount of service rendered. I believe the aim of government is to secure justice. What can be fairer than a tax like the gosaline tax. Last year it gave us nearly a million dollars.

"It is the desire of the people of Connecticut that the righway department should spend a million dollars less per annum in the upkeep of the reads? If not, ho does the democratic party propose to raise the million dollars which would be lost by repealing the gasoline tax? It is going to do it by restoring a general property tav on town which was taken by the the last general assembly and doubling it? Or does it propose to do it by borrowing money and increasing our indebtedness? Or does it propose to do it by increasing the license tax on each car, no matter how much or how little is to used?

"It does not seef to me entireley creditable to a major political party to throw out as bait to the voters any offer to reduce taxes by $2,500,000 a year without stating how this heduction is going to be met.

Four Autoists Were Injured at Poquonoc

Party From Towanda, Pa., All Men, Were Taken to Hospitals in New London.

New London, Sept. 21.—Four Towanda, Pa., autoists were injured at a sharp curve at Poquonoc, near here today, when their machine collided with a truck and overturned. The injured:

John C. Ingham, attorney, fractured skull and three broken ribs.

Judge A. C. Fanning, scalp wound, cuts about the arm.

Dr. John F. Kingsley, face and chest bady cut.

L. R. Frost, cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred at Trail's corner, a dangerous right ange curve. The Towanda party, with Frost driving, were proceeding east toward Groton and met the truck, owned by the state highway department and driven by Clifton Swan, of East Haddam, at the turn. The driver of the Towanda car turned sharply to the left and, according to witnesses, head-on into the larger machine. The sedan was demolished and turned over on its side. Swan was not hurt.

The injured men were taken to the Home Memorial hospital in this city but later Dr. Kingsley and Frost were released. Attorney Ingham and Judge Fanning were resting comfortably tonight.

FIVE DROWNED WHEN AUTO PLUNGED INTO RIVER

Boston, Sept. 21.—Four or five persons, including a child, were drowned here tonight, it is believed when a closed automobile crashed through the railing of the Congress street bridge tonight into Fort Point channel.

Firemen rushed to the scene in response to a box alarm sent in by bystanders and two dived into the water which has a maximum depth of 14 feet at that point. A rope was fastened about the car but the combined efforts of policemen, firemen and others failed to raise it, and a navy lighter and a diver were sent for.

Witnesses told the police that they saw a sedan travelling at high speed come to the dead end of Dorchester avenue swerve onto the sidewalk of the bridge and plunge through the railing, carrying away a fifteen foot section.

They said that the machine appeared to be filled with passengers and that only one window was open.

Firemen from a nearby station were summoned. Two stripped off their outer clothing and dived from the bridge into the dark water. They reported oil and many bubbles coming to the surface, but working under handicaps in the darkness, they were unable to open the door or release the passengers. One of the men caught a rope around the body of the car, but the crowd ashore were unable to raise the submerged machine.

In response to a hurry call the Charlestown navy yard dispatched a wrecking lighter and a diver to assist in raising the automobile.

It was indicated that a child was one of those carried into the channel when some time after the plunge, a child's hat floated to the surface of the water.

The accident occurred only a block from the Summer street bridge where in 1916, a trolley car loaded with passengers crashed through the bridge gates, resulting in the drowning of 49 persons.

The body of a five year old girl was found by the police dragging the channel about 100 feet from the spot where the car rested on the bottom of the channed. After the discovery of the body the police at midnight, after three hours of dragging, suspended operations pending the arrival of the navy lighter and divers.

MEANS REPUDIATES TESTIMONY GIVEN AGAINST DAUGHERTY

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 21.—(By the A. P.)—Repudiation as a "tissue of lies," all that he told the senate committee in its investigation of the administration of Harry M. Daugherty as attorney general, has been made in a signed statement by Gaston B. Means and star witness for Daugherty investigators, according to a copy of the statement made public at his home here today by Mr. Daugherty.

The Means' statement as incorporated in a letter sent by Mr. Daugherty to John W. Davis, the democratic nominee for president. The letter as dated Sept. 19.

United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, prosecutor of the committee, now vice presidential candidate on the La Follette ticket, is charged in the Means' statement with having "put this tissue of lies' into the mouth of Means, and the majority of other witnesses.

"These witnesses and myself were persuaded to make these false statements," continues the Means' statement, "by Senator Wheeler under threats of indictment in some cases by promises of gain and aid in others.

The Means' statement was made in Washington on September 11 according to Mr. Daugherty who said it was given to him voluntarily. According to the former attorney general, Means is now in seclusion preparing additional data concerning his former false testimony. Mr. Daugherty himself left his Columbus avenue home today without announcing his destination The former department of justice agent in his statement says he testified he was before the Wheeler committee for only one reason. That was, his statement, said, because on the day before he was to take stand, friends of the attorney beneral told him that "Mr. Daugherty said I could go to hell.

In his statement, Means declared he has in his possession "documentary evidence" which he said "by a quick review of the testimony of the Wheeler committee, it can be proved conclusively that Senator Wheeler knew that he was framing Mr. Daugherty and the republican administration and to some extent this involves the oil scandal."

HOLY NAME DELEGATES ADDRESSED BY COOLIDGE

Washington, Sept. 21.—The essence of freedom, President Coolidge told an audience of delegates to the Holy Name society convention here today, is "civil, political and religious liberty," as "solemnly declared in the fundamental law of the land."

"Our constitution," he daclared, "guarantees it fully, completely and adequately."

Mr. Coolidge then emphasized that the constitution also provides "no religious test shall be required as a qualification to any office or public trust, under the United States."

"I do not say that we, as citizens, have always held ourselves to a proper observance of these standards toward each other," he continued, "but we have nevertheless established them and declared our duty to be obedient to them. This is the American ideal of ordered liberty under the law. It calls for rigid discipline."

The president went into a thorough exposition of his theory of American government in the address The government, he said, was the result "of an effort to establish institutions under which the people as a whole should have the largest possible advantages."

"Class and privilege were outlawed," he asserted, "freedom and opportunity were guaranteed. America is not going to abandon its principles or dessert its ideals."

The principle which the Holy Name societies represents, the president declared, is the "main support" of these ideals. Reverence for God is the foundation of American institutions, he said, and "unnumbered organizations of which your own is one exist for its promotion."

The right of individual liberty, he went on, carries with it under the American government the right of individual property, and in this connection, he declared, "scoialism and communism cannot be reconciled with the principles which our institutions represent."

Out of obedience to the constitution and service under the government, the president declared, "the people of our country have secured the greatest success that was ever before experienced in human history."

The ship is to be refitted in the spring for further exploration but no radical changes will be made since Captain MacMillan has said that she is almost perfect for that work, especially as an ice-resisting craft.

TAILORS COMPLAIN OF EXTRAVAGANCE OF WOMEN

London, Sept. 21.—Bond street tailors have a new complaint. They are up in arms because the extravagance of English women in the matter of dress leaves no money for the men folks of the household to spend upon their own raiment.

Putting forward the theory that it is more necessary for a man to be well dressed than a woman, because clothes with a man are a business asset, one enraged Bond street tailor declared that "everywhere one sees badly dressed husbands accompanied by extravagantly dressed wives, while shabby business men dictate letters to stenographers wearing the latest thing from Paris."

"It is time," he continued, "that men rebelled."

ALL COUNTRIES TO BE INVITED TO DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

Geneva, Sept. 21.—(By The A. P.)—The United States, Germany and Russia will undoubtedly be invited to participate in the work of the League of Nations commission which will prepare the agenda of the international conference for the reduction of armaments to be held in June next year at Geneva. Indeed, it is frankly admitted that the conference in question could scarcely be accounted a success unless all three of these countries, which are not yet members of the league are present.

The preliminary plans provide that the conference arrangements will be delegated to the so-called temporary mixed commission of the league, otherwise known as the disarmament commission. This body is composed of naval and military experts and also diplomatic agents of the governments and civilians, including representatives of labor and capital.

Provided this commission is enlarged for the special purpose of the forthcoming conference, it is planned that the conference will be split up into three sections, one for naval problems the second for land armaments, and the third for the study and adoption of conventions for international control of the traffic in arms and control of private manufacture of arms.

The United States has already intimated that she will attend the arms traffic conference.

League leaders are anxious to secure Germany's early entry into the league, because it is believed this would simplify the preliminary conference work.

The presentation of the final text of the draft to the full commission on armaments, and subsequently to the assembly, is expected to be attended by a lengthy debate, as some of the delegates are ironically declaring that "the big twelve," while all men of eminence, do not represent the entire assembly.

FIVE MEN ENTOMBED IN THE RAINS MINE, UTAH

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 21.—Five men are reported to be entombed in the Rains mine of the Carbon Fuel company at Rains, near Castle Gate, abot 100 miles south of here, as the result of an explosion at six o'clock tonight.

The explosion is said to have occurred in the second left entry way which caved in, leaving the man way and entr way clear.

Rescue crews from five camps in Spring Canyon, in which the mine is situated, are being sent to the scene.

It is expected the entombed men will be reached before nine o'clock unless gas or other cave-ins hamper the work.

No reports upon the probability of the men escaping alive have been received here.

GEDNEY FARMS HOTEL WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 21.—The Gedney Farms hotel, one of the best known resorts in Westchester county, was destroyed by fire early today. Losses through the destruction of the hotel and property owned by the guests were estimated at more than $1,000,000. All the guests escaped unhurt.

Lack of sufficient water pressure was blamed for the destruction of the building.

When Edward H. Crandall, owner of the hotel, arrived from Manchester, Vt., he said the loss through destruction of the hostelry was $750,000. Losses by the guests, it was estimated, would total more than $250,000.

The fire started in an unoccupied room on the fourth floor. Its origin has not been determined.

OVERCOME BY ILLNESS WHILE PREACHING SERMON

New Haven, Sept. 21.—While delivering a sermon on the Prince of Wales in Calvary Baptist church tonight, Rev. James A. Metzes, the pastor was overcome by illness and had to retire from the pulpit. After he had delivered the introductory remarks, it was seen that the clergyman was not well and he preached but a few minutes when he announced that his talk would be given at some other time.

In his introductory statements, the pastor drew a word picture of what an American prince should be like. He said such a prince "must be able to do something, to work to contribute to the welfare of mankind, he must be a disciple of the devinity of work for no one ever enjoyed the respect of his fellow men unless he worked.

WILLIMANTIC

Edward Morris of Strong's court, this city, a laborer on a state road construction job in Storrs, was injured slightly and his Scripp-Booth touring car was badly damaged about noon Sunday when the machine went off the road and into the bushes at the bottom of Spring Hill, on the Storrs-Willimantic highway, in Mansfield. The car struck a soft pile of dirt which had been left at one side of the road and swerved to one side and down a small embankment. The limbs of trees tore through the top of the car and broke the upper part of the windshield. The fenders and running board on one side of the machine were damaged when the car sideswiped a small cherry tree. Morris was thrown against the steering wheel and sustained a lacerated nose and cuts about the face from his broken eyeglasses. Walter Broadhurst, also of this city, who was riding with Morris, got a slight skin wound on one side of his head. Harold Mastin of this city hauled the damaged machine to the Temple Street garage for repairs. Morris was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, but upon arrival there refused to enter the institution, so was taken on to his home, where a physician treated his wounds.

At a special sitting of the police court late Friday afternoon Romerald LeRoy and Joseph Generaux, middle-aged residents of Woonsocket, R. I., charged with intoxication, pleaded not guilty. When asked to plead both men signified that they were hard of hearing. This sprung a surprise on the officials, as their hearing faculities had appeared normal before the court session. Officer Arthur Hurley, who happens to be equipped with a fine set of leather lungs, used his hands to megaphone the judge's words to the intemperate gentlemen from Rhode Island. Following a complaint, the men were arrested by Chief McArthur and Officer Hurley as they were about to get into their automobile on West Main street. Generaux said that he owned the machine and LeRoy had come here with him to call on an old friend. Both admitted having taken drinks. Judge Foss imposed a fine of $15 and costs in each case, amounting to $20.16 and for a few minutes the prospects of further trouble were imminent for the visitors, but a local friend of the pair came to the police station in answer to a telephone call and paid their fines.

First Selectman Russell A. Andrews, democratic, and again nominee for that office, can now sit back and take life easy, for at least one additional term, for his name has been endorsed by the republican party. At the republican caucus Louis A. Belanger had been nominated for the office, but the following morning Mr. Belanger notified the town committee that he would not run, and an attempt to fill the vcancy was without results. The time for handing in the names of candidates to the town clerk for his delivery of them to the state secretary's office is set at 18 days before election and at the eleventh hour the name of Mr. Andrews was endorsed.

Although light, the material of which this year's Windham High school gridiron eleven will be composed appears to be of the speedy type which made history for Windham last year and established a championship record. Coach Callaghan is highly enthusiastic at the prospects of another perfect year. Hernberg and Buck are the candidates for center and the experience gained last year by the former will in all probability place him in line for the first call. Sawicki and Cohen are the guards and besides Captain Burton, who is listed for a tackle position, Johnson and Dawson are out for the assignment on the other side of the line. Arnold Storrs, a second year man, will carry up the left end position. Other candidates for the right wing position are Uher, Rood and Prater. The backfield will be picked from Nichols, Meikle, Williamson, Lariviere, Tomasko, Williams, Prater and Rising.

NEW LONDON MAN, COOKING DINNER, NAPS, AND IS OVERCOME BY GAS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Sept. 21.—Patrick Fogarty, 58 Jay street, was taken to Lawrence hospital this afternoon, suffering from gas poisoning. Fogarty was found in an unconscious condition in his home about 3.30 o'clock. Whether Fogarty was accidently asphyxiated or attempted self-destruction, it is not known, but it is believed that the inhalation of the poison fumes was accidental. At the institution this evening it was stated that Fogarty's condition was favorable and it was believed that he would recover.

Fogarty did not put in an appearance about the house throughout the day, so occupants of the house decided to investigate. Going to the floor occupied by Fogarty the gas fumes were strong and when the door of the kitchen was opened Fogarty was found unconscious in a chair with the gas issuing from a cooking range. The cock was shut off and windows opened to permit the gas to escape from the room after which Patrolman David Nagle was notified. With the arrival of the officer at the house, Dr. Alfred Labensky was summoned and first aid treatment was administered, after which Fogarty was removed to the hospital.

It is believed that Fogarty attempted to cook a meal on the stove for there was every evidence that cooking had been in progress and that he seated himself in a chair and fell asleep. The cock was not turned sufficiently to permit a full flow of gas, with the result that it became extinguished, but was still far enough open to permit the emission of the poison fumes.

Frank Miller, a stranger was arrested at the union station late this afternoon by Captain Kelley and Officer Montgomery, of the force of special agents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, charged with train riding. He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

Monday will be election day when the voters of New London will elect one member of the city council and one selectman. Councilor Thomas Gragan and Edward L. Streeter, Jr., are candidates for councillor while George Haven, former captain of police and George Goss are the nominees for selectmen. Mr. Goss being a present member of the board. Interest is centered on the election of a councillor. Mr. Gragan's re-election is being combatted by voters of the Fifth ward principally, who desire that Mr. Streeter, a new resident in New London, be given the office. Mr. Gragan was defeated for office at the election held a week ago by only 21 votes and as he has been a resident of New London about half a century has served the city as aldermen two terms and councillor one term, his chances of defeating Mr. Streeter appear good. However, members of the Chamber of Commerce and Harbour club, the latter an organization with a large membership, are working for the election of Mr. Streeter. At the election earlier in the month Mr. Gragan was defeated by Mr. Streeter in the former's own ward, but it is believed by supporters of Mr. Gragan that the tables will be turned at the election tomorrow.

Patrolman Jeremiah Murphy is absent from duty being ill at his home on Ledyard street.

The condition of Mrs. Mary E. Dill, alias Mrs. Mary E. Maher, who was found unconscious from gas inhalation at her home, 171 Main street Friday evening, is reported at Lawrence hospital today as being vastly improved and the discharge of the woman will probably occur early next week. The patient regained consciousness Saturday forenoon and since that time her condition has improved.

An automobile, a Cadillac sedan, operated by L. R. Frost, 309 York avenue, Towanda, Pa., and in which were Judge A. C. Fanning, Attorney John C. Ingham and Dr. John F. Kingsley, all of Towanda, was wrecked Friday afternoon at Trail's corner, Poquonoc, when the machine crashed head-on into a truck laden with lumber and operated by Clifton Swan, of East Haddam. Frost escaped injury other than bruises. Judge Fanning received scalp wounds and cuts on the elbow; Dr. Kingsley had lacerations of the chest and Attorney Ingham suffered a fractured skull and three fractured ribs. Judge Fanning and Attorney Ingham are patients at Home Memorial hospital, but Frost and Dr. Kingsley have been discharged. The condition of Attorney Ingham was reported today as being somewhat improved.

At a meeting of the chairmen of the various democratic ward committees, held in the office of William T. Connor, democratic town committeeman Friday evening the attorney was removed from that office and Councillor William C. Fox was elected to succeed him. Dr. Fox had four of the five possible votes. The election of Mr. Fox to the office is the culmination of a factional fight that has existed between the forces led by Mr. Fox and Mr. Connor two years.

John Donohue, of Westerly, and Mrs. Sadie Stevens, 44 Twelfth street, patients at Lawrence hospital, were able to return to their respective abodes

Reginald Landrom a sailor stationed at the submarine base, was before Judge Cornelius C. Costello in the Groton town court, Saturday forenoon, charged with the non-support of his wife and three children. Ladram was ordered to pay $65 monthly to his wife and children. Landram was ordered to appear in court by State Policeman Fred Caron, of Groton barracks, following complaints being made to the state police barracks that Landram was neglecting his family. Investigation revealed the allegation to be substantiated by facts, one of the children is a patient at Lawrence hospital from undernourishment.

John Collins, a former resident of New London, was instantly killed at his employment in Providence last Wednesday when 60 volts of electricity passed through his body. The body of Mr. Collins was brought to New London Saturday forenoon for burial in the family plot in the local cemetery. Mr. Collins is survived by his wife and two sons, Raymond and John Collins, by his mother, Mrs. Mary Collins, all of Providence, and by brother, Michael Collins, of Ocean avenue, this city. His uncle is Patrick J. Clifford, also of Ocean avenue.

Newton E. Rowley, 348 Connecticut avenue, employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company, was taken into custody by Sergeant Nelson Smith Saturday afternoon, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was held in bonds of $200 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning. Rowley had been about the city imbibing in strong drink during the early afternoon. When he attempted to operate his machine through traffic on Bank street, near the corner of State street, the car bumped against a commercial car of the Shalett Dyeing & Cleaning Company, the collision forcing the latter car to hit a third machine. No damage was sustained by either of the three machines, except that Rowley's car received a disfigured right front fender. Sergeant Smith was near and after taking Rowley into custody caused Traffic Officer John Courtney to operate the machine with the prisoner in it to the police station.

Thomas A. Miller, 61 Maple avenue, an employe of the Connecticut Power Company, has been admitted to the Norwich State Tuberculosis Sanatorium below Thamesville, for treatment.

John Luziette, 68 Belmont street, New Britain, was in New London Saturday, when he visited the police station and requested aid in locating his son, Vittorio, 13, who ran away from home last Wednesday. The father stated that when his son left home he was accompanied by Gemi Baldi, 20, in a Ford car and that Luziette had been informed that the pair came to this city and that Baldi had disposed of the automobile here. The missing youth is described as being about five feet in height, has dark hair and brown eyes.

Harold Kahler, 122 Ledyard street, complained to the police Saturday that his bicycle, which he had left on the grounds of the Chapman Technical High school in the forenoon had been stolen.

An automobile owned by Mrs. Ida Bragaw, West Chestnut street, and operated by Joseph F. Canfield, 56 Huntington street, and a machine listed in the name of John E. Blastow, 210 Mitchell street, Groton, were in collision on State street Saturday afternoon. Canfield alleges that the driver of the Groton owned car evaded responsibility by speeding away without stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage occasioned. According to Canfield he was operating his machine northerly and the Blastow car, which was operated from alongside the curb, started for course of traffic without the driver, a woman, giving a signal that the car was about to move. The car driven by Canfield was badly damaged.

City Manager William A. Holt is to be away from the city during the ensuing week beginning today. He was given leave of absence at the council meeting last week. Mr. Holt is to attend the convention of city managers to be held at Montreal and asked for permission to leave the city. The programme forwarded to Mr. Holt, he said, indicated such a session as would be both interesting and profitable. Mr. Holt also desires to see Montreal and to learn its methods of doing things. That cort of information is such as a wideawake man can profit by.

It is claimed that the city will lay a sewer in Norwood avenue that will accommodate the residents there, as well as those in adjoining streets. A few residents in that section petitioned for the sewer but the laying of it was objected to, on the ground that the cesspools in use there now were adequate to accommodate all the property and that they could very well get along without the sewer. That same line of argument was heard when th esewers were first introduced in New London, but they were laid and it is altogether improbable if a single owner of real estate or tenant would be willing to abandon the sewers now, even if they could be paid all the money the sewers cost for so doing. In Norwood avenue, the claim is made that sewage now flows out on the surface of the ground and that sink water finds its way into the street. This alone should be reason, it is claimed, why the sewer should be installed. The health officer of the city recommended it and is still insistent that it should be provided if the health of that locality is to be safeguarded. The section has been opened up to residences but a comparatively short time, but it is building up and the class of houses being erected are of the desirable sort.

Brainard Masonic lodge has lost three of its members during the last quarter. They were Hadlai A. Hull, a Mason 24 years; Charles L. Ockford, a member of the order 47 years, and Charles S. Jennings, a member of Brainard 33 years.

Mrs. John Denig has gone to Sweden for a visit with relatives and will be absent several months.

Next Sunday the Elks are to have their annual outing and are anticipating a large gathering as a couple of other lodges are to join with the New London brothers.

It is estimated that the attendance at the theatres in New London Saturday evening was greater than on any two nights during the past week. All the side streets afforded parking spaces for autos and the operators of machines did not fail to make use of the spaces.

There are indications that there will not be as many gasoline pumps in use in the city during 1925 as are in use now. Parties who have installed them are finding that there is little or no profit in them when they have paid the fee the city demanded as a license to operate them. The profit in the sale of the gasoline is claimed to be small and that accommodation for patrons of the garages is about all that is the result to the places that installed pumps.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

On the beach of a South Sea Island sat a young and pretty white girl, crooning to a babe in her arms. The clothing she wore consisted chiefly of rags, and her living quarters were a squalid hut visible a short distance up the white, sandy beach.

Now and then she would look out and toward the horizon where the blue sky met the green waves. Thousands of miles away in that direction she possessed a palatial home, with a wardrobe containing many luxurious garments, servants and everything that wealth could give her. As she thought of them and then looked down at her attire a smile of amusement lighted up her features; she could find only humor in the incongruous situation.

For she had found love on the barren island far from civilization. Washed up on the beach after jumping from the yacht on which her husband was entertaining a riotous group of guests, she had been found by a young missionary, and to whom civilization now had no appeal.

This is a brief sketch of one of the most fascinating stories that have ever found their way to the screen. It is The Marriage Cheat, a First National attraction, produced by Thomas H. Ince, which is the feature attraction at the Breed theater today and Tuesday.

It is based in the magazine story by Frank R. Adams, and John Gorsdal Wray directed it. In the cast are such favorites as Percy Marmont, Leatrice Joy, Adolphe Menjou, Lasla Winter Henry Barrows and J. P. Lockney.

Ben Turpin in The Dare-Devil and the Pathe news make up the remainder.

Palace Theater

Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt head a phenomenal acting cast in the big screen version of Louis Joseph Vance's The Lone Wolf, which opened last night at the Palace theater. Miss Dalton is seen as the trusted agent of The Pack while Hoit plays Michael Lanyard The Lone Wolf. This it becomes the center of a series thrilling scenes. The Pack pursues Lanyard, wanting the plans he has taken from one of its most notorious members. Lanyard outwits the man-killers only to surrender the plans when one villainous Eckstrom gets the drop on him and Miss Dalton. There is a corking love story Miss Dalton as Lucy Shannon and Lanyard forming its main theme. The picture is full of excitemen, and there is the air scenes in particular taking one's breath away. Lovers of melodrama, tense excitement and thrills should not miss this unusual production.

Mack Sennett's latest two reel comedy Little Robinson Corkscrew, Pathe news, Hodge Podge and Palace supreme orchestra.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday Agnes Ayres in When a Woman Loves.

If you have seen the programmes offered at the Broadway theatre for the past few weeks you will understand what we mean when we say that there is another perfect show scheduled for the first half of this week, starting today.

Meyers & Nolan in Singing Our Own Songs, offer a combination of song, dance and comedy above the ordinary.

Hoffman & Lambert in The Hattery present twelve minutes packed with likeable entertainment.

In third spot you'll see the 20th century mystery, Miss Norma and her golden violin—the violin with the human brain. It is an entertaining an act as it is baffling and mysterious.

Laughs and more laughs features Billy McDermott, the commander in chief of Coxey's army.

Bellis Duo in feats of aerial daring make a sensational closing number.

An hour and a half of worth-while entertainment is wrapped up in Pola Negri's latest Paramount picture, Lily of the Dust, which had its premiere last night at the Broadway theatre. The colorful atmosphere, the lavish backgrounds and settings, the capable direction and the superb acting of Miss Negri, ably supported by a powerful cast, combine to make this photoplay one of the outstanding hits of the season.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Here is another remarkable offer from the United States Civil service commission. There is to be an examination in October to fill positions of immigration patrol inspectors on the Mexican and Canadian borders. Applicants will be required to perform patrol duty on these international borders, much the same as a soldier. Applicants must have at least two years experience as a low enforcement officer or at least six months experience in a combatant branch of the army, navy or marine corps. Get busy. They will accept men who have served in the Texas Rangers or state constabulary organizations. And if you are as good as that the government will pay you the recklessly extravagant salary of $1680 a year—get that's a little over $32 a week. Now there's a smashing good job for somebody.

A new record, apparently, for voters was made in one day in the town of Killingly was achieved Saturday when 206 men and women were admitted to the electorate and will be entitled to participate in the coming annual town meeting on the first Monday in October. Town officials charged with the duty of qualifying these new voters had a busy day, it may be imagined, and were at their work well after 8 o'clock. No more electors will be admitted in advance of the town election, but people who are admitted will have their names in advance of the state and national elections in November.

Dr. W. H. Judson, borough health officer, acted Saturday anent the complaints relative to the nuisance caused by dumping refuse near the Riverview that he would take the necessary steps against any person guilty of such refuse there if the names of the parties are given him. Since he has ascertained that dumping is largely done at night there is small chance of catching parties, but if anyone cares to watch out for them and see that their cases are dealt with, and at once.

Monday afternoon at the of- fices of the selectmen there is to be a public session asking that a petition be extended easterly from the present terminus of a route being established by Mrs. Agness Plone [illegible] a depth of about 650 feet on property owned by Mr. Fisher. This hearing is in accordance with statutes providing that the selectmen may hear any opposition to the petition being presented to the board of the voters at the annual meetings held on the first Monday in October.

The matter is in the hands of the select- men at the request that a clause be included in the warning for the annual town meeting, providing for the auditing of the books of the town by certified accountants. The petition received considerable discussion when it met with much opposition on account of the heavy cost involved.

Starting it is indicated by the num- bers there Saturday is preparing for a lively town election next month, the voters to the number of 40 were made Saturday, this being an unusually large number to be admitted at one time in that town. Of those who were made 42 enrolled as Democrats, 37 as republicans and the remainder no choice.

Here it is: Once again the Cloud Observer makes his semi-annual weather prediction. It is interesting and worthwhile saving for comparison with the actual weather during the next half year:

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 21. Soon after I started writing these semi-annual predictions, 26 years ago, for [illegible] papers, I was a fresh [illegible] to the Isle of Sabi, Block I., on the schooner S. D. J. Harmon of, Camden, Maine, Capt. [illegible] h, skipper.

We were compelled to leave the port of San Juan Porto Rico without [illegible] a few days after, owing to much [illegible] ther on that island at that [illegible] ding light had a bad time [illegible] 28 days, most of the time [illegible] ng like an egg shell just [illegible] the Gulf Stream.

[illegible] these 23 days I compared my [illegible] with Capt. French's weath- [illegible] and those of Mate Hanson, a [illegible] and found we were all [illegible] the same line of predicting [illegible] for the entire period between [illegible] fall, and fall and spring [illegible].

[illegible] parison with U. S. weather [illegible] three or four days ahead I [illegible] many readers—millions in [illegible] beside. Last year I was 10 [illegible] off on the great Japanese [illegible], this year I named the exact date of the August hurricane [illegible] floods, the earthquake predictions have been more than realized, but the end of those disturbances is not yet.

I look for several big ones in the next six months. I look for a long spell of fairly warm weather extending well into December, one exceedingly cold snap accompanied by a severe cold storm near the end of November.

Then, rain and more rain in December, but genuine lasting winter weather not until about January 5th to 15th. Watch out for a monster fall of rain or snow on or about January 15, just a short thaw and then another bad storm. Whether these are rain or snow, no one can tell 24 hours ahead as the current of air hot or warm or cold these storms encounter makes them rain, snow or sleet.

As January bids us goodbye and February comes in, the ground hog will beat his deepest cavern for another six weeks sleep. I say "deepest cavern" as the last six weeks of winter will be much worse than the first.

Much ice will cover the ground, but the many very warm spells for a day or two at a time will interfere greatly with a market crop of ice. There will be plenty and thick enough but as a rule not of a steady, solid kind.

About February 20, you will find a storm upon us long to be remembered. If snow, all travel will be at a standstill, if rain, a flood may be expected.

March will come in like a lion and go out like a lioness, no lamb like weather in March 1925. Colds of a severe nature followed in many cases by pneumonia may be expected when care is not taken. The planetary conjunctions and relations one with another will have a tendency to cause much sickness among the careless.

When the spring equinox arrives conditions will be right for an early spring in New England, a late one in the South Atlantic states with about the same kind of weather, reversed, on the Pacific coast.

Keep these predictions where you can compare them with the U. S. Bureau and write me the result of your comparison.

CHECK-UP OF 68 CARS AT KU KLUX GATHERING

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, Sept. 21.—Members of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and their guests, invited and uninvited, attended a klovention or klavern or something like that, in a field on the banks of the Quinebaug river, in the rear of the Charles Williams farm, west of upper Maple street, in the Ox-bow region Saturday night.

Somebody spilled the beans relative to the gathering and by 8 o'clock, the hour at which the program was scheduled to begin, there were as many people and their machines by the roadside as there were knights and their guests in the field far back from the ordinarily deserted highway.

A local man acting as a ku klux guide, did appeared from his post at the corner of North and Maple streets as a horde of spectators bore down upon him and no more was seen of him during the evening, except by those who went into the meeting, though not invited, and stayed through it, taking note of what was said and what was done.

A check-up of cars that entered the field was made in practical completeness and a list of local people who attended the meeting carefully recorded, for the information of thousands who will be interested in knowing who was there from among the residents of this community. The reaction from this, it was openly stated Sunday will be the withdrawal of patronage from all nrms or business enterprises that were represented in the meeting. Summed up this attitude appear to be "We cannot and will not give out business and our money to people who are openly plotting against us and without any ground whatever describing us as unworthy citizens."

In fairness it must be stated that very few really prominent Danielson people attended the meeting, though numbers of concerns were represented by partners or employes.

Sergeant Field, in charge of the Danielson state police barracs, and Officers Williams, Comstock and Keith were on duty in the highway, at the entrance to the lane leading to the meeting field durmg the course of the gathering. They had little to interest them other than listening to the good natured raillery going on among the crowd watching the Ku Kluxers and their guests. There was no disorder no disturbance. The majority of the spectators were chiefly concerned with getting the numbers of the cars of the Ku Klux attendance and checking up the local men who went in, either after giving a pass word or presenting a card—in learning who among the people they live and do business with hate them best. They learned that by careful and persistent picketing maintained until the last car came out of the Ku Klux meeting places. The observers were fully appreciative of the fact that the meeting was perfectly within the rights of those who attended it and wholly a peaceful and legal assemblage. What they wanted to know was who went in.

A majority of the cars that drove into the Ku Klux meeting place bore registrations indicating that they came from Norwich, New London and other New London county towns. There was a sprinkling of cars bearing Rhode Island and Massachusetts number plates. A few of the machines are owned in Danielson. A total of 68 cars carried people to the meeting and 200 or 400 as various reports have it.

Transcripts of talks made at the meeting covered the familiar ground of the Ku Klux creed relative to religion and schools and 100 per cent. Americanism. One Danielson young man who spent 5 months overseas, much of that time in the trenches, after listening to what was said, having slipped around the guards in the darkness of territory with which he was mort familiar than they and getting within ear-shot of the doing, said: "I have taken off my American legion button and put it in my pocket. I guess I am a poor American. I wasn't born in the United States, just on Dyer street, in Danielson."

Spectators crowded about the exist from the lane to the highway, as the klan cars emerged, just before 11 o'clock after a session that had latsed about three hours. There was a little flurry as a klan guard made a remark that didn't set well with one of the spectators and the spectator volleyed back, in no uncertain terms, what he thought of the klan and its principles. But the police squelched the interchange at once, and so ended an interesting light with a huge fiery cross flaming in the fields to the west.

Saturday night's meeting wasn't a good thing for Danielson people or their peace of mind. Outsiders learned too much about who belongs to the klan here and the things said at their meeting, which netted, it is understood, about 20 new members for the hooded organization, though no hoods or gowns were worn at any time during Saturday night's proceedings. The majority of all of the people of Danielson, of all classes and creeds, regret the bitterness that already is finding expression over that particular meeting. Perhaps this majority will have force and influence enough to help everybody forget what can be nothing less than a breeder of ill temper and discord.

Delegations from the Women's Relief Corps, Dorcas Rebekah lodge and Killingly grange with other friends and relatives were in attendance at the funeral services Saturday afternoon, for Mrs. Ida E. Page at her home on Maple street. Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Baptist church conducted the services. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

The citizens' committee in charge of the organization of the Citizens' National bank has taken a further step in this direction by appointing three subcommittees. Chairman M. H. Geissler has been appointed a committee of one to represent the citizens' committee in going over the assets of the old bank to decide what assets the new bank will accept. This committee will have two other members, yet to be appointed. One member will represent the stockholders of the old bnak and the other will represent the comptroller of the currency.

A committee of three has been appointed to devise methods of buying the bank building and equipment. This will cost approximately $184,000. Several plans have been considered, among which are to have the new bank acquire the property, paying for it; to have the new bank acquire title to the property by getting some outside party to take a large mortgage; and to see if a holding company could be organized to buy the property and lease it to the bank.

A third committee was appointed, to make arrangements for correspondents in other cities for the new bank and to interview candidates for executive officers of the new bank.

The second and third committees are not empowered to act, but will report back at a future meeting of the committee of the whole.

At the Congregational church Sun- day, still without a resident pastor, Rev. F. B. Richards occupied the pulpit. Sunday school at noon, and at 6 o'clock the Y. P. S. C. E. held a meeting with James Gifford leader. The subject was "Organize to get things done." It was announced that the first meeting of the Ladies' Social circle is to be held in the chapel Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. A. W. Clifford of North Weymouth will give a miscellaneous program.

At St. Mary's church masses were celebrated at 7, 8, 9.15 and 10.30 o'clock.

Rev. N. B. Burton of the M. E. church preached on "Religious Education" Sunday morning.

Sunday morning at the Baptist church there was prayer in the church study at 10 o. m.; prayer in the choir room at 10.25; preaching service at 10.30, subject, "Keeping Faith With Ourselves." At the session of the Sunday school at 12 o'clock Minot Horne gave his address on Ocean Park. Christian Endeavor at 6.30, when plans for the year were presented. At 7.30 p. m. the sermon subject was "The Joy of Living."

Twenty-five candidates make up the high school football team that concluded a week of intensive training Saturday with another similar week to go. In the squad are nine former letter men, which makes an excellent necleus for the eleven. Coach O. F. Smith has about two weeks to whip his team into shape for the opening game with Bartlett High of Webster, Friday, Oct. 4th. The following Friday Plainfield will come to Putnam. Beyond this the season's program has not been announced. A heavy veteran line will probably be seen at the season- opener. There are several candidates for the wing positions, including two new pupils at the school—Leslie Bonney, formerly of Worcester, and Ryeburn Lynch, last year at Courtelotte High. It is expected that Captain Prichard, last year's quarterback, will hold down a position in the back line. Cartier of last year will also be behind the line. Valentine at center is a strong player. Barber, last season's guard, is out for a backfield position. If not successful, he will find a place in the line. The team's most encouraging aspect is the number of last year's players available and the size of the recruits.

Bales of cotton have been brought to Putnam preparatory to starting the No. 1 and No. 2 mills of the former Manhasset Manufacturing company's plant by Powdrell & Alexander, Inc., of Boston. The concern will make yarn for the Paco mills at Danielson. Nothing will so delight the ears of the citizens of Putnam as to hear the whirr of machinery in this big plant, closed for over a year. The woolen and worsted mills in Putnam and surrounding towns are showing improved business and in some instances are running to capacity. There has been a rumor that a Putnam cotton mill is to begin operations shortly, but this has not been verified, although there are signs of life about the plant and repairs are being made. By the time Putnam has a new bank it is believed that the business outlook will have changed considerably and an era of prosperity will result after the recent depression.

Charles Rita of Putnam is to succeed his brother, Joe Rita, as manager of the stand at the Providence railroad station. The latter is to return to Italy and was in Putnam Friday and Saturday bidding friends goodbye. He was married while in the army but has not yet been able to bring his wife and children to the United States.

The Putnam branch of the Salvation Army had a busy week end. The Worcester Salvation Army band arrived in Putnam Saturday afternoon and gave a concert in Odd Fellows' hall.

At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon Major Thomas Seaver of Hartfrod and his divisional staff were in charge of dedicatory exercises of the new Salvation Army home on Union street, over which Commander Evangeline Booth raised the American flag and the army flag early this summer. There was music by the army band, brief speeches by the major and members of his staff and by those in charge of the Putnam barracks. Also a service of singing and prayer.

In the evening there was an old-time Salvation Army meeting, the band again participating.

Jessamine chapter, O. E. S., held a special cmomunication at Masonic temple Saturday afternoon. Grand officers of the state were present and made their annual inspection. There was initiation, followed by a social session, and a supper served at 6 o'clock. Worthy Matron Mrs. Hattie K. Watson, assisted by Worthy Patron James McCoullough, were in charge of the meeting. The grand officers complimented the chapter on its work during the year. It is unusual for a meeting of this kind to be held in the afternoon, but it was arranged to suit the convenience of the visiting grand officers.

Miss Helen Kennedy, a nurse at the Day Kimball hospital, is spending two weeks' vacation at her home in Lowell, Mass.

The woman's board of the Day Kimball hospital is to hold a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms Wednesday, preceded by a meeting of the executive committee.

WESTERLY

The republican caucus for Westerly will be held this (Monday) evening to elect delegates to the convention to be held in Providence Thursday, Oct. 2d, to nominate a candidate for governer and elect a town committee for Westerly, to hold office until the next biennial election or until their successors shall have been organized. At this caucus a chairman and clerk are to be named, and beside sending delegates to the state convention, delegates are to be named to the Second Rhode Island representative district.

Following the adjournment of the town caucus, there will be held caucuses of the First and Second Westerly voting districts. There is a strong probability that the republican caucus this year may resolve itself into two caucuses, one for the presenting of nominations this (Monday) night and one Thursday of this week for balloting in case of contested nominations. If only one person is named for an office Monday night then that person shall be deemed the party nominee, to be voted for in the regular town election, Tuesday after the first Monday in November. If more than one person be named for an office, any one of the candidates so named or any voter in writing may request a vote by ballot. In this case the chairman and clerk certify the names to the chairman of the town's committee and ballots are then prepared for the second caucus. At this second (voting) caucus the clerk of the caucus shall check the voting list of Westerly. The polls at the second caucus are opened at 2 o'clock and remain open until 9 p. m.
